Secondly, the tribulations that come to us as a result of God having to chasten us. This class of trials is not the kind that go to our credit. On the contrary, the necessity for them should make us hang our heads in shame. Our entrance into the kingdom is not dependent on the increase of this kind of tribulation, but rather on their decrease, because the necessity for it grows less as we become more perfect in our walk and conversation and as we draw closer to God.

There is a third class of tribulations, however, different from either of the above, which we may call volitional trials, because it is in our own power to choose whether we shall suffer them or not: and these are the tribulation which particularly affect the question of our entrance into the kingdom. These are the "tribulations which come because of the word," of which Christ speaks in the parable of the sower. Let us illustrate by an incident which has had its counterpart in fact many times.

There is to be a meeting for the proclamation of the truth; it is the manifest duty of every sister and brother in the community to support such an effort, at least by their presence; the night of the meeting turns out to be exceedingly cold; Brother Brown, sitting in his easy chair in his warm, comfortable home looks at his watch and realizes that it is about time to start for the meeting. He goes to the door to see how the weather is; the icy blast makes him close it quickly; he begins to reason with himself as follows:

It is a pretty cold night, and it is a good distance to the meeting, and one is apt to catch cold riding on the cars a night like this; and besides, I don't feel so very good anyway, and I think I can get just as much good by staying home and reading something on the truth.

So he goes back to his easy chair and reads about those who have "come out of much tribulation, and washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." And he thinks to himself, "I am one of those: I would stick to Christ and the truth if it led me to prison and to death;" forgetting that at that very moment he has been weighed in the balance and found wanting. And he falls asleep in his comfortable, easy chair leaving the work of the truth to those whose devotion to it leads them to sacrifice their own comfort and convenience in order to serve their Master.

Now here is an illustration of volitional tribulations. Brother Brown had an opportunity to serve the Master and accept the trial that accompanied it. He could accept or reject it. It was a matter of deliberate choice, a test of the sincerity of his love for the Master. And so every day of his life the believer in things small and great, trifling and important, is called upon to make decisions for or against the truth. Decision in favor of the truth generally carries with it some tribulation, small or great as the case may be. It may be some slight disadvantage, some stigma, some ridicule or discomfort; but it is always a matter of choice; we can, like Brother Brown in the illustration, choose the easy way, and follow the lines of least resistance down the slippery descent to final destruction. It is the sum total of these decisions that tells the story of probation and decides our destiny. These are not the kind of tribulatinos that make us sad and gloomy. We rejoice in them, knowing that they are the means of our salvation in conjunction with our faith. How many are there who are suffering the deserved chastisement of God or the bodily ills that are the lot of all mankind and imagine they are suffering for the truth's sake, while at the same time, by deliberate choice every day they are evading these tribulations that come because of "the word."

May God help us all to cheerfully accept these and rejoice in them, knowing that it is well pleasing to him. With this attitude we will overcome the tendency to self-pity, and will rather rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer for Christ's sake.

"They Spake Often One to Another"

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS OF THE ONE FAITH:

AFTER ONE long year of suffering, and in spite of all that loving hearts and willing hands could do, my husband fell asleep January 21, 1921, and now gloom and clouds hang heavily over me. Yet amidst it all I hear a voice saying, "Fear not; for I will never leave nor forsake thee." We know the day will break and sorrow and sighing will be done away with. No longer will we watch beside our loved ones and hear the awful words, "He is dead." I look forward not far in the distance when we will hear the shout and know that our Lord has come to claim his own, and if we are faithful these cares and afflictions will soon be forgotten in the presence of our Master and all the loved of earth.

May God give me strength with the help of your prayers to bear up and do what I can in the vineyard of the Master.

MATTIE E. RIGEWAY.

DEAR BROTHER BROWN:

A FEW days ago I wrote a letter to The Restitution. It was so good that week I just had to express my appreciation to the Editor, writers and all who help to make it what it is. Now we have just read, and reread the issue of February 15th, and it is so good we feel like expressing our thanks to you. The poem on the first page is so true and full of exhortation. How sad it is that we in some way so often turn away from Christ, when we refuse aid or sympathy to one of his followers.

Thinking perhaps that what we do is too little, and waiting for some big opportunity which comes to very few. It was the servant with the one talent who was rebuked for not using it.

Dear brethren, we all have one talent: let us use it for the Master. "Good Company" is rightly named for it is good in the superlative degree. The blood of Jesus is necessary as Brother Blessing shows to a resurrection to life, and it is absolutely necessary that it be applied to us if we would share in the first resurrection. The Lord's Side—who can read the contrast between God's and man's without seeing the blasphemy of attributing to a sinful source the pure work of the Holy Spirit (may be I am a little partial to this author). "The Father's House." How well this is shown to be the household of faith, and not mansions in the skies where saints must be taken if they inhabit them.

"Man a Compound Being." An unanswerable argument: showing the real death and decay of the whole man. Now comes something we would like to skip, but in view of God's command we cannot. It seems to me there is no doctrine preached which is so calculated to lull men to sleep as the hope held out to them that in a better age, and a time of much less trial, and temptation, they may attain unto "eternal life." Of course they will take all they can get of this life, and wait for the (supposed) greater chance.

The editorial reply to this teaching, also that of our former editor, completely annihilates this "false hope," and those who read must see the truth of the word of God on this doctrine. Only one thing we will say. There is a great deal said about the equality of God's ways. Now I wish to ask a question: If God called one man to pass through severe trials and sorrows and great tribulation in fighting the good fight of faith with all the fruits of sin and host of sinners combatting him: and then called another man giving to him all the pleasures and comforts of this age, and then in another age hedged him around so that no sin nor sinners could reach him by placing him under Christ's beneficient rule with no sorrow nor trial nor temptation but with peace on earth and good will among men to win the crown of life, would any one call that equality? If the unjust of this age are resurrected to be given another chance, what have they to battle against? Nothing. For they are in God's kingdom with satan (all adversaries of God) bound and Christ reigning. We who in this age are running the race for eternal life entirely by faith. It seems to me if there is inequality in God's dealing with men it would be in doing as the advocate of "Fair Chance and Larger Hope" would like to have him do. But God is not mocked: whatsoever a man soweth that shall he reap (Gal. 6:7).

"The Bible"; The Berean Letter; The Young People's Page are good and timely words. So The Restitution seems nearly perfect, does it not? Now dear Brother Brown our prayers have ascended to God ever since we heard you were to become editor, and that he would guide you by his Spirit through the word, and that our paper would be entirely consecrated to his glory and to the upbuilding of the elect, and a light which may lead many outside to investigate and lay hold on "eternal life," and we do pray that it may never be a medium through which the flesh is lfted up and exalted. We have loved and honored Brother Huggins for his unselfish unremunerative devotion to the paper for ten years, without asking any reward for his service to us. May God bring him great blessing and happiness in this life and eternal life when Christ comes. Our heart goes out to you also because you have taken up the work. I have thought so much of Brother Donaldson's words, "We love Brother Huggins because he made enemies" and he so truly says you will also, and we will love you more for that. The greatest teacher this world ever had was crucified. The disciple is not above his Master. First pure, then peaceable. Contend earnestly for the faith (Jas. 3:17; Jude 3).

In love and thankfulness,

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. KNAPP.

Remarks

IT SEEMS strange to me to sit down and write my monthly report when it shows such inactivity. I do not believe it is right for Christians to worry over things, unless it be neglected duty. I have made it a rule to do the work that belonged to me, the best I could and as promptly as possible, and leave results with the Lord. If we stand ready and are willing to do the work we are best fitted for, and circumstances arise over which we have no control; why worry or fret? It is either the things that come in the natural course of human events, or else the Lord has intervened for some good purpose, that for the present we may not see the reason.

I have tried many times to meet the calls of brethren, when it seemed that things would get in the way to prevent, till both would become almost discouraged, when finally everything would seem to finally point that way, all at once, and circumstances arise that would make it perfectly easy to meet the call . And I have noticed that when I did get there, the results were good and the proof stood out that I got there when the Lord willed, and no sooner. And why not? If Jesus as our High Prienst is officiating over the church, and directing the work, may we not expect him to direct us in the best way?

But just now I believe our greatest concern should be about ourselves. We preach to the world, and point out to them the crisis they are facing, and at the same time I do not believe we realize as we should what we are facing. Just let your mind wander over the world for a moment, and in this mental survey, when your mind has once more rested at home, ponder over what you saw and learned; then ask yourself the question, Is the church of the living God much more, if any more prepared to meet the crisis she faces than the world is prepared to meet the crisis it faces? Why not now begin, by every one doing his part to bring the church up to the highest point of spirituality and efficiency!

There is not a society in the world today that is not hampered and hindered by selfishness. There are a good many things in the church today that should not be; but I venture to say, that if someone should start a plan, or even suggest a plan to remedy these wrongs, that a crusade born of selfishness would be started against it immediately, and notwithstanding the good book teaches against such things, it finds fertile soil and thrives wonderfully in the church: not only in the apostate church, but in the true also. Today we need to be a united people, to withstand the onslaughts of evil now extant in the world. We are facing a crisis peculiar to ourselves. Are we ready for the conflict? If not, let us go into a camp and begin training, for the bombardment.

The world is trying to destroy the citadels of truth; trying to destroy our confidence, in God, and his word, and the dear Lord no doubt had his mind on these days, when he said, "pray that your faith fail not." Brother, sister, are you strong enough to stand in these days of doubt, and greed, turmoil and evil of every description? Do you not need the love and sympathy the smile and cheering words, the hearty handshake of the brothers and sisters of like precious faith, to help you over the rough places of these evil days? May I ask you, reader, here, if when you read this you will not sit down quietly, and take a deep look down in your heart like Paul did, and see if you can discover any selfishness or hatred, in fact any of the evil that belongs to the old Adam: and if you make any such discovery, begin at once to purge it out. Oh how quick this would bring peace and harmony among all. Is it worth the effort? I certainly think so; in fact it is the only way that insures us a place in the kingdom of God. This being true, should we allow anything of a selfish nature to exist among us? I have often said, and I wish to repeat that no differences existing between brethren could remain for any length of time if each one would do his part. There is not an evil in the whole category of sin that has not been forgiven by our Lord; and if we are his followers we should be as quick and ready to forgive each other. In fact he has set the example for us to go by. The only question is, are we going by it, and if not, is it not about time we were?

Some of the more potent evils among us comes to my mind; I mean those things that have caused the most division; and I think of the easy ways by which they could be remedied. But because I know that the old Adam is still alive, I feel reluctant here to mention them. When Jesus comes he must find his bride without spot or wrinkle; and in all candor if he should come now, would he find the present day members of his bride in that pure condition? When we go back to the days of the prophets, we find them lamenting and heavy of heart for Israel's condition, and continually warning them of impending doom. Then why not we be heavy in heart for like conditions and stand in fear and trembling for the outcome?

We know if we should invite a stranger to our house we should not like to find things upside down; what would be his first impression of that home no difference how nice we might talk, or how conversant we are with current events? He would still think we were not very orderly house keepers. So when we invite people into the household of faith, if they find it improperly kept, our soundness of doctrine will never remove the doubt of our being first class house keepers. No; we must get our house in order, then people will be much more satisfied when they see how orderly we are. What a blesing it would be if such a harmonious condition existed. The whole world is in disorder, but we are not of the world.

I may sometime risk the viturperations of the body by suggesting a few evils which are existent and their remedy, and await your commiserations later. In the meantime, however, let us strive with self, and see what success we have, and if successful to a degree we may have more hope of success when taken up as a whole.

I am now with the brethren at Palmer, and hope to have something good to say that will be encouraging in my next report.

ALMUS ADAMS.

GOLDEN TEXT: Acts 3:6

A CHRISTIAN'S PRAYER

My God, to me thy mighty power impart,
Enlighten, comfort, sanctify my heart;
Sweeten my temper, and subdue my will,
Make me like Jesus, with thy spirit fill.
I want to live on earth a life of faith,
I want to credit all the Bible saith,
I want to imitate my Savior's life,
Avoiding lightness, gloom and sinful strife,
I want to bring poor sinners to thy throne,
I want to honor and love Christ alone;
I want to feel the spirit's inward power,
And stand prepared for life's important hour.
I want a meek, a gentle, quiet frame,
A heart that glows with love for Jesus' name;
I want a living sacrifice to be
To him who died a sacrifice for me
I want to do whatever God requires,
I want my heart to burn with pure desires;
I want to be what Christ my Lord commands,
And leave myself, my all, in his dear hands,
O Lord, pour out thy spirit on my soul,
My will, my temper, and my tongue control.
Lead me through life to glorify thy grace,
And in the Kingdom see thee face to face.

THE LOVE OF MONEY

GODLINESS WITH contentment is great gain, for we brougth nothing into the world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment let us be therewith content. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some covet after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness, fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hath professed a good profession before many witnesses.

Without passion or prejudice, or the spirit of narrow mindedness, let us try to get the viewpoint of Jesus upon the question of possessing money.

Today we are living in a money-mad world. The world has put the pursuit of gain, and indulgence in luxuries it will buy, above integrity of character, and not only so, but even among so-called Christians it is quite common to judge a person by his financial standing. Today one can not expect to be a "leading church man" unless he is wealthy; and it is only members of this class who are chosen as deacons and elders.

Still in the face of all this I do not believe that Jeus despised money as money, any more than he despised food and homes or education. What he did despise was the exaltation of money into first place in life. He saw that the rival of God in men's hearts is money: therefore he cried that we cannot serve both God and mammon. In the parable of the rich young man, he asked for his money to feed the poor; only because he wanted the young man's life, and saw that his life, otherwise so fair, was in the grip of his money. In other words it was the "love of money." You no doubt have noticed recent newspaper comments regarding a certain young man of Massachusetts who renounced a bequest said to be over one million dollars, and you have also noticed that in nearly every case he was called foolish or worse, showing that the public mind is such that it is difficult to entertain any other thought than that money is the principal thing.

So long as money thus rules life Jesus will be kept from the throne of sovereignty; that is the clear teaching of the Bible. Money as a servant always must have a place; money as master challenges the very kingship of God. Our young people must be taught, chiefly by the practice of our elders: that money is not the principal thing. To love God, have faith in his Christ as our wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption to obey his commands looking for his return is the thing that counts. And money, no matter how much of it we possess, can buy none of these things.

We have referred to the rich young man: just think, Jesus offered him the career of all careers, but he would not have it. No wonder the Master said to his disciples that it was as hard for a rich man—a man relying on his riches—to enter the kingdom of heaven, as it was for a camel to pass through a needle's eye, but how fine the whole subject was summed up by Jesus when he said, "Ye which have followed me, in the regeneatino when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one tha hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands—any and all kinds of worldly idols—for my name's sake, shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit eternal life."

We think it strange that the rich young man did not accept the offer of Jesus, but what about ourselves; what about our children, are we accepting his offers? are we serving him in fact? We read, "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." Is that our attitude? Are we putting God and his Christ above all else? Truly we are living in a time when great events are shaping on every hand. What a time to be a servant of the living God; to be a co-worker with his Son our Lord; to love our fellow man; to constantly watch for the Christ from heaven. He who today puts Christ first is living the life that counts.

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."

"LET YOUR LIGHT SO SHINE"

THE WHITE light houses along the coast and the bays that mark the channels of shallow waters, have an unfailing interest to almost every observer, because of their self-adjustments and variety of sounds and signals they give out; all of which are carefully watched by the sailors; they also are marked on all sailing charts, for the guidance of the masters of vessels.

There is one light house in especial not far from here, a rugged, weather beaten, stone structure; it is built on an immense rock. The keepers there are an old man—about as rugged and weather beaten as the house—and his wife, of whom it is said, they have not been off their rocky island for years.

A recent visitor is said to have remarked, "Are you not afraid to live here in this dreadful, lonely place"? "No," replied the old man, "we are not afraid. We never think of ourselves, we only think of keeping our lamps burning brightly and keeping our reflectors clean and polished, so that those in danger out on the sea may be saved."

And as it is with the keeper of the lighthouse, so should it be with us, our duty is to keep our lamps filled and burning, our light brightly shining, reflecting the glorious love of God as shown in the person of Jesus Christ our Lord; so that those who are lost in the sea of the world may come unto him and be saved.

The world is dark and dreary, full of the sharp edged rocks of unbelief, the waters of sin are constantly lashing themselves against the rocks and retreating with the maddened foam of disobedience, merely to come forward again with greater fury. The pall that overshadows the world, causing the dense darkness, is the lack of reverence to God, even overshadowing "the light of the world," which is Christ Jesus. The mariner's chart, showing the dangerous rocks, the shoals, the sand bars that wreck life is the Bible. The keepers of the light are the saints of today, those "who know in whom they have believed" and are looking for the return of their Lord from heaven.

As we go through life let us always carry with us the lamp of faith, filled with oil of hope, showing through the darkness the brilliant beams of love. Not at any time thinking of ourselves, but constantly of the person who is sailing so dangerously near to the sharp rocks.

And this through our own strength of perfection? No! But through the righteousness and perfection of him who died for us, even Jesus Christ.

AN EVERY DAY EASTER

ON THE 27th of this month we will celebrate Easter Day, and the thought just came to me how many people really realize the full significance of the resurrection so sweetly portrayed in this season of new life, when we see all nature budding forth, throwing off the inactivity of the cold wintry months and taking on the glorious blossom of life, born of the heat and life of spring.

We know that Jesus rose from the dead and became the first fruits of them that sleep. Of all those who sleep? No; of those only who are living the resurrected life. When we went down into the watery grave of baptism we buried the man who lived for the pleasures of the world and came forth, was resurrected to walk according to the spirit. And so we read, "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God; when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

Lesson VII: The Father and Son -- By Robt. G. Huggins

III. JESUS CHRIST IS MEDIATOR AND ADVOCATE

Mediator, "mesites" in the Greek, means a "middle man" (Young); a "go-between, an internunciator, a reconciler" (Strong). The word applies to a person who endeavors to reconcile parties at variance. In its application to Christ it denotes that he is a "middle man" between God and man for the purpose of bringing about peaceful relations. Since this transpired "while we were yet sinners" (Rom. 5:10), his mediatorship is exercised in behalf of sinners and the world. But after reconciliation has been effected Christ becomes our advocate, "parakletos" which word means "an intercessor, consoler, comforter" (Strong). The Latin word "advocatus" has the same meaning, as Cicero bears witness. In agreement with the etymology of the word, John limits the office of an advocate to the church when writing to his "little children" (not sinners), by saying that they have "an advocate with the Father" (1 John 2:1). As a mediator Christ pleads with the world and reconciles them to God, exercising the office of a "middle man"; as an advocate he intercedes, consoles, and comforts the church, performing the functions of a priest.

IV. POSTHUMOUS PROBATION UNSCRIPTURAL

Lexicology shows, then, that God has made ample provision for the salvation of those in the world as well as for those in the church. Believers in posthumous probation admit that when a man learns and obeys the gospel he is inducted into the church whose Head and Priest is Christ. It is further admitted that he has a "fair chance" now, and enjoys adequate means of salvation, and that his probation in the church under the priesthood of Christ is complete and final. For him no posthumous probation is claimed. But in reference to the world we are asked to believe that God has been negligent and improvident. Since God has failed to provide for them the saving means of the gospel now, to be fair, they argue, he must grant them probationary opportunities hereafter. Now it is true that many people do not know the gospel and that they have no means of learning it (Matt. 11:25; 13:11; 2 Cor. 3:4). God does forbid the preaching of the gospel to many (Acts 16:6, 7). The withholding of the gospel from people, however, instead of being fortuitous, transpires according to Christ's mediatorial functions. Even judicious men will not commit great riches into the hands of anybody (Luke 16:11): think you, then, that God will commit in trust "the glorious gospel" to the riff-raff of the world (1 Tim. 1:11, 12)? Any "good thing toward the Lord God of Israel" in any man, though it be small as an atom, is seen and properly credited (1 Kings 14:3). Infinitesimal germs of goodness have saved many a sinner from summary destruction (2 Chron. 12:12). God acknowledges "every good thing" in every man (Philemon 6). As he gladly gives credit to whom credit is due, let him explain why so many people in the world, although provided with the means of salvation, are not saved. While he is no respecter of persons he is a respecter of character (Acts 10:34). "In every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness is accepted with him" (vs. 35). "Neither hath the eye seen, O God, besides thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him. Thou meetest him that rejoiceth and worketh righteousness" (Isa. 64:4, 5). If any man in any nation under the sun is not "accepted with him" it is because he does not obey the conditions required. "The Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither is his ear heavy, that it cannot hear; but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear" (Isa. 59:1, 2). God is within his right when he has "mercy on whom he will have mercy," and "compassion on whom he will have compassion" (Eccl. 8:3; Dan. 4:35; Rom. 9:15). To whom, then, will he extend "mercy," and to whom will he show "compassion"? In "every nation" those who "fear him and work righteousness are accepted of him." This is the assurance for him that "waiteth for" the Lord—"thou meeteth him." From all who obey not these reasonable requirements he "hides his face." He only honors those that honor him (1 Sam. 2:30). He cannot bestow honor in advance of humility (Prov. 15:33). He "resists the proud" (1 Pet. 5:5, 6). He only draws near to those who draw near to him (Jas. 4:8); he only "makes known" the truth to those friends in whom he can confide (John 15:15); he only whispers the secrets of his covenant into the ears of those who fear him (Psa. 25:14). "To a man that is "good in his sight" he always gives "wisdom, and knowledge, and joy" (Eccl. 2:26). What about others whom he leaves without "wisdom and knowledge"? They are not "good in his sight"; he "lightly esteems" them (1 Sam. 2:30). They are dogs to whom he will not entrust his "holy" truth; swine to whom he will not cast gospel "pearls" (Matt. 7:6, 7); the lost from whom he "hides" the gospel (2 Cor. 4:3). They do not hunger and thirst after righteousness, and consequently are not filled (Matt. 5:6). They have never asked for the truth, so it has not been given to them; they have never sought it, so they have never found it; they have never knocked so the door of knowledge has never been opened to them (Matt. 7:7). "For every one that asketh, receiveth: and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened" (Matt. 7:8). The promises of God which avouch that they shall find him who seek for him "with all the heart" (Jer. 29:13), place the advocates of the impeccability of all who do not "find the knowledge of God" (Prov. 2:1-5) in a most serious predicament.

For the enlightenment and warning of the innocent who have not fathomed the anti-scriptural depths and ramifications of posthumous probation; for the sake of those who have not perceived the disparagement, derogation, and odium which this dogma casts upon God, his ways, and his means of salvation, besides its disguised denial of Christ's mediatorial office, we say briefly:

(a) Posthumous Probation Belittles Angelic Agency.

"Thousands of angels" Psa. 68:17). "ten thousand times ten thousand" (Dan. 7:10) are about God's throne ever in readiness to obey his commandments (Psa. 103:20). They have a deep, abiding, and joyful interest in the salvation of sinners (Luke 15:7, 10), and are "sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation" (Heb. 1:14). If under this celestial ministry any "who shall be heirs of salvation" fail to get a chance, surely the angels are not to blame.

(b) It Slurs the Work of the Holy Spirit.

"He will reprove the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment" (John 16:8). The plea of frailties and infirmities, which is so often and eloquently dilated upon as affording reasons why we must have a posthumous probation, is a slanderous libel on the ministry of the Holy Spirit which "helpeth our infirmities" (Rom. 8:26). In the light of Matt. 12:32 it would seem best to hesitate before speaking against the Holy Spirit.

(c) It Emasculates the Word of God.

Indited by the Holy Spirit the word of God is "quick and powerful" (Heb. 4:12). Powerful as fire and a hammer (Jer. 23:29) it never returns to God void. "It shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it" (Isa. 55:11). Received, it is always "able to save" (Jas. 1:21).

(d) It Denies the Sufficiency of Christ's Mediation

Christ is in the throne-room of heaven as a "Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins" (Acts 5:31). Invested with "all power in heaven and in earth" (Matt. 28:18), with "angels and authorities and powers made subject to him" (1 Pet. 3:22), he has unlimited saving power for all who are worth saving. "He is able to succor them that are tempted" (Heb. 2:18), give mercy and grace to all that "need" (Heb. 4:16), "can have compassion on the ignorant" (Heb. 5:2)—the very people for whom posthumous probation is claimed, because, it is alleged, they have been shown no "compassion"!; and is "able to save them to the uttermost that come to God by him" (Heb. 7:25) Panteles, here translated "uttermost," means "perfect, complete" (Young). "Eis to panteles," says Adam Clark, "means to all intents, degrees and purposes; and always, and in and through all times, places, and circumstances; for all this is implied in the original word: but 'in' and 'through' seems to be the particular meaning here because of what follows, 'he ever liveth to make intercession for them.'" Must some people have a more "able" intercessor and one whose mediatorial prerogatives reach further than "the uttermost," in order to have a fair chance?

(e) It Charges God with Incompetence

The God who hears the cry of little babies (Gen. 21:17, 20) and in whose favor little children bask before they know the Lord (1 Sam. 2:26; 3:7); the God whom no one ever sought in vain (Isa. 45:19) and who himself ardently seeks worshippers (John 4:23); the God who sees and cares for the ones he wants on earth, even if there be but one in the whole world (Isa. 60:11,12) *; who purges his floor (Matt. 3:12) and destroys kingdoms without losing the "least grain of wheat" in all these national and stupendous judicial inflictions (Amos 9:8, 9)—can any one complain against this God who has never, in a single instance since the world began, failed to respect the lowly" (Psa. 138:6)? Could posthumous probation give a better angelic ministry, a more powerful word, a more efficacious mediator, a more competent and efficient God?

V. The Destruction of the Devil

Christ was "made of a woman" (Gal. 4:4), was in the likeness of sinful flesh (Rom. 8:3), and was finally crucified through weakness (2 Cor. 13:4). In partaking of "flesh and blood" Christ came into contact with the devil, "that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil" (Heb. 2:14). "For this purpose was the Son of God manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil" (1 John 3:8). In the Scriptures the devil always stands related to "flesh and blood." The word "devil" comes from the Greek word "diabolos," which means calumniator or accuser (Cruden). And of "satan" Cruden says: "This is a mere Hebrew word, and signifies an adversary, an enemy, an accuser." Neither of these terms allude to an immortal, personal being apart from man, as is commonly imagined. Christ's acquaintance with the devil came through his partaking of "flesh and blood"; and he destroyed the devil in himself "through death" (Heb. 2:14). If the devil were a being separate from "flesh and blood," how could Christ's participation in that nature have anything to do with him? All sin proceeds from the desires of the flesh, and originates in the heart of man (Matt. 15:19; 1 John 2:16; Gal. 5:19, 20; Rom. 8:7). Deny that the provlicities and gravitations of human nature are earthwards and you are unable to explain how the immolation of "flesh and blood" on the cross in the person of Christ destroyed the devil. If the devil were a strong, immortal, personal being distinct from man, it needed the angelic nature, not "flesh and blood," to cope with him; it needed life, not "death," to defeat him; it required strength, not weakness, to destroy him. Besides, if the devil were an immortal being he is as indestructible as God himself, and his physical extinction would be an impossibility. The devil Christ destroyed "through death," spoken of in Heb. 2:14, is explained to be sin in two ways:

(a) To "destroy the devil" in this text is called the sacrifice of sin in equivalent passages (Heb. 9:26; 1 Cor. 15:3; 1 Pet. 2:24; 1 John 3:5).

(b) "Him that hath the power of death," the equivalent of "the devil" in Heb. 2:14, in interchangeable passages is declared to be sin (Rom. 5:12, 21; 1 Cor. 15:21, 56; Rom. 6:23; Jas. 1:15).

The Living Creatures

An Exposition of Ezekiel One

THIS IS a subject on which very little appears to have been written from the standpoint of the truth, and indeed not much from men of letters in the orthodox school. So considerable study is necessary to fathom the apparently hidden meaning of the creatures, and what they respresent scripturally.

In the first place, there is no doubt that they are highly figurative. This fact is evident from the words in the first chapter which states, "The heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God" (Ezek. 1:1). We must always be careful when we wish to interpret Scripture whether the language is literal or symbolical; and in this case there is no doubt it is symbolical. We read in verse 5 that they had "the likeness of a man;" and again in verse 6 that they had "four faces and four wings." These appendages we do not associate with a man, and so we find they are composite creatures representing something of a compaound nature.

CHERUBIM

To get an idea of what these living creatures represent we must turn our attention to the cherubim. This word in the Hebrew is "kerub," and means to lay hold of; to hold fast; signifying a medium by which God and man are held fast together. We get an illustration of this meaning by the cherubim which overshadowed the ark in the tabernacle. We read: "And when Moses was gone into the tabernacle of the congregation to speak with him, then he heard the voice of one speaking unto him from off the mercy seat that was upon the ark of testimony from between the two cherubim, and he spake unto him" (Num. 7:89). This defines a medium through which God could communicate with man (Moses); but the next question is, how do the cherubim stand in connection with the living creatures of Ezekiel? In Ezek. 10:20 we are told: 'This is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel, by the river of Chebar; and I knew that they were the cherubim." So Ezekiel himself tells us what the living creattures are; they are the cherubim: that being the case, we can proceed with our study on a sound basis.

In Rev. 5:6-8 we read of four beasts and twenty-four elders. The word "beast" was not well chosen by the translators, as the Greek word from which it is endered is "zooe," meaning living ones. This translation is given in the Emphatic Diaglott. It is admitted by Bible students that the four beasts represent the saints, as embodied in the four camps of Israel (Num. 2:3 10, 18, 25). Thus the four living ones represent the whole of the body of Christ or the church, and in turn the living creatures or cherubim represent in concrete form the manifestation of all created life on earth. To arrive at this conclusion, let us take the first feautre of the creatures.

MAN

Man represents the highest form of life on earth: he was made in God's likeness (Gen. 1:27). This in itself stamps him a creature higher than any other. Paul explains Christ's relation to the living creatures when he says: "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. 2:5). Here we have Christ in the form of a man officiating as a mediator between God and man, which position was prefigured by the cherubim overshadowing the mercy seat of the ark in the tabernacle. And so we find that one of the four faces was that of a man. Ezek. 1:10 harmonizes with this description.

The next face was that of a

LION

The lion represents the king of wild animals, and is symbolical of power. We read: "And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not, behold the lion of the tribe of Judah, the Root of David hath prevailed to open the book and to loose the seven seals thereof" (Rev. 5:5). This shows us clearly that the Scripture represents the lion as a symdol of power, which Christ will possess in an unlimited degree when he comes with all his holy angels. The temple which will be erected when Christ returns to reign has this figure very clearly defined. Ezekiel tells us in his description of the inner or circular building of this marvelous edifice in giving his specification of the entrances to the building: "And it was made with cherubim and palm trees, so that a palm tree was between a cherub and a cherub, and every cherub had two faces, so that the face of a man was toward the palm tree on the one side; and the face of a young lion toward the palm tree on the other side; it was made through all the house round about" (Ezek. 41:18, 19). Thus the man and lion faces signify Christ as the one who procured salvation for himself and all his faithful followers, symbolized in these two faces of the living creatures.

The next face we see is that of an

OX

This animal represents patient labor (Psa. 144: 14), and is the king of domestic animals. The ox was used to plough the ground and afterwards to tread out the corn. It is also the animal used under the law as a sin offering, thus typifying Christ's sacrifice for mankind. Its position as a burden bearer is also exemplified in it being employed to bear up or carry the molten sea, or laver recorded in 2 Chron. 4:4. Here we find the molten sea was supported by twelve oxen. And lastly

THE EAGLE

This is the king of birds, thus with the three foregoing creatues embodying the whole of animal creation. The eagle represents keenness of vision, and the altitude to which it can ascend shows how man can rise even to the divine nature. Its vision is so keen that it can detect its prey lying on the earth, when it is so high we cannot see it. We read in Job: "Doth the eagle mount up at thy command and make her next on high? she dwelleth and abideth on the rock, upon the crag of the rock and the strong place. From thence she seeketh the prey, and her eyes behold afar off" (Job 39:27-29).

We have now enumerated the four component parts of the cherubim, but we find still another meaning. The Hebrew word "kerub" is sometimes transposed into "rekub," and in that form is traslated "chariot." This word is frequently used to represent the saints, of whom the cherubim are representative. We read: "The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels: the Lord is among them, even at Sinai, in the holy place" (Psa. 68:17). Again, "The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet, the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation" (Nahum 2:3). Here again the chariots represent the saints, which are in turn incorporated in the cherubim. This word will also throw some light on the much debated subject of Elijah's ascension to heaven. The word chariot used in 2 Kings 2:11 is translated from this same word "rekub," and signifies that Elijah was removed from Elisha's sight by the medium of cherubim, and not a literal conveyance with horses. It is thus used in many places too numerous to mention.

WHEELS

This word, though somewhat ambiguous, clearly refers to the spirit (Ezek. 1:20, 21). We notice the eyes were in the wheels (Ezek. 1:18), and where the eye was, naturally the intelligent spirit of life was. These creatures you will notice were restless, "running to and fro," and John describes them as "resting not day or night" (Rev. 4:8), showing by this incessant motion a plentitude of life as associated between the purity and effulgence of beauty of running streams and fountains in contrast to stagnant pools which are dirty and repulsive.

In conclusion, these creatures are representative of all animal life, and illustrates how God uses the materials he has created in the earthly form to create and perpetuate creatures of a divine form which will eventually possess the earth when it is cleansed from all evil and uncleanness.

An Enquiry

AS THIS seems to be a time for asking questions I wish to make an enquiry: When I was a little girl in Sunday School, and from all so-called orthodox teachers and from many writings, I was told that satan or the devil was once an angel of light, standing before the throne of God, with Michael and Gabriel: and that he became ambitious to rise to equal power with God: and so started a rebellion, in God's presence, and induced many immortal angels to join him; and Michael the first angel became commander-in-chief for God's army composed of those immortal angels, who turned not from God: that a terrible battle ensued and satan and his followers were cast down from the battlements of heaven where God is, into this earth where man resides. The proof given is Rev. 12:7. Now turning to Rev. 1:1 and 4:1 we find that the things which Jesus showed to John were styled things which must yet come to pass'; showing that the things themselves were yet future, also in Rev. 4:1 they are styled things which must be hereafter. As this revelation was given to John near the year 96 A. D., the battle in heaven had not taken place at this time and satan or the devil was yet in heaven with God.

Now in words of another, "I would like to ask who tempted man for three or four thousand years before the devil was cast out of the heaven of God?" Will someone please answer?

Another question: If there was war in heaven between immortal angels of God, what assurance have we that there may not sometime be another rebellion started there?

Yours for the truth,

FLORA A. KNAPP.

It is needful, in these last trying times, to keep reminding ourselves that God knows and God cares. Bear this in mind constantly and you will be satisfied and happy.

Marriage

"Marriage is Honorable in All"

AT THE residence of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burke, Mr. June Bryan Campbell, and Miss Evelyn S. Burke both of Palmer, Neb. The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock. P. M. in the presence of the bride's family, the ring service being used. Bryan is a young man of good character, well spoken of by all who know him, which of itself means a great deal. Evelyn is a quiet unassuming girl who has lots of friends and possesses the qualities to make a good and pleasant home. She was baptized by the writer three years ago and started early in life to serve the Lord. We hope her wishes will be gratified and her husband become one of the bride of Christ. They moved at once to their farm where they are now at home to their friends. May the Lord's blessing attend them all through their united life.

Others

Lord help me live from day to day,
In such a self-forgetful way,
That even when I kneel to pray
My prayers shall be for Others.

Help me in all the work I do,
To ever be sincere and true,
And know that all I'd do for you
Must needs be done for Others.

Let self be crucified and slain,
And buried deep; and all in vain,
May efforts be to rise again,
Unless to live for Others.

And when my work on earth be done,
And my work in the kingdom begun,
May I forget the crown I've won
While thinking still of Others.

Others, Lord, yea, others,
Let this my motto be,
Help me to live for others,
That I may live like thee.—Selected by Sister Klingenstein.

Brethren, Zion is awaking from its slumber of ages. Jesus said on one occasion, when speaking to the Jews: "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." The above notes tell us plainly that we have reached the end of that period of down-treading of Jerusalem, and that the end of the Gentile times is upon us. Are we ready to meet the Master and with him take up the great work of inaugurating that new and blessed era of universal peace?

Cleveland Miscellanies

The friends of Samuel Holmes, of Homestead, Pa., will be glad to learn that on Sunday, March 13th, he was baptized into Christ in "full assurance of faith." The obedience of this friend is good news to the brotherhood on earth and the angelic host in heaven.

The Young People's Society held its annual election of officers on Friday evening, March 19th, and elected the following officers:

President—Lawrence Gibbs.
Vice-president—Myrna Lang.
Recording Secretary—Harry Titman.
Treasurer—Eugene Miller.
Corresponding Secretary—Viola Stroud.

Easter Sunday, March 27th, the following were baptized, all having previously made "the good confession" intelligently: Florence Linsenmeir, grand-daughter of Sister Annie Nutt; Kathryn Keiffer, called alone and blessed, like Abraham (Isa. 51:2); and Stella Larkins, daughter of Brother and Sister Albert Larkins. We give these young people a cordial welcome among us, as we have come to know them favorably through the Sunday School and other auxiliaries of the church.

The regular meeting of the Fellow Helpers' Society was held on the evening of March 11th, at the home of Brother and Sister Gibbs.

The meeting was opened with a song, and prayer by Brother Tabor. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. A very interesting letter was read by the Secretary from Brother Pottorf, on behalf of Sister Buckman, of Salem, Ohio. The meeting was then turned over to the leader, Brother Griffiths, who gave a very interesting and instructive lesson on "The Living Creatures of Ezekiel 1," which will appear in The Restitution as a separate article. The meeting was closed with a song, and prayer by Brother Bert Meermans.

The Signs of Christ's Coming

THIS SUBJECT has been uppermost in the mind of his followers at intervals, during the period of his absence. The church of Thessalonica were exercised with this subject, thinking he would come in their day: but Paul gave them a principle of interpretation which if kept in mind, will do much to avoid error. He says, "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition" (2 Thess. 2:3).

The same principle holds good today as in their time, because there are several things to transpire yet before he comes. Nothing, however, but large events are noted in the Apocalypse. The world-wide peace league of the nations symbolized by four angels, holding the four winds (Rev. 7:1), is only as yet in its formative condition.

The United States, who is the originator of the league (and who has been compared to a woman who has deserted her offspring), has yet to take her place as leader in the movement to prevent the horrors of anothed world war. The league has become a necessity to prevent bankruptcy and chaos. The United States cannot prosper until Europe is in a condition to buy and take her products, neither can she collect what she has loaned to Europe. The peace league is a necessity. The league will function, preventing war, until "the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads" (Rev. 7:3).

Then when peace is established, some parties will think the millennium has come. Then we may look for activity by the Interchurch Movement, the World Alliance, and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ.

Let the watchers, then, notice their movements in "making an image to the beast" (Rev. 13:14).

The beast being a symbol of the Roman empire, the image is a likeness of the Roman empire in its Christian phase, after the passing of Paganism, and before the rise of the papacy.

The reader can find the model to which this image is a likeness in "Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," chapter 27, A. D. 380. "Baptism and orthodox Edicts of Theodocius."

This prophecy finds its counterpart in history before Christ comes, therefore its importance in discerning the signs of his coming.

Now concerning the seven last plagues, are they poured out before or after he comes? If the first plague is in the past, so is the "image" and mark of "the beast;" for we read: "And the first went and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them that worshipped his image" (Rev. 16:2). This proves that the image and mark of the beast are present events when the first plague is poured out.

Now let us notice this prophecy in the order in which we find it given in the book:

1st. The two horned beasts of the earth causes an image to be made to the first beast, and enforces its worship, and also the reception of "the mark of the beast" is demanded (Rev. 13:14-18).

(2nd.) The Lamb stands upon the Mount Sion, and after certain events, and declarations transpire. The Lamb publishes the three angel messages; the third message says: "If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels and in the presence of the Lamb" (Rev. 14:9, 10).

This testimony threatens the worshippers of "the beast and his image" with the seven last plagues, giving them fair warning. We also learn that it is done in "the presence of the holy angels and of the Lamb."

3rd. The seven last plagues are poured out after the Lord comes, because Christ and his brethren do the work.

Wait on the Lord and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land: when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it (Psa. 37:34). Let the saints be joyful in glory: let them sing aloud upon their beds. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two-edged sword in their hand; to execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishment upon the people; to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute upon them the judgment written: this honor have all the saints, Praise ye the Lord (Psa. 149:5-9). "Because he hath appointed a day, in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead" (Acts 17:31). "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world" (1 Cor. 6:2).

The seven last plagues contain the full measure of God's wrath, as it is written: "For in them is filled up the wrath of God" (Rev. 15:1). In them his wrath is exhausted; for they are the "seven last plagues."

And inasmuch as Moses, a type of Christ, was God's servant to execute judgment upon the gods of Egypt, it follows logically that Christ will execute God's judgment in this dispensation; as it is written: "For as the Father has life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of Man" (John 5:26, 27).

I will close this article by noting some testimony in Rev. 15:

The overcomers of verses 2 and 3 sing the song of Moses and of the Lamb.

"Then sang Moses and the children of Israel this song unto the Lord, and spake, saying, I will sing unto the Lord, for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea" (Exod. 15:1). Here the type finds its antitype in the overcomers of whom in verse 3 we read: "And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou king of saints."

In verse 5 the temple is opened, the spiritual temple, the antitype of the literal temple composed of the overcomers of verse 2, who sing the (victorious) song of Moses, and of the Lamb. Out of this temple comes the great voice ordering the pouring out of the plagues. The present dispensation in under the angels, but the world to come is to be put under the saints (Heb 2:5).

This whole scene of chapters 14 and 15 demands the presence of Christ.

1st. he stand upon Mount Sion with the 144,000.

2nd. the overcomers sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb.

3rd. The temple is opened, the material of which are in the grave until Christ comes, and from this opened temple comes the great voice ordering the angels to pour out the vials (Rev. 16:1). And in Rev: 15:8 we read: "And the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God, and from his power; and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfiled." Now if the plagues are mostly in the past; is it a fact that man could join the church during the time since the first plague was poured out? Error is illogical and blind.

The pouring out of the plagues (chap. 16:2): "And the first went and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them that worshipped his image." Now where is the man that can point us to the image and mark in the past?

"And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man." In symbolic language the sea represents people, restless, and in commotion (Jer. 51:42). "The sea is come up upon Babylon: she is covered with the multitude of waves thereof." And again we read in Luke 21:25: "And upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity: the sea and the waves roaring." But under the second vial the sea quits its roaring, and becomes still "as the blood of a dead man." Trade stagnation.

When in all the world did this symbol find its counterpart? This article is written to clear the ground for the understanding of the true signs of Christ's coming.

Watch

I NOTICE that some of our friends who with us have a common interest in the coming of the Lord, have decided that the great event to which the whole creation moves will occur at a certain date in the near future; and are advertising that "millions now living" will be witnesses of the same. It is to be hoped that they are right, for things are getting very much mixed on this planet, and we need some one with authority to straighten matters out.

I give little credit myself to such reckoning for sundry reasons; and then the Master has left us instructions concerning his coming to watch. He did not say reckon, he said watch. It would have been just as easy for him to have given instructive figures that could have been relied upon; and then all we would have to do would be, a simple sum in arithmetic, if we only knew where to count from; and then there could be no possible doubt or error. But the order left to the "servant" is to "watch," not to count, for if the "Master of the house had known when the thief would come" by reckoning, he could be ready on time without waiting alert, and continually.

The process of reckoning usually resorted to, is grounded on certain historical theories, propounded by well meaning men at various times, but who were not in a position in their day to conceive the whole situation, and their zeal and desire overrode their patience Thus we have the "fifth monarchy men" of the seventeenth centry, among whom may be classed Bunyan and Milton. Then Priestley and the reformers of his day in the eighteenth century. In the nineteenth century we had the "Millerites," and others. One of the recollections of my boyhood in the sixties, was reading a pamphlet by a church of England clergyman, entiled "The Coming Struggle" in which he looked forward to the queen of England then reigning (Victoria) going up to Jerusalem to "lay her crown at Jesus' feet." Think of that and consider that the Kaiser was her grandson.

True that in watching we have to attend on the one hand to the "written instructions from headquarters" in regard to the past, as well as regard the future, but these instructions are embodied in the word of God; the Bible. If one had to hark back to all that had been written on the subject of the coming of the Lord, outside of the revealed word, very few of us would ever be able to post up on the subject, and make a living besides. But fortunately at the present day Bibles are everywhere in all languages, and anyone can read up the instructions, and put themselves on a solid spiritual basis for the collection of other informtaion, and as "scribes instructed in the kingdom of God bring forth things new and old."

The trouble is that some of us know too much about a lot of things not worth knowing, and the real essentials of wisdom and knowledge either get crowded out, or get belittled in the dim distance. Wisdom does not consist in the quantity of knowledge acquired, but in the ability to sort out the different kinds of informtaion, and put each kind in the proper place, at the proper value. All kinds of information are useful, rightly adjusted, just as the wider the scope of vision, the better the view, provided that "the eye is single." that is in modern language "having the right perspective."

Now in regard to our position as watchers for the arrival of the coming era, we may not be in doubt as to what to watch for as signs of the dawn of the day. First there is the return of Israel to their home land supported by some of the leading nations with all their wealth and power. This is an event so remarkable there is hardly any use dwelling on it, it has ceased to be a matter of faith and has become a matter of sight. Every Bible reader knows how largely this marvelous event looms up, in both the Old and New Testaments. Even the details are mentinoed of the slow "mobilizing," "not by haste or by flight," and with the prestige of the "nations of the isles that will wait upon her." Scattered through all the daily papers are notices time and again how new things are stirring in Israel's camp and thus we watch, comparing the event with the far reaching prophecy.

That kings and prophets waited for,
And died without the sight.

Other events are now happening that I would like to call to the attention of Restitution readers, with the editor's kind permission, but for the present enough.

Remarks

I AM pleased to give a report of our work during the month of February. I gave no report for January because I did no preaching during that month, as myself and family were visiting the homefolks in Texas during the holidays. We enjoyed the trip very well; the only thing that happened during the time that we failed to enjoy was our youngest daughter had the pneumonia. We arrived at home January 29th, and began work at Kennard on February 4th as given above. I have really enjoyed the work during the month. At Kennard we had the pleasure of meeting with a few on Friday evening (4th) in a study of the Father's word. The Saturday evening meeting was greatly enjoyed; also the Sunday meetings.

I could not remain any longer at Kennard, having previously arranged to begin a meeting at Gladbrook, Iowa, the following Tuesday evening, so I went over with Bro. Krogh, of Blair, after the afternoon meeting on Sunday at Kennard. We left Blair for Gladbrook on Monday the 7th. I intended to go by way of Taing, Iowa. But after learning that I could stop off at Marshalltown making the route a little shorter, I just could not resist doing so, even if I was forced to call for 1454 which is Brother Marsh's phone number. We had to call for him three times and I guess he was a little reluctant about answering a call at 12:10 at night on account of the snowy weather. And again he may have guessed that no one but some poor helpless preacher would be so brave to call him at that hour. Well I was soon at his and Sister Marsh's home wrapped in peaceful slumber. Shall I ever be guilty of calling him again at that hour of night? Just wait until I happen there again at that hour, and then I will tell you.

We were on time at Gladbrook. Found a nice interested crowd present. I continued with these brethren and friends until the morning of the 14th, when we left for Waterloo where meetings had been arranged for. We had a pleasant meeting here. It was held at Sister Moore's home just west of camp ground. They made us feel at home, and so long as we live there will be a remembrance of our trip to Waterloo. There is a fine opportunity there to do much good, and we trust the brethren and sisters will do all in their power to push the work there.

From Waterloo I went to Eagle Grove, where Brother A. M. Jones lives. A meeting had been planned for Woodstock, some six miles from Eagle Grove. At this place I have given so far eleven sermons. I am still here with good interest. A report on the meeting will be given later. Let all who are interested in the Father's purpose work toward building up a character that will exert an influence in their own lives, and those around them.

Obituary

Death in Adam; Life in Christ

LEONIDAS A. HEATON was born in Clinton County, Ind., April 13th, 1852. He was married to Frances Fewell, September, 1871, and to them was born one son, Wm. J. Heaton. This wife died in March, 1874. He was married to Anna A. Floyd, Feb. 5th, 1876, and to them were born three sons, Forest, Walter L., and Oliver P. One of these Walter L. died in 1911. He was baptized when a young man and united with the Baptist Church. He has been afflicted for four years and suffered greatly, especially in his last days, and clung to life with great tenacity. At the last he was resigned to the inevitable, and fell asleep to rest from the fatigue and burden of his worn and weary life. He was a good husband and father and filled his mission to the best of his ability from his view point and as he understood the principles of moral responsibility.

He died early Sunday morning, March 6th, 1921, aged 68 years, 10 months, and 23 days. He leaves his companion, three sons, Wm. L. Heaton, of Indianapolis, Forest and Oliver P. Heaton of Elwood, Ind., and two brothers and one sister, James H. Heaton of Marion, Ind., Nelson Heaton and Mrs. Hannah Pruitt, of Michigantown, Ind., to sustain the loss of a husband, a father, and a brother. He also leaves 17 grandchildren, and many other relatives.

Funeral services were held from the home of his son, Forest, in Elwood, Monday, March 8th, at 2 o'clock, and burial made in the local cemetery, where the father and husband rests to await the establishment of Christ's kingdom and the blessing that comes through the promise made to Abraham and his seed.

GOLDEN TEXT: 1 Corinthians 15:20.

RESURRECTION

If I in thy likeness, O Lord may awake,
  And shine a pure image of thee,
Then I shall be satisfied when I shall break
  The fetters of death and be free.
I know this stained tablet must first be made white,
  To let thy bright features be drawn:
I know I must pass through the darkness of night,
  To witness the coming of dawn.
    I shall be satisfied.

O I shall be satisfied when I can cast
  The shadows of nature all by;
When this dreary scene from my vision has passed,
  And there is an unclouded sky.
I feel that bright morning is now drawing near,
  When earth's fairest objects will fade;
'Tis then in thy likeness, O let me appear,
  In glory and beauty arrayed.
    I shall be satisfied.

To see thee in glory, dear Lord, as thou art,
  When thou shalt have come again,
My spirit is longing, and even my heart,
  It sighs for the dawn of that day.
Then when on thine image in me thou hast smiled,
  And called me forth from the dust,
The arms of my Father encircle my child
  In the realms of the pure and just.
    I shall be satisfied.

RESURRECTION

THE POWERS of the Christian religion stands or falls with the truth of the resurrection of Christ. This is true for the resurrection is the greatest of all miracles in Christ's miraculous life. The apostles made the resurrection the centre of their faith for they constantly claimed that the time for the bestowal of the great reward would be "at the resurrection of the just."

Christianity links our present mortal life with the blessed immortality that shall be ours at the coming of Jesus our Lord, by a resurrection out from among the dead, or should we be living by changing the nature of our existence from mortal to immortal.

In the person of Jesus the Christ God hath created a perfect being, "the Lamb without spot." 'This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." and it is God's desire that humanity accept this resurrected Christ as its wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification and redemption, renounce the world and its pleasures and come unto him, and live, yes, live continually through a resurrected life.

Matthew shows the picture of two sorrowing women at dawn making their way to the tomb of Jesus. There is an earthquake; the angel of the Lord rolls away the stone, and he thus speaks to the women, "Fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here; for he is risen, as he saith, Come, see the place where the Lord lay."

Now notice the difference between faith and superstition. The woman of faith "departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear (trust) and great joy, and did run to bring his disciples word." To these good women the angel of the Lord simply brought joy and comfort, but to the superstitious soldiers who guarded the tomb he was a cause of fear and trembling. These soldiers at the behest of the then ruling powers, stated that the friends of Jesus came while they—the soldiers—slept, and stole away the body of Jesus. But Jesus was seen many times before his disciples received that great command "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

What does the resurrection of Jesus teach us? It lets us know that the life beyond the grave is a real life. The same Jesus that died, rose. He knew himself. He did not rise to a life in which he remembered nothing of his former existence. He remembered his own earthly life, he remembered his friends, and his greatest thought was for their peace of mind and future welfare by remaining faithful to him. He did not lose interest in the purpose of his life but with renewed zeal he impressed the necessity of faith in him and obedience to the will of the Father upon his followers.

During the time that Jesus was on earth after his resurrection, he ate food, as well as prepared it for others, he talks and listens to others talking, he walks, he feels and allows others to touch and feel him. He is not a ghost, but a man in form with the mortal nature removed and solely guided by the spirit, and such shall we be if we but trust; having explicit faith in Jesus as the Christ the Son of God.

CASTING PEALRS BEFORE SWINE

THE OTHER day I held conversation with a lady, a devout Roman Catholic, who at one time had been a collector for the nuns. That is, she had a section or neighborhood over which she went at certain periods soliciting money toward the upkeep of an old people's home controlled by the nuns of the Roman church.

The subject of our conversation was disease, old age, death, and among other things she said, "Mr. Donaldson, while I was collecting, of course I had entree into the home, and some of the scenes I there saw beggared description. Old men, old women, frail, decrepid, not able to take care of themselves, hardly able to feed themselves, were all about. It was a free institution and of course only the poorest of the poor entered it. The sights I saw would make you think that most of the inmates would almost welcome death, but not so, there was not one there but that at the slightest provocation wanted the doctor so he could administer medical treatment, thus attempting to lengthen life. From my earliest childhood I had been taught that death was the door through which we entered into glory, but my visits to the old people's home, I must admit, seriously shook my faith. Here was a class of people, who one in health would think would welcome glory, still not one of them wanted it. I wonder why!

I told her why. Even calling her attention to the nearby cemeteries, Greenwood, Woodlawn etc., where thousands of thousands of dollars were spent in erecting monuments over the dead, showing that the people actually did not have faith in the things they professed to believe. But even with her own well founded doubt, I do not believe I made the slightest impresion on her mind, for I noticed that while she was doing the talking everything was all right, but when I backed up my own line of argument she became uneasy and desired the conversation closed. Surely, "there are none so blind as those who will not see."

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, APRIL 12th, 1921. NUMBER 14

The Morning

Watchman, tell us of the morning,
Is the darkness almost gone?
Will the night of sin soon vanish?
Is the dawning hastening on?

Do you see the radiant pillar?
Does it guild the distant east?
Is Israel from his bondage
Full soon to be released?

The afflicted sons of Jacob,
Gathering from each distant shore—
Are their trials almost ended?
Will peace bless them evermore?

Has the day-star yet arisen?
Is it beaming from afar?
The emblems of our loving Savior,
"The bright and morning star."

Is the fig tree now budding?
When Abraham's wanderings sons return;
Will "Jerusalem the golden"
Rise from the ashes in the urn?

When the dew drops down on Hermon,
With the early and later rain,
Will the earth be then like Eden?
"The rose of Sharon bloom again?"

May we hope soon to see the Savior?
Is he due now to appear?
Come, bring the longed for jubilee,
Or the grand sabbatic year.

Lord, we are watching, waiting,
For the nobleman's return;
May the light go on increasing,
Oh may it brightly burn!

J. E. HOGARTH.

In order to bear fruit that will glorify your heavenly Father you must abide in Christ.

It is possible for those who really are willing to reckon on the power of the Lord for keeping and victory, to lead a life in which his promises are taken as they stand, and find them true.

The Restoration of Israel

Zionism a Fulfilment of Prophecy

THEODORE HERZL, the founder and peerless leader of modern Zionism, the Moses of the modern exodus, passd away on July 4th, 1904, in the forty-fourth year of his life, a martyr in his devotion to the movement. His last official word was a declaration of unswerving allegiance to Palestine as the goal, the only goal of Zionist endeavor. Despite the death of the leader and the succession of the territorialists, the movement continued to grow. Under the new leader David Wolffsohn, the centre of gravity shifted from diplomatic activity, in which Herzl had excelled, to practical work in Palestine. Apart from the fact that this work in and for Palestine gave a necessary and natural outlet for Zionist energy, the most recent events have demonstrated as well the political value of this work. For not even the dictates of necessity and justice have so forcibly brought home to the world the claims of the Jewish people to their national homeland as the actual achievement of Jewish energy and self-sacrifice in Palestine itself. Zionism came before the world not merely as an unanswerable plea for justice; it stood before the world also as an accomplished fact, accomplished not yet, it is true, on the necessary scale, but on a scale sufficiently large to testify to the capacity of the Jewish people for self-restoration and self-determination.

I believe a brief review of the forms and achievements in which Zionism has found practical expression will at this point in the narrative prove interesting. Towards the end of the year 1913, the octopus of Prussian imperialism, now finally crushed, made an attempt to strangle the free national spirit of Palestinian Jewry. It invaded the sanctuary of Jewish life, the schools, and through the agency of the "Hilfsverein der Deutschen Juden," it set out to force the German language on those schools in place of the native Hebrew. The Hilfsverein was rich and powerful. It maintained schools of various grades in Palestine, and the Technical Institute of Haifa, around which the issue was drawn, was practically in its control. But the national instinct of the Jews of Palestine warned them that violence was being plotted against the very soul of their life and they rose up and declared a national strike. The Hilfsverein schools were left with less than half of their pupils, and with an even smaller proportion of their teachers. Palestinian Jewry declared its national cultural independence, and placed the guardianship of its educational interests with the Zionist organization. Nothing like the language struggle of 1913 against influences emanating from Berlin demonstrates so convincingly the unique character and spiritual strength of the Jewish life in Palestine. That struggle was essentially a national uprising against a foreign aggressor. Whence came this powerful national spirit? It came from the fact that the Jews possessed in Palestine a national economy of their own. Like every healthy national economy, that of Palestinian Jewry has its roots in the soil of the land, in a Jewish peasantry which makes up the physical backbone and spiritual fount of its distinctive institutions and form of life. It is this national economy in Palestine which gives Zionism its force of reality.

Oregon [illegible]

The 16,000 tourists or more whom Palestine used to attract every year prior to the war might view in that little land of ancient and sacred memories, new and wonderful sights which spoke not of the great past alone, but also of a new future. The Jewish agricultural colonies in Palestine, only a little more than a generation old, were a sight as imposing as the spot where Jacob wrestled with the angel. They are a triumph of Jewish will and idealism over appalling obstacles, and a living proof of the ability of the Jewish people to redeem its ancient land. There are about sixty of these villages, scattered all over the country from Djemama in southern Judea, near Hebron, to Metulah in upper Galilee, not far from Damascus. They cover a total area of 110,000 acres, and before the war had a Jewish population of over 15,000 souls. They range in size from mere outposts, like Metulah in the north, to compact little towns like Petah Tikwah (The Gate of Hope) with its population of about 3000. They have forced the soil of Palestine to resume its ancient renowned fertility. In Judea the culture is for the most part of the plantation type, made possible by a scientific irrigation system, the vine, almond, orange and olive forming the principal yield. The wine cellars of the colony Rishon-le-Zion are among the largest in the world, and its vines have securely established themselves in the world's markets. In the northern colonies, wheat and other cereals and vegetables of all kinds are now growing in profusion. This land, almost treeless a generation ago, supposed to be sterile and hopelessly arid, has been shown to have been treeless and sterile only because of man's misrule. It has been shown to be capable of becoming again a land "flowing with milk and honey." Some indication of the progress of Jewish agriculture in Palestine is afforded by a single fact among many others. In 1880 the colony of Petah Tikwah (founded 1878) had a value of less than $6,000. Today it represents a value of more than $3,000,000. These Jewish agricultural villages, with their modern buildings, equipment and forms of life, constitute a remarkable proof of the vitality of the ancient people and of the ancient land, as well as the future of the one for the other.

Two of the many significant developments in these agricultural villages deserve special mention. They both bear testimony to the cilivizing capacity of the Jewish settlers. First is the system of democratic government in each colony by which, through their Vaads, or elected committees the Jewish farmers administer their local public affairs. The second is the Jewish police organization (Hashomer) which guards the property and labor of the Jewish settlers, and whose members have won wide fame as expert horsemen and riflemen. The Jewish judicial tribunals are frequently appealed to even by the Arab population, while Jewish watchmen have been in demand by the non-Jewish settlers in the country .In the Jewish colonies of Palestine there are no Jewish criminals; because everyone, old and young alike, is led to feel the glory of his race and his obligation to carry forward its ideals. The new Palestinian Jewry produces instead of criminals great scientists like Baron Aaronsohn, head of the "Jewish agricultural Experiment Station" at Athlit, the discoverer of wild wheat, and creator of five new species of wheat and of barley, especially adapted to the climate of Palestine; great pedagogues like David Yellin and Eliezer ben Jehuda, who after some thirty years of the most grievous labor have produced six volumes of his "Dictionary of Modern Hebrew;" chemists like Chaim Weizmann, chairman of the British Zionist Commission in Palestine and rightly called the Joshua of the new return of Israel; and craftsmen like Boris Shatz, the founder of the Bezalel school of arts and crafts.

The Coming King

Blessed be the king that cometh in the name of the Lord; peace in heaven, and glory in the highest (Luke 19:38).

JUST NOW it seems to be in order to suggest a panacea for the world's unrest and confusion. Our leading statesmen business men, are able to give an accurate diagnosis for the prevailing unrest; but so far none are able from a human viewpoint to offer a remedy that will cure this terrible malady, bringing about a condition of universal peace and happiness, acceptable to all and essential to the health and prosperity of humanity.

Recently I have been reading H. G. Wells' "Outline of History"; this fact has impressed itself upon my mind; that whenever a crisis in human affairs has arisen which seemed to threaten the continued existence of a people or nation, a leader of men has assumed control, establishing a government that has partially relieved the tension, checking temporarily, the wave of anarchy sweeping on apparently about to engulf all.

This exigency has only changed the disease; it does not neither can it eliminate it. This disease is epidemical; it breaks out again in greater virulence, until it reaches the stage as now when the whole of humanity is affected. These spasmodic efforts of humanity to heal itself is like the condition of mankind at Jesus' first coming.

The same condition existed then as now but with this difference: Then it was local: the Jewish nation in particular; now it is universal: all nations, whether Greek, or barbarian, wise or unwise, bound or free. The views of unrest and dissatisfaction has inoculated all, and we cry out in our distress for a skillful physician to adminster an antidote.

The virus or poison which affects humanity is sin. There is only one man in the whole history of the human race who can administer an antidote for this. John the Baptist introduced him to humanity as "The Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."

This man Jesus quickly and correctly recognized the needs of humanity. He saw that old conditions must pass away: a new condition must of necessity be introduced by entirely removing forever the old. Man has been trying to patch the old with the new, each new patch only reveals the worn out condition of the old suit of clothes man has worn for 6000 years. Listen to Jesus the wisest of men: "And he spake also a parable unto them: no man putteth a piece of new garment upon an old, if otherwise then, both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old." This is wonderfully plain, you cannot amalgamate the new with the old.

Again, sin ferments: the more we try to restrain it, the more intense does it work until it gets beyond control and defies all efforts to restrain it. Let us listen to Jesus again, "And no man putteth new wine into old bottles, else the new wine will burst the bottles and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish. But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved. No man also having drunk old wine straightway desireth new; for he saith the old is better." Hence brethren, do you not with Jesus recognize the solution of the present problem unsolvable by humanity? viz., the old bottles cannot hold the new wine. Let us get Jesus' thought a little more on this subject.

Just before his death he repaired with his associates to a quiet room and there instituted what is known as the "Lord's supper." "He said unto them, with desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer. For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God. And he took the cup and gave thanks, and said, Take this and divide it among yourselves. For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine until the kingdom of God shall come." Paul elucidates this for us; he says, "After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood; this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye show the Lord's death till he comes." What to our mind is suggested by the institution of the passover?

Is it not a passing away forever, of the old conditions of slavery, in Egypt, and the introduction of the new condition of liberty and equality in the land of Canaan. What does the Lord's death mean to you or to me? In what way do we shew the Lord's death till he comes? Listen, Paul says, "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross; and having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them in it."

But Paul makes this a little clearer for us: do you mean that by his death he thereby opens up a way, or rather, places himself in a position where he has the power to destroy the old, and establish the new? "Yes, this is exactly my thought as I expressed in my letter to the Hebrews." "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that hath the power of death that is the devil."

Am I to understand that every time I break bread, I thereby acknowledge that Jesus through his death has been invested with the power to destroy forever the virus of sin, which is the devil? Yes, my fellow apostle John had this thought in common with myself: he said as you recall: "He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil."

Well Brother Paul, the light is beginning to dawn upon the density of my mind, Jesus then, to destroy the works of the devil, must remove from power and authority all the present rulers and governments and institute a new constitution and government. My beloved Peter in his wonderful epistles says so and to which I give in my epistle to the church at Colosse: "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements (society) shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." Well Paul I am feeling alarmed if these all pass away, what will take their place? God has provided for this. You read carefully Colossians 1:13-29, and Heb. 1:1-14.

Again, read Hebrews 2. The whole chapter treats on this matter: it is the "world to come whereof we speak," or as Peter says, "Nevertheless we according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness."

If my readers care to spare the time you can by reading these Scriptures learn what God will exact from this king;Deut. 17:14-20; Psa. 2:10; Prov. 14:35; 16:5; 17:7; 20:28; 25:2; 31:4, 5; 2 Sam. 23:1, 3, 5; 2 Sam. 7:12-14; Zech. 9:9. Is there one who can meet these conditions? Read Rev. 3:21; Acts 2:30; Luke 1:30-33; Mark 15:2; Matt. 19:28; Isa. 9:7; Jer. 33:15; Zech. 12:13; Psa. 132:11; Zech. 14:9.

Peter of all men knew Jesus, he said that God anointed him with the Holy Spirit and with power; that he went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil for God was with him. Who can read Matt. 9:36 without himself being moved "He was moved with compassion on them." This word compassion means "He was full of emotion, and showed it in his whole person." If you want to love Jesus read Matt. 15:32; see how this great heart goes out to the hungry crowd. Then Matt. 14:14; notice the sick so prominent in the throng. It is this same Jesus that will heal the sick again. He will open the eyes of the blind as he did when on earth before (Matt. 20:34). The lepers Christ pities; poor sin-polluted men (Mark 1:41). Jesus pities, not like us condemns men oppressed by the devil (Mark 5:19), and oh the bereaved, the widow, the fatherless who are as near to his heart as these (Luke 7:13). When our minds think about the coming king the language of Psalms 2; 45; 72; and 149 impress itself upon us. But I love to think of Jesus as of old, when the helpless, the blind, the lame, the desolate rejoiced at the sound of his footfall. How often he went out of his way to help another. No wonder Peter said, had the princes of this world known the loving tenderness and the utter unselfishness of his heart, "they would not have crucified the Lord of glory!"

"God is love," and the law of such a being is, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

While all around us in the wonderful works of God proclaim this, God has, and will in the age now dawning upon us, proclaim and demonstrate it in the person of his beloved Son, the coming king of whom God said, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased, hear ye him."

The Parables of Christ

THE MERCILESS SERVANT

THIS PARABLE was spoken to the apostles, after Jesus had instructed them regarding their duty to their Father in heaven. Having been schooled in the law and traditions, they had but little conception of the change in the teachings of Jesus from that taught by the scribes under the law. This change is plainly seen in the sermon on the mount. The chapter (Matt. 18) in which this parable is recorded begins with the question of the apostles: who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven (the heavens)? A dispute had arisen among them concerning this question so they came to Jesus for an answer.

It seems that some had magnified their importance as future rulers and desired that Jesus would designate the proper one or the one most deserving. Little did they think that this honor would depend on their work during their trial period. Paul was only able to understand this, at the end of a very eventful life (2 Tim. 4:18). They had not yet been instructed in the requirements of their exalted position as apostles (see Matt. 19:27-30). The answer to their question no doubt was a surprise to them. It was a question of spirituality. It embraced contentions and offences. Such a spirit was imbibed from the law. The answer was an object lesson of great value. A child is placed before them as an example for them to follow. It was the spiritual mind of the child that Jesus called their attention to. Their minds were to be changed and become as the child. The child had not come to the time in its life when it became dictatorial or arbitrary, contentious and offenses did not belong to a child.

The apostles had all been modeled under the law and Jewish traditions. All those traits of character must be remoulded. Little did they think that it would require a life time of trial and persecutings, to assure them even a place in the kingdom, God had promised "to give to the people of the saints of the Most High." It would require time and patience to do the work assigned them. It must be "God which worketh in them, both to will and do of his good pleasure." If they would assume the character of a child, and not "mar in the potter's hand" the Father would perform his will, and do his good pleasure in them. The trials that each would undergo in the future would prepare them for the work in the future kingdom.

In the instructions given them by Jesus the subject of forgiveness was of great importance. He had given them instructions regarding their duty to each other (verses 15-18). It seems that there was a trace of Jewish traditions remaining as Peter said, Lord how often shall my brother sin against me and I forgive him? till seven times? The answer given was complete and forceful. I say not unto thee, until seven times but until seventy times seven. The significance of this answer is that as oft as your brother shall sin against you so oft must you forgive him. Forgiveness is the scriptural measuring rod.

After the instructions given by Jesus to his apostles he declared the following parable. It would seem that his direct teaching was sufficient to fix upon thir minds the real importance of a godly life Jesus must have had a purpose in declaring this parable. It is our purpose as far as possible to reveal to our readers the lesson taught in it. It must have some connection with the instructions preceeding the parable.

Jesus begins by comparing the kingdom of heaven with an earthly kingdom. The characters found in the parable are: first, a certain king; second, two servants. This parable must have its application. In the comparison given there is but one application viz., it belongs to the kingdom age. The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a certain king. This king decided to take an account of his servants. These servants were of his own household and not the citizens of the kingdom. Those servants represent the ruling class in his kingdom. The scribes and pharisees were their representatives in the days of the ministry of Jesus. The apostles were to occupy the same privileges in the kingdom of heaven.

When the king began to reckon with his servants there was brought before him one who owed him ten thousand talents, when it was found that he had not to pay this debt the king ordered that he and his family be sold and payment be made. It is recorded that this servant fell down and worshipped the king praying for time to pay the debt. The king was moved with compassion and loosed him and forgave him the debt. This servant should have followed the example of his lord but instead he on meeting a fellow servant who owed him a small sum refused to forgive him on his pleadings and had him imprisoned until the debt should be paid.

These servants, we think represent the pharisees and their servants. It is evident that the pleadings of this servant were hypocritical and deceptive. Just the character of those who opposed Jesus and the gospel that he preached. The actions of this servant was brought to the king; he pronounced him a wicked servant and renewed his former verdict and had him cast into prison. The lesson taught in the parable is equivalent to the direct teaching found in the beginning of this chapter and is found in the last verse, and reads as follows: "So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also to you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother his trespasses.

It is evident that the parable is an object lesson teaching the supreme importance of forgiveness. We believe that the punishment inflicted upon the hypocritical servant portrays the future punishment of Jewish people when their city was destroyed and the people sold in slavery. There they will remain until this wicked people shall recognize Jesus as their king. They will be loosed from their prison when they shall say, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him and he will save us; this is the Lord: we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation. The judgment was national; the restoration must be national. This chapter (Mat. 18) carries with it a very valuable lesson. The followers of Jesus the Christ have been chosen from the wicked world and put on trial for eternal life and place in the kingdom of heaven as associate rulers.

Easter, pointing back to the resurrection of Jesus also points forward to the resurrection of those who now live the resurrected life.

Pertinent Questions

IF THE devil is a fallen angel, and all sin is caused by yielding to his temptations, who tempted that angel?

If an angel could sin without a devil to tempt it, may we not sin without a devil to tempt us?

If the devil is the cause of sin, why does Paul tell us in Rom. 5:12, "By one man sin entered into the world"?

If God created a devil, was he included in the works pronounced, "very good"?

If God could not control the devil, or failed to, and had him expelled from heaven to earth, how does he expect us to control him?

If the devil was in Eden, he must be near 6000 years old. If 6000 years old, is he mortal or immortal?

If mortal, then he must be kept alive by a special act of God's providence in order that he may carry on his work. If immortal, then we can never be rid of him.

If it was the devil who tempted Eve, why did Paul say it was the serpent who beguiled Eve by his subtility, cunning or craft (2 Cor. 11:3)?

If all sin comes from the devil, why does Jesus say, "Out of the heart proceedeth these things"? And why does James say, "Come they not even of your own lusts that war in your members"? (Jas. 4:1).

Why fear to look up the origin of the words "satan" and "devil"? The former simply means an adversary or opposer; and the latter an evil minded person.

The doctrine of the devil came from the heathen. Why cannot an intelligent people let it go back there? Selected by E. W. KNAPP.

Hobbies

THE LARGER HOPE HOBBY

Another much ridden hobby has become quite familiar to the church of late: It was at first called the "Fair Chance Theory," but is now better known as "The Larger Hope," and a travelling preacher or evangelist known as "Pastor Russell," was the father of this hobby, and he rode it most energetically during the latter part of his lifetime; and since his death it has not been idle for lack of riders. The term "The Larger Hope," implies another hope; one not so large, from which they of the larger hope have withdrawn themselves. This original or smaller hope is the one believed by such staunch and tried men of God as Brethren M. Joblin, Wiley Jones, H. V. Reed, J. M. Stephenson, Dr. John Thomas, John L. Wince, and a host of others quite as noble and worthy, to be the same hope preached by Jesus and the apostles. But this old fashioned hope did not suit Pastor Russell. It was far too small and narrow, and would not hold a vast multitude of nice, kind hearted people, which he met in the different churches and in social life, and who were doing the very best they knew how; so this man undertook the task of building a hope exactly to his liking, and plenty large enough to hold a great majority of all mankind, and quite appropriately their hope is called, "The Larger Hope." It cannot yet be truthfully called the Largest Hope, as Universalism rightly claims that distinction; but the larger hope of Pastor Russell is but an infant as yet. It is growing fast, and may reasonably expect to get there soon. It has already crossed the line of universal resurrection; and it is but a few steps more to universal salvation.

On the other hand, the defenders of the original, or smaller hope, should beware that in the heat of argument they do not mount a hobby of their own make, which may carry them astray in the direction of "me and my wife, my son John and his wife, we four and no more." Dear ones, of hopes both large and small, this subject now before is a large one, a pathway but dimly lighted, and full of stumbling blocks and obstacles, and with a fearful precipice on either side. Avoid the extreme edge; it is dangerous travelling there. Let us not quarrel and make faces at each other about such questions as just who will be raised when Jesus comes, and who will come up later; just when, and where, the judgment of the different classes of mankind will take place; just who are the unjust, and do they rise simultaneously with the saints; just at what moment the change form mortality to immortality will take place; just who are the rest of the dead, that lived not again until the thousand years are finished; and if that vast multitude live not again till the thousand years are finished, just when and where do they receive their fair chance, etc. etc. Dear ones, why not leave some of these obscure details of the resurrection and judgment, rewards and punishments, for God to decide? No doubt he can untangle the skein which to us is so hopelessly tangled. For us to quarrel over them, and permit them to cause divisions, hatred, and unseemly strife, in the presence of a jeering and scoffing world, is but to drag the precious name of God and of our Lord Jesus Christ in the mire. It is right and proper to have views on these interesting questions, and to discuss them and compare views in a kind of brotherly manner; but for brethren who bear the name of God to become angry and indulge in personalities, using bitter and sarcastic language in print and otherwise is, in our judgment, a sin in the sight of God. Brethren, let us not do so any more. We can all unite with Paul in that "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust" (Acts 24:15); but let God settle the details. And right here, dear ones, let us close this chapter on hobbies by calling attention to Paul's admonition, "Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall" (1 Cor. 2:12).

S. H. THOMAS.

Daniel's Image

ONE MORE view as to how the image is broken altogether, when the stone strikes it upon the feet. It is held by all, that the four divisions of the image, and the four beasts of Daniel seven, are symbols of the same world powers; so that what is said of the one, is equally true of the other.

Therefore I will refer the reader to Dan. 7:12 to aid us solving our problem: "As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time." That is when Babylon was conquered by Medo-Persia, Babylon's life "was prolonged for a season and time;" the same is true of Medo-Persia and Greece.

In the Revelation that was given to show future events only Rome is seen by John because the other empires were already historic. In Rev. 13:2 we find a description of Rome whereby we cannot fail to identify the symbol as applying to Rome: Rome in Daniel seven was symbolized by a nondescript animal, and the same is true here of the Revelation.

"And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion" (Rev. 13:2). Now question: Why was this Roman symbol like unto a leopard? Answer: because Rome had incorporated into her empire the people and the territory of Greece the leopard kingdom: Rome, when she had conquered the last of the successors of Alexander, imported the dragon, which was originally an Egyptian symbol.

The eagle was the first Roman symbol, but in the third century the dragon was as well known as a Roman symbol, as was the eagle (Barnes' Notes on Rev. chapter 12).

Babylon's life was "prolonged" in Medo-Persia, and Medo-Persia was prolonged in Grecia, and Grecia was prolonged in Rome: so when the stone strikes the image, it grinds to powder the gold, the silver, the brass, iron and the clay. For an illustration of this principle see the Greeks in Constantinople during Rome's world-wide dominion. In harmony with this view of the prophecy, Rome is identified here in Rev. 13:2. Not only has it the ten horns of Daniel 7:7 to identify it as Daniel's fourth beast; but it is like a leopard, Grecia, and feet like a bear, Medo-Persia, and a mouth like a lion, Babylon, showing its cosmopolitan composition which is true of none but of the Roman empire.

And now it may be asked: why is it necessary to be so lavish in in the description of this symbol? Answer: the dragon of chapter 12 is also a symbol of Rome, and the reader is liable to ask why a change in the symbol, if both represent the same empire? Rome was first pagan, then Christian, and then papal (her last phase).

In the time of Constantine in the fore part of the fourth century Rome changed from pagan to Christian, therefore a necessity of a change in the symbol. And in Daniel seven Medo-Persia is said to be another beast that the Babylonian lion; and the Grecian leopard is another beast than the Medo-Persian bear; and the Roman dreadful, and terrible nondescript beast, is another beast than the Grecian leopard. But here the beast like a leopard, is not said to be another beast than the great red dragon, because both represent the same empire.

But when we come to the two-horned beast of Revelation 13:11 John says: "And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth," etc.

Obituary

Death in Adam; Life in Christ

RACHEL LOGAN PARTRIDGE was born March 25th, 1822, in Rush County, Ind. She was the daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Frazier Logan and arrived in Marshall County, September 6th. 1836.

She was united in marriage to Silas Edwin Partridge, August 16th, 1844, and went at once to their home in Fulton County, where the remainder of her life was spent, surviving her husband by twenty-two years. To them were born four children, namely: Thomas J. S. Clinton, Samuel, and William J., who survive her, except Samuel who died in childhood. She is also survived by 18 grandchildren, and one great great grandchild.

She was converted and baptized into the Campbellite Church, but afterwards came to believe and was associated with the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. Her life has been one of honest endeavor, developing a firm but serene moral character and individuality worthy of our admiration and emulation.

Funeral services were conducted by D. E. VanVactor, from her home at one o'clock, March 4th, after which she was laid away in the Reester cemetery to rest until the great day when the jewels of earth shall be gathered into that newer and better life where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are unknown.

KEEP CLOSE TO JESUS

THE WAY at times may seem dark, but light will arise if you will but " trust in the Lord and wait patiently for him." That light at times may show hard things that is required of you, but do not be distressed. If your heart should rebel; bring your unwillingness and disobedience to him, in the faith that he will give you power to overcome, for he cannot fail. "Greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world." So keep close to him and the victory will be won. But, do not, I beseech you, neglect anything that is required, for disobedience brings darkness; and do not reason nor delay, but simply follow the leadings of the spirit and be led into all peace.

BEAUTIFUL CITY OF ZION

Beautiful Zion, dear to me,
Beautiful everything I see,
Beautiful gates of pearly white,
Beautiful temple, God its light;
He, who was slain on calvary,
Opens there pearly gates to me.

Beautiful home where all is light,
Beautiful saints all clothed in white,
Beautiful strains that never tire,
Beautiful harps through all the choir;
There shall I join the chorus sweet,
Worshipping at the Savior's feet.

Beautiful crowns on every brow,
Beautiful palms the conquerors show,
Beautiful robes the ransomed wear,
Beautiful all who enter there;
Thither I press with eager feet,
There shall my rest be long and sweet.

Beautiful throne of Christ the king,
Beautiful songs the saints shall sing,
Beautiful rest, all wanderings cease,
Beautiful home of perfect peace;
There shall my eyes the Savior see,
Haste to this beautiful home with me.—Selected by Sister EDNA OSTEEN.

Some so-called Christians talk Christianity more in one hour than they live in a life time. Don't be such a Christian.

THE ANGLE OF REPOSE

AFTER THE Panama Canal was opened to the world as an avenue of commerce; the United States government was much disturbed by the frequent land slides which closed it. In 1916 a committee of representative engineers was sent to study the topography of the canal, and the possibility of removing the cause of the trouble. After carefully studying the problem, the engineers reported that further difficulties need not be anticipated because the troublesome hill from which the land slides came had achieved "the angle of repose." When a mountain achieves the angle of repose it neither troubles life nor is troubled by it. In the majesty of its poise it raises its head in the clouds high above the fretful and fearful children of men.

I know men who have achieved the angle of repose in their lives; they think in serious terms about reality, yet do not succumb to pessimism. They have the common responsibilities of ordinary men, but are not slaves of worry. The irritating elements which cause us to fret never rob them of their self-control. As the Rock of Gibralter stands in the Mediterranean, superior to storm and calm, so these noble souls stand among the sons of men, an example of what life should be.

But what is the secret of their poise? They have discovered God and made his will their business in life. Having yielded their will to God and made his business theirs, the spirit of faith enables them to say with confidence "The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me."

The call of God to man is, to remember God and merge their interest with him.

SAMUEL MACAULAY LINDSAY.

THANKFULNESS

MANY FAVORS which God giveth us ravel out for the want of hemming through our own unthankfulness; for though many purchaseth blessings, giving praise doth keep the quiet possession of them. THOMAS FULLER.

WHAT OTHERS MAY NOT SEE

If each man's secret unguarded care
Were written on his brow,
How many would our pity share
Who have our envy now!
And if the promptings of each heart
No artifice concealed,
How many trusting friends would part
At what they saw revealed.

AS A contrast to the above let us read a few verses from first Corinthians:

"Charity (love) suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not, charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up. Does not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil. Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth. Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away."

HAPPINESS COMETH THROUGH FAITH

Winter with its icy blast,
Spring with showers that never last,
Summer with its fragrant breeze,
Autumn with its golden trees,
Contain the "still small voice" of God.
From beaten paths most men have trod
To paths that are forsaken,
The word of God still lives on
And faith is yet unshaken,
Should you ask why or how this is,
Come, and to you I will show
The woodland lake, the growing trees,
The mountains capped with snow:
And when you see these miracles
That God has wrought,
Then you'll really understand
Why happiness can't be bought.

—o—

A MAN WENT FORTH TO DIE

Under an eastern sky,
  Amid a rabble's cry,
  A Man went forth to die,
    For me.

Thorn-crowned his blessed head,
  Blood-staind his every tread,
  Cross-laden on he sped
    For me.

Pierced glow his hands and feet,
  Three hours o'er him beat,
  Fierce rays of noontide heat,
    For me.

Thus wert thou made all mine;
  Lord, make me wholly thine;
  Grant grace and strength divine
    To me.

JOHN WESLEY'S RULE

Do all the good you can,
By all the means you can,
In all the ways you can,
In all the places you can.
At all the times you can,
To all the people you can,
As long as ever you can.

ON THE TWENTY THIRD PSALM

In pastures green? Not always? sometimes he
Who knoweth best, in kindness leadeth me
In weary ways, where heavy shadows be.
And by "still waters?" No, not always so;
Oft times the heavy tempests round me blow,
And o'er my soul the waves and billows go.
But when the storms beat loudest, and I cry
Aloud for help, the Master standeth by,
And whispers to my soul, "Lo it is I."
So, where he leads me, I can safely go,
And in the blest hereafter I shall know
Why, in his wisdom, he hath led me so.

CHILDREN'S DUTY

Let little children come to me,
  These words our loving Savior said;
Obey the gospel in your youth,
  Then you'll be ransomed from the dead;
Will live with Christ on earth again,
  And in his presence will remain.

Who serves the Lord in early days
  Receives from God eternal praise;
The youth who strives to win God's praise
  Will save him faithful all his days;
Will cry to keep the path worn bright,
  That leads unto eternal life.

Then children try with all your might,
  To serve our God, and serve him right,
The great reward should urge us on,
  We'll live forever with his Son;
And as a means unto that end,
  Revere the Son that God did send.

TODAY WE have given a page made up entirely of the thoughts of others. We trust our friends will often come to our rescue.

Where are the Dead?

THE COUNTLESS millions who have lived and loved, hoped and feared, suffered, waxed old, sickened and died, even as we do; the multitudes who have come into life as the beasts come, who have lived and died, as the beast lived and died—where are they today? Also the wicked and corrupt; those rebels who know of God, but refuse to listen to his word, or heed his commands; they are passing now; day and night they pass, a mighty procession, millions deep. They have been passing without halt or cessation for six thousand years; they are lost in the land of forgetfulness. Where are the dead?

I see another vast procession passing, a mixed multitude; millions of innocent chidren who never knew sin; hosts of well meaning, but mistaken people from every nation and country under heaven; they all pass out of sight into the land of forgetfulness. Where are the dead, and what is their condition? Do they still live while dead? Are they conscious of pain, or torment, or do they dwell in endless bliss and happiness? Are they conscious of loved ones left behind, and do they sorrow or rejoice with them as of yore? These are without doubt the most important and absorbing questions that have ever occupied the mind of man. Unnumbered volumes have been written on this subject by profound students of all ages, and yet men of letters still differ widely, and all because of the wisdom of this world which refuses to listen to what God has said on the subject, but insists upon looking within itself for a solution of the question, Where are the dead?

We contend that the correct answer to this great question is found only in the word of the living God, and that conclusions reached by Socrates, Plato, Tertullian, Darwin, Ingersoll, Spencer, Wesley, Spurgeon, Watts, and a host of others ("whose worldly wisdom is foolishness with God") are not only false, but extremely foolish and childish, and unworthy the serious consideration of men of even ordinary intelligence.

WHERE ARE THE DEAD?

Let us prepare the way for the correct answer by first finding some places where they are not; and for convenience in our study, will divide mankind into two great classes: the just and the unjust, the righteous and the wicked. It is asserted by priests and teachers of theology that man consists of two parts: the body and the soul. The soul, (they tell us) is immortal. The most high God created it, but is not powerful enough to destroy it; he can create countless suns and heavenly bodies, compared to which the earth is but a speck, and hold them in absolute obedience to his will; but he is powerless to destroy even the weakest of the souls, which he has created. This soul is the thinking part, the real man (so they say); the body is merely the tabernacle or house in which the real man lives for a short time; and at that event which we call death, it is the house only which dies; the real man or soul, being immortal, cannot die, but passes on to another form of existence, leaving sorrowing friends and relatives the sad task of bedecking the old vacant house with wreaths of beautiful flowers, and enclosing it in a costly casket, draped with worldly honors, tearfully lay it away in the cold and silent tomb, while the former tenant mounts on angel wings to the high courts of heaven, there to play on golden harps before the throne of God, throughout the countless years of eternity.

Therefore, according to these foolish fables, he does not die. A dead man is not dead, but alive for evermore. That what we call death is not death, but simply a new form of existence. This immortal soul, or real man who has just moved out of the old house, is a most wonderful creature, according to popular theology: it has no form or shape, and is invisible; cannot be seen, felt, heard, or smelled, and occupies no space; it is neither round, square nor oblong, and has no weight; it has neither fingers nor toes, and yet it plays on golden harps before the throne of God! But how readeth God's word?

> The heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's but the earth hath he given to the children of men (Psa. 115:16).
> And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is (now) in heaven (John 3:13).

If the heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's and no man hath ascendeth up to heaven where God's throne is, then we can safely conclude that the billions of the dead are not there, nor any portion of them.

On one occasion, just before his cruel death, Jesus said to his beloved apostles, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you: ye shall seek me (after I leave you): and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go ye cannot come; so now I say to you" (John 13:33).

The "little children" to whom he was speaking were his apostles. Those dear ones who had shared his joy and sorrows during the three years of his ministry, and from whom he must soon part, even they must not hope or expect to accompany him to the hight courts of heaven. Why? Because "the heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's," and no man may ascend there; therefore it is surely a waste of time to search for the dead in heaven.

David says, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence" (Psa. 115:17). But preachers and priests, deacons, bishops, and creeds, tell us that the righteous dead of all ages are now in heaven, singing praises to God continually. Dear reader, I stand with king David, "The man after God's own heart:" which side are you on? Both cannot be right.

Solomon says, "The dead know not anything" (Eccl. 9:5). The preachers say, "Not so, Solomon; the righteous dead are praising God in heaven and know infinitely more than when on earth." Shall we believe Solomon, who was inspired by God, or the preacher who, for a consideration in cash, seeks to tickle our ears with fables?

But why multiply quotations? There are absolutely no Scriptures from Genesis to Revelation, to support the popular fable that the righteous dead of all ages are now in heaven. If a home in heaven be God's reward for righteousness, is it not passing strange that he has neglected to say so in his word? But on the contrary, his inspired prophets are united in teaching that the heavens are the Lord's and no man may hope or expect to go there. In view of above facts and Scriptures, we cannot avoid the conclusion that wherever the dead may be, there is no portion or part of them in heaven.

It is Not a Little Thing

It is not a little thing
To find God here when I awake,
And hear the happy, hymning birds
Welcome morning for his sake.

It is not a little thing
To have him come with early day
And offer joy, and light, and peace,
When he has taken night away.

It is not a little thing
To think how tenderly he sends
Dawn with stirring brilliancy
To the hearts of all my friends.

It is not a little thing
To rise and meet the shining air,
Answering his daily call
To pause in wonder, love, and prayer.—Selected by AUNTIE WINCE.

Discussion on Universal Salvation

Debate on the Attributes of God: Alpha Affirms; Omega Denies

ALPHA'S SECOND SPEECH

Fellow citizens:

IT IS well for my friend that he made the remark he did, just before taking his seat—that he did not intend to establish any definite positions, but simply to raise difficulties and objections. This we can discover to be his object from the way he argues. But I have positions to establish, if not beyond quibble, at least beyond successful refutation; and I expect in the main, to sustain my ground, let my opponent raise as much dust as he pleases.

As regards the conclusion deduced from my premises, that God wills all manner of wickedness, I shall attend to that in due time, and prove that sin must exist according to the will of God, or it could not exist at all. Brother Rogers has argued that point successfully and proved that foreknowledge and fore ordination imply the same thing; and as God must have foreknown that men would practice wickedness, he must also have foreordained or decreed such to be the fact; but for no other purpose than to be overruled for the good of the sinner. This is my faith exactly, as it is the belief of all Universalists, east and west. I know of no Universalist preacher who does not believe and preach, that God designs to overrule sin, as well as misery, for the good of the transgressor.

As I am just now upon this point, I think it best, probably, to carry the argument a little farther. The truth is, God is the author of sin; not directly, but through the agency of man, who only does what God foreknew and foreordained that he should do. This is clearly taught in the Bible. The apostle declares, that "All things are of God" (2 Cor. 5:18). And the Lord himself declares by the mouth of the prophet: "I form the light, and create darkness; I make peace, and create evil: I the Lord do all these things" (Isa. 45:7). This is sufficient for the present. God is not only there declared to be the indirect author of sin, but it is here said, emphatically, "I create evil," which is sin, and of course one of the "all things" which the apostle affirms to be "of God." My opponent will find this an exceedingly hard argument to meet; but I presume he will try to twist along over it in some way.

The apparent difficulty presented at the close of his speech is no difficulty at all. We have a right to reason a priori, from what the attributes of God are, to what they will necessarily lead him to. This is logical, and we intend to make good use of it in this discussion. We shall now present an insurmountable argument: God is infinite in power, wisdom, and goodness. 1. His infinite goodness would prompt him to desire the endless happiness of the whole human race. 2. His infinite wisdom was sufficient to devise means adequate to bring about the end desired; and 3. His infinite power was sufficient to carry into effect the means which infinite wisdom had devised, so that the end prompted by infinite goodness will be attained. This argument can also be presented in another form, which will give it perhaps more force. One of these grounds must be admitted; Either 1. God can save all men, but will not; or 2. God will save all men but can not; or 3. God can save all men and will save all men. If you take the first and say he can but will not, you limit his goodness. If you take the second, and say he will, but can not, you limit his power; but if you prefer the third, and say he can and will, you have Universalism, the very thing for which I am contending! The whole argument in favor of universal salvation is based upon the omnipotence of God. What infinie benevolence can prompt, and infinite knowledge can devise, infinite power can carry into execution: and thus, in every way it can be turned, universal salvation is the inevitable result. But I have argued the point now till I have got almost out of sight of my opponent, and I had better probably rest until he overtakes me! I wish the congregation, however, to take particular notice of the manner in which my arguments are met.

OMEGA'S SECOND REPLY

Gentlemen Moderators:

IN PROCEEDING with this discussion. I have one suggestion to make, and one favor to ask, since to elicit the truth is the object for which we have convened on the present occasion. I do hope that my opponent will not present too many points in one speech. I wish to meet every argument, and my friend, no doubt, is desirous to have the whole ground fairly canvassed: and he should know, as I presume he does, that to rebut an argument requires more time than to present it, admitting the disputants to be on equal footing. This, doubtless will be acceeded to. The audience will remember the conclusions which I deduced from his first argument--that all manner of wickedness, and abomination was according to the will of God. This, you perceive, he readily admits, and attempts to justify it by the assumption that God is the author of sin, and that every act a man performs, is in accordance with the immutable decree of Jehovah. This may be strange ground to many in this audience: but, as my opponent remarked, it is the ground of all standard authors in the Universalist ranks. Had I not read the same argument in some of his standard works, I should have been utterly astounded in hearing such an unrighteous and pernicious sentiment unblushingly advocated! But I am not at all taken by surprise. I am fully prepared, I think, for the system in its worst forms. Yes, all that men do, is according to the will of God! Christ says: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 7:21). No wonder my opponent believes that all will be saved; for according to his view, let a man do what he will, he will obtain the kingdom of God Is it not also unaccountably strange, that my friend should reprove a man for getting drunk as he did the other day, when he knew the man was doing the will of God --the very thing that God had decreed, or foreordained, from all eternity, that he should do; and which he could no more have avoided than he could have plucked the moon from her orbit?

God had foreordained, or decreed, according to this doctrine, that Adam should eat of the forbidden fruit. Then it follows: 1. That God acted the hypocrite with Adam, in trying to keep him from eating, when it was his will that he should eat. 2. That he acted the part of a cruel tyrant, in punishing Adam for doing his will. 3. That the devil was a better friend to God than he was to himself; for whilst God tried his best to keep Adam from doing his will, the devil persuaded him to do it. And, 4. That God commanded Adam not to eat--thus placing him between the horns of an unmerciful dilemma, either to break God's command or his decree!

My friend is strong in the the belief that foreknowledge and foreordination imply the same thing; or, or that whenever a thing is foreknown it is decreed. We shall attend to this subject more fully by and by; but for the present we shall adduce one argument to show that God has foreknown certain things which he had not decreed. And in the first place, we take it for granted, that Christ, whose meat was to do the will of his Father, and to do those things that were well pleasing in his sight, could not labor to break any of his Father's decrees; yet we have an abundance of evidence on hand to prove that he did both desire and labor to prevent a certain transaction from taking place, which he and his Father both knew would certainly come to pass, and which had been predicted by a number of the prophets. I mean the destruction of Jerusalem: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not. Behold your house is left unto you desolate" (Luke 13:34, 35). Thus Christ labored to prevent Jerusalem from being destroyed, which proves that God had not decreed its destruction, although he foreknew and predicted that such would be the case.

But "God is the author of sin!" Let us examine this for a few minutes. My opponent quotes in proof of this position, "All things are of God." But all what things? Not all bad things, certainly: but all good things! The same apostle asserts that charity "believeth all things" (1 Cor. 13:7). That is, "all true things;" for no one can suppose that charity binds a man to believe a lie! Yet, the way my friend argues, we should be led to that very conclusion. But let us see how the apostle John agrees with my opponent: "All that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, is not of the Father" (1 John 2:16). Hence, the "all things" which are of God, as I before observed, must be limited to all good things, and ergo, does not include sin. "Every good gift, and every perfect gift, is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights" (Jam. 1:17). Does sin come down from the Father of lights? If so, is it a good and a perfect gift? "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law" (Gal. 5:22, 23); but no mention is made of sin, in this list of all the fruits of the Spirit; and as sin is not of the Spirit, it is not of God, for "God is a Spirit" (John 4:24). But sin is a work of the flesh. "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulation, wrath, strife, seditions, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past," that they are of God? Nay, verily! My opponent says they are; but Paul says: "That they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God" (vss. 19-21). Thus the apostle contradicts Christ, by teaching that those guilty of the above conduct (which my opponent says is according to the will of God), shall not inherit the kingdom: and Christ affirms, that those who do the will of God are the very ones that shall be admitted into it. But my opponent may urge that God is our Father, and is the author of all that we do. But my Bible informs me that the father shall not "bear the iniquity of the son" (Ezek. 18:20). Yet my friend wishes to throw the blame of all manner of wickedness upon the head of our heavenly Father! We are informed in the Scriptures that "God hath made man upright" (Eccl. 7:29). Did God make man an upright sinner? Again we read: "And God saw everything that he had made, and behold it was very good" (Gen. 1:31). Is God the author of sin? If so, is sin very good? If so, can you think of any thing that is very bad?

But God says: "I make peace and create evil." But what kind of evil? Not moral evil, or sin, by any means: but physical evil, such as was threatened against Nineveh. "And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way: and God repented of the evil that he had said he would do unto them, and he did it not" (Jonah 3:10). Did God repent of the sin he was about to commit against the Ninevites? My opponent no doubt thinks so! But all evil, which God is said to create, we understand to be judgments which he brings upon men for their disobedience. Thus it is said: "Shall there be evil in a city, and the Lord hath not done it?" (Amos 3:6).

But my opponent argues, that no blame can be attached to the character of God, although the author of all the sin and misery in the universe: from the fact that he designed it for a wise and benevolent purpose, that he might overrule it for good! This is however a mere subterfuge. If God designed to introduce sin, and then to overrule it for the good of the sinner, we may well ask: "Why doth he yet find fault?" Why does he labor so hard to get sin out of existence, since it is designed for a good end? Why does he manifest such mighty displays of wisdom, power, and goodness, to do away his own benevolent enterprise of sin? Why condemn it with such awful threatenings, and terrible denunciations if it be right, and designed to be overruled for good? Why bring such direful calamities, and such unparallelled judgments upon the children of men, for being instruments in his hand of doing that only which will result in the greatest amount of good; and which they no more could have avoided, than they could have prevented their own existence? Why, say "I write unto you little children that you sin not?" when if they did sin, they were only doing the will of God--the very thing that would be overruled for their good? Why be "angry with the wicked every day?" Why "hate all workers of iniquity?" Why have "no pleasure in wickedness?" Why, let me ask, cannot God look upon sin with the least degree of allowance, since it is his own invention, and calculated not only to add to his own glory, but to result in good to the transgressor? As sin is designed for a good end, and will certainly result in good and not evil, so that every sinner will be the gainer by it: why does not God command and encourage his children to practice vice, rather than virtue?

Would not a wise and benevolent earthly parent place all the inducements possibe before his children, to lead them into the path which would result in their best good ? If so, would not our heavenly Father manifest more paternal regard for his dear children, if he should encourage wickedness, with all the benevolence of his soul, rather than curse men for doing that which they could not help—which was bound upon them by the immutable decree of Jehovah, and which, if wrong, no one was to blame but God himself ? I am astonished that my friend, with all his intelligence, could never have imbibed such a doctrine. That God would make a man commit sin, and then bring down fire and brimstone upon his head, for that which he could not possibly avoid. Like the father who whiped his boy to make him drink whisky, and then whipped him for getting drunk ! What would my opponent think of me if I should knock him down, and then kick him for falling ? Just as much, verily, as I do of the God he professes to worship !

But the doctrine which my friend is endavoring to inculcate, is most pernicious in its tendency, and is calculated to encourage sinners to continue in the practice of wickedness. It holds out the very strongest inducements to commit sin, whenever the doctrine is fairly understood. It is an undeniable fact, that the more God overrules for our good, the more we will experience ; and as all sin is to be overruled for our good, it follows then—the more sin the better ! Sin is preferable to virtue for several considerations : for when a man performs a virtuous act, the good resulting from it he receives as he goes along ; but when he commits a sin, and is punished for it, he derives present consolation, from the consciousness that the sin he committed was according to the will and decree of God ; and the anticipation of the whole matter being overruled for his good, would inspire more bliss than would overbalance the punishment he then endured ; and as God inflicts no punishment now, except the compunctions of conscience, it is as clear as demonstration, that the sinner gets all the good resulting from sin, both by anticipation, and actual possession of the result, when God shall overrule it for his good, and that too, without any punishment at all ; for what man's conscience would lash him for doing that which he could not avoid, and which he knew to be the eternal and unchangeable will of God ? As well might his conscience goad him for not being six feet high ! From this it is most manifest that my friend's doctrine holds out a two-fold greater reward for vice than for virtue ! Should a man live the most base and profligate life ; should he continually blaspheme the name of God, and trample under foot, with the most ineffable contempt, the commandments and authority of Jesus Christ : it shall all work together, and be overruled for his good ! Should he wantonly and maliciously imbrue his hands in the blood of his own wife and children, my opponent would inform him (if he should act out the principles of honesty), that all this was according to the will of God, and that it would result in the best possible good to him, as well as to the victims of his cruelty ! And should he be hung for the crime, God will overrule it for his good ; and upon the same principle, I see no good reason why the good Lord might not damn him, and send him to hell for his good !

But my opponent believes that righteous men will not be rewarded for their virtuous deeds, only in this life—the reward is never postponed till a future state. This is another demonstration, that his doctrine holds out more inducements for vice than virtue. A man dies in the very act of committing murder, and thus is launched into eternity without having the murder overruled for his good ; and hence, as all sin is to be overruled for the good of the sinner, it follows that this sin will be overruled for his good in eternity : and thus, whilst my friend teaches that virtuous conduct will not benefit us in a future state, wickedness would be an eternal advantage to us by being overruled for our good ! If I believed this doctrine, I should consider myself morally bound to commit all the sin I possibly could, that it might be overruled for the good of myself and others ! Thus "the goodness of my God," in overruling all sin for good, instead of leading me to repentance, would lead me to continue in sin that grace might abound, and that the goodness of God might overrule it for my good : or if I repented at all, it would be because I had not committed more sin, that I might have more overruled for my good !

It is an absolute contradiction in terms to say that the goodness of God will lead a man to repent of his sins ; and, at the same time, lead him to commit sin, by assuring him, that the very worst thing he could do, would result in good, and would enhance his happiness for eternity ! Suppose I should ask my friend, why he preaches Universalism : his answer doubtless would be, to make men happier in this life, by doing away the unnecessary and servile fear of a future hell. But if his doctrine be true, that God will overrule every thing for good, why not let them fear ahead ? The more hell and damnation is preached to them, the more they will fear, and the happier they will be, when it comes to be overruled for their good ! If I believed the doctrine of my friend, I would preach up endless damnation nevertheless ; for it would, in the outcome, benefit those who feared it ; and I would lose nothing by preaching such abominable falsehoods (if such they be), for they too, would be overruled for my good !

But my opponent is verily found fighting against God, in trying to do away the fear of a future hell ; for God foreordains whatsoever comes to pass ; and it has come to pass somehow or other, that a very large majority of the world believe in a future hell ; and hence God has foreordained or decreed it : and as God would not decree a thing that was not right, it is right, therefore, for the orthodox to believe just as they do ! If my friend admits this, which he cannot avoid ; then he is doing wrong whenever he opposes them, for it is most unquestionably wrong for a man to oppose that which is right. Will he argue that God has willed and decreed that men should fear hell and a lake of fire and brimstone, which do not and never will exist ? If he has thus decreed, then it follows, that some men will eternally fear hell ; for my opponent, at the commencement of this discussions, built his citadel upon the position, that God is without variableness or shadow of turning : and hence those who are now tormented with that fear, which owes its existence alone to the decree of God, will be thus tormented to all eternity ; and what will become of my friend's universal happiness and holiness ? I think, from his appearance he is getting a little ashamed of this idea of sin being overruled for good ; and if I am not very much deceived, he will leave that doctrine before night. If he does not, I have an abundance more off the same piece.

But as I have already spoken somewhat longer than I had intended, I shall again hear my opponent.

The Wide Gate

SAID THE tempter : "Oh fudge ! Don't be so prudish. Surely there can be no harm in dancing a few old fashioned sets and figures here in the privacy of our own home. There are only a few friends present. We have been sitting around for hours, and need the exercise. Come on, girlie, it is quite easy ; you will soon learn the steps and figures."

"Thanks," he says, and slyly winks at his friends, as she bashfully and reluctantly takes his proffered arm and moves with him to a position in the set. With his arms about her, as he guides her through the mazes of the dance, and lips close to her ear, he whispers silly nothings, while she listens intoxicated by the novelty and newness of it all, and as he leads her to a seat showering praises and compliments upon the daintiness of her step and the "poetry" of her movements, her foolish little head becomes completely turned by his subtle flattery, and she lends a shy but willing ear.

Said the tempter : "Oh, shucks ; don't be so silly. It is only a little party of friends at a private house. Of course it is understood that we are to have a little dance, but what's the harm ? They are all nice people, and you will soon get acquainted ; besides it is the duty of the church to meet the world half way and be a little bit sociable—not shut yourself up like clams. Come, girlie," and again he slyly winked as she reluctantly took his proffered arm.

Said the tempter : "What prudish notions ! Of course it might be termed in a sense, a 'public dance,' but it will be patronized by only the very best people, and the proceeds will be donated to charity. Surely there can be no harm in a dance given in the name, and for the purpose of sweet charity. Follow my lead, girlie, and we will help charity and have lots of fun besides. What's the sense of being a prude and getting no fun out of life ? This old world is just as we make it. There are bushels of fun in it for each of us, if we only get busy and look for it. Take my advice and let us enjoy life while we are young, for when we get old we can't." And as she took his arm with a more vain and careless look, he winked again.

The tempter said : "Oh, rats ! Whenever will you be done with that silly twaddle ? Suppose it is a 'public ball ;' there are worse places on earth than a ballroom. Yes, I know that there is a bar next door, but we don't have to patronize it unless we wish to. What's the mater with you tonight anyhow ? I thought you were done with such childish scruples long ago. Conscience, duty, church, God--these old folks' tales are things of the past. You laid them aside, girlie, when first I led you forth and gave you a peep into this jolly old world. Come, girlie ; put behind you these vain regrets. Let us drink of the cup of pleasure to its dregs and forget the 'might have beens.'"

And as with bold reckless laugh she took his arm, methought I heard a voice which said : "The wages of sin is death ;" "For wide is the gate and broad the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat."

To be, is more powerful than even to do. Action may be hypocrisy, but being is the thing itself, and is the parent of action.

Good News

ON SUNDAY April 3rd, 1921, at Brooklyn, New York, Mrs. Johannah Eggerking, with her son Theodore, both of Newark, New Jersey, after making the good confession that "Jesus is the Christ the Son of God," and acknowldeging him as their wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption, were buried "with Christ by baptism unto death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even they also should walk in newness of life."

After Brother Wm. G. Rothe, on behalf of the church had extended the right hand of fellowship to Sister and Brother Eggerking, they with us partook of the supper portraying the suffering, and death, and buial, and resurrection, as also the promise of the second coming of our Lord. We then listened to the gospel message delivered by Brother William H. Brown (Editor of The Restitution), who spoke on "Christ's message to Sardis," from the lesson as found in Rev. 3:1-6.

Sister and Brother Eggerking are respectfully a sister and nephew of our Brother Dietz. Pray that they may be kept worthy of the high vocation to which they have been called.

A Letter to the Bereans

By S. ROXANA WINCE

I SECOND the motion of our young sister Frances Zeller that more of you write for The Restitution. I love the young people and turn to the young people's page the first thing to see if there is not something from their pens, and when I find there is not, I feel like I must sit down and have a good old fashioned cry, like the ones I used to have when rocked in a pioneer swing.

Did you ever think how disappointed we grown ups are when you fail to write? Why, it just gives me the heart ache. Even the imperfect attempts of the little tots help me, fill my heart with joy. They may not write as Brother Thomas, Brother Groves, and others write, but that they try to serve God in this way is pleasing to him, and to us.

And you Bereans, do you not belie your name when you fail to "sound out the word of the Lord?" That is what the ancient Bereans did. If you are indeed "Bible Searchers" put the result of your Bible searching on paper that we too may enjoy it with you. The young love to hear from the young.

If you are going to be "a tiller" in God's great field, take hold of the plow and get at his work. God has no place for idlers. His servants must be eager, enthusiastic busy workers. Every talent must be put out to usury and be accounted for, not one of us can escape the responsibility that God has laid upon us. We are our brothers' keepers. Their blood will be required at our hand if we see the sword coming and sound out no warning note.

> Rescue the perishing, care for the dying,
> Weep for the erring ones, lift up the fallen,
> Snatch them in pity from sin and from death.

Items of Interest

THE QUESTION of "what will be" after the 1000 years reign, was brought up for the discussion of the Bible Searchers, and I will give the conclusions that three of the members have arrived at.

Brother Harry Sheets writes the following on the subject: "I cannot conceive of a government without rulers. I cannot conceive of all being equal and no rank differences after the 1000 years is completed. I believe the Scriptures nowhere give a description of anything beyond the thousand years. The Scriptures, however, merely speak of the 'days to come.' We are told that those that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever. This seems to show a difference in rank. Again we have mention made of the everlasting gospel being preached throughout the endless ages (the everlasting gospel or gospel of the age is not said to be preached throughout the endless ages.—Editor.) Someone must teach this. In God's plans the priests (teachers) held highest rank, formers next, and merchants and traders last. Hence, if it is necessary to have teachers for this everlasting gospel, it seems to me that it shows a difference in degree or rank, but perhaps I am mistaken."

In defence of his arguemnt Brother Lawrence Gibbs writes: "Exception was taken to my statement that after the millennium, Christ would turn the kingdom over to God the Father, and these positions would be abolished. While it is true that there is no verse in the Bible which says in so many words that this shall be so; nevertheless the inferences to such a condition are many. We are told in 1 Cor. 15:25, 26 that Christ must reign until he has put all enemies under his feet; of which the last is death; and in verse 24 we are told that he must put down all rule, all auterity, and power. The accomplishment of this, we are told, will take 1000 years, at the end of which time shall occur the second resurrection and then the kingdom shall be turned over to God the Father (1 Cor. 15:24). In the 28th verse of this same chapter we read: 'And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also be subject unto him, that put all things under him, that God might be all in all.' Surely if Christ gives up his position and becomes a subject, we would not hold ours. Furthermore, who is there to rule over? Those who have reached this stage are all equal: they are all immortal. There is no one to teach and no sin to conquer, no mortal things with which to deal. Our finite minds cannot picture a kingdom without many offices and law givers; but to the infinite God, the all-powerful, to whom all things are possible, what need is there for under-rulers? Who is there that would detract from the power and glory of God? It seems to me that we would be like God's holy angels, having messages to carry and duties to perform, as occasion might require, and which, after all, would not be duties, but pleasant occupations. We would all be as one big happy family. All things would be perfect. The mildew which now blights the heart of the rose will be no more, and the desert itself shall bloom like the garden of Eden; and as Rev. 21:3, 4 expresses it, 'And God himself shall be with his people, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away.'"

Above are two very interesting versions of this subject. As Brother Lawrence says, there is no positive proof given in the Bible as to what will happen after the 1000 years reign, other than that God will take over the kingdom to himself and be all in all. But my contention is, that Christ and the saints need not give up their positions because of that fact. God will simply be our head ruler or most high king, and Christ, as well as the saints would be under-rulers, or subject to God. In proof of this I quote Luke 1:32, 33: "He (Christ) shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the highest; and the Lord God shal give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Did the angel tell Mary that Jesus would reign over the house of Jacob for 1000 years? No, he said "forever"; and as if that were not strong enough, he added that "of his kingdom there would be no end." There are many passages that speak of Christ's kingdom as being endless. As to what will be, or what positions we will hold after the 1000 years, we are not told. If God had wished us to know more about these things, he no doubt would have told us. As he did not do so, let us be content to leave these things in his hands. If we are found worthy to reign with Christ during the 1000 years, we may be certain that God will look after us through the endless ages that will follow, and will let us know in his own good time just what positions, if any, we will hold.

Good Company: A Serial Article: By Bro. S. H. Thomas

Where are the Dead?

The wicked and beastly of mankind; those who delight in murder, and shout to see the red blood flow; those who rebel against God and refuse to listen to his word, or obey his command where are they? If we enquire of Dr. Watts, the great Methodist divine and poet, we get this reply:

> There is a never ending hell,
> And never dying pains,
> Where children must with demons dwell,
> In darkness, fire, and chains.

Another of America's most eminent divines says: "The woes of sinners in hell will not be a cause of grief to saints in heaven, but of rejoicing . . . after your godly parents have seen you lie in hell millions of ages in torment, day and night, they will not begin to pity you then; they will praise God that his justice appears in the eternity of your misery."

But let us turn to the law and the testimony; if they (priests, divines, and teachers) speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them (Isa. 8:20). The word tells us that "all the wicked will God destroy" (not preserve alive in torment (Psa. 145:20). This punishment will be "everlasting destruction" (2 Thess. 1:9). He will "not preserve the life of the wicked" (Job 36:6) but "the end of the wicked shall be cut off" (Psa. 37:38). "The wicked shall perish" (Psa. 37:20). "The candle (life) of the wicked shall be put out" (Prov. 24:20). "For behold the day that cometh shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all who do wickedly shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts (not preserve them alive in tormnet), that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." "They shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I will do this, saith the Lord of hosts" (Mal. 4:1-3). "As the whirlwind passeth, so is the wicked no more" (Prov. 10:25). "Let them be ashamed, and let them be silent in the grave" (not shamed, and let them be silent in the grave" (not the soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezek. 18:4), not live in torment. "For the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23), not life in torment.

Therefore, if the Bible be true, and the wages of sin be death; if the soul that sinneth must die; if God destroys them with everlasting destruction, and if he will not preserve the life of the wicked, but that the end of the wicked shall be cut off; if the candle (life) of the wicked will be put out, and the wicked therefore perish; if they are burned up, and become ashes under our feet; if they consume away into smoke like the fat of the morning sacrifice, and neither root nor branch be left of them; if they even become as if they had not been; if these things found in the word of him who cannot lie be true; then, priests and preachers, creeds and hymns teach only lies and foolish fables. The wicked dead are not alive in hell; no, not one of them. Even the thought is a base libel upon a kind and loving Father; an Almighty and omnipotent God.

THEN WHERE ARE THE DEAD, AND WHAT IS THEIR CONDITION?

With thankful and confiding hearts we turn once more to the word of the living God, believing that only there may we learn with authority from whence we came and whither we go. In the year 586 B. C. God sent this message by the mouth of his prophet Ezekiel to the whole house of Israel: "Behold, O my people I will open your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel, and ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves and brought you out of your graves" (Ezek. 37:12, 13). The people of Israel to whom this message was sent, are yet in their graves, and the message is directed to them there. God does not promise to bring any portion or part of them down from heaven, nor up from hell; but out of their graves.

When Joseph's brethren took his blood-stained coat to Jacob he said, "I will go down into the grave unto my son, mourning" (Gen. 37:35). He knew nothing of a trip to heaven, to meet his beloved son, but realized that he must go to the grave, awaiting God's promise to let down the bars and open wide the gates of the prison house of death, and bid them awake and come forth.

Job says, "If I wait the grave is mine house" (Job 17:13). David says that like sheep the wicked dead are laid in the grave (Psa. 49:14) John says, "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth: they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of condemnation" (John 5:28, 29).

Thank God, dear reader, for by the aid of his word the dead at last are found. We have searched heaven and the orthodox hell without avail; no evidence of their presence could we find in either place. In despair we return to earth and open the graves and lo, we find them, multitudes upon multitudes of them. See here are our fathers, mothers, sisters, and brothers, our husbands and our wives, our dear little babes also, and all, whom we have loved and admired; the good and the godly of all peoples, nations, countries, also the evil and brutish: all are here dwelling peacefully together and the grave is their house: but

WHAT IS THEIR CONDITION?

Are they screaming and cursing in never ending agony, rage, and pain? Are any of them playing on golden harps, and singing praises to God? Dear Father, tell us whether or not these things be true.

"For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee praise?" (Psa. 6:5). This Scripture teaches that the grave is the home of the dead, and that there is no remembrance of God, nor praises sung for him there. "Let the wicked be ashamed, and let them be silent in the grave" (Psa. 37:17). Evidently David knew nothing of an orthodox hell for the wicked for he says "let them be silent in the grave;" and our reason and experience agree with him.

If we enquire of Solomon concerning the state of the dead, we get this reply: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest" (Eccl. 9:10). "But," says the theologian, "it is the body that goes to the grave; Solomon had no reference to the soul or thinking part of man: that he knew full well, can never die." Say you so? Then let us question him once more "For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything . . . Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now persihed" (Eccl. 9:5, 6). Shall we believe God or man? Solomon or a corrupt clergy?

In Psa. 146:4 we read that at death, "man's breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Dear reader, we have here a pen picture drawn by God, showing the condition of the dead. His breath has gone forth; he has returned to earth; his thoughts are perished. Can you still contend that the dead are not dead, but alive and conscious?

Isaiah says, "The grave cannot praise thee (God), death cannot celebrate thee." A venerable and respected deacon of the church dies, and the many friends and relatives gather at the church to pay their last sad respects to the dead. The minister thinking the occasion a good one to make a lasting impression on the little ones says: "My dear children, you must not weep and mourn; your dear old grandpa is not dead. The body in the casket before you is not your grandpa; it is only the house in which grandpa lived; but the house died and grandpa has gone to heaven to live. He is very happy there, and is much wiser, and knows much more than he did when he lived in this old house. He loves you now more than ever before, and he knows everything you do. If you are bad you will grieve him, and make him sorry; but if you are good, and always do right, you will make him oh so happy! And some day you will go to heaven and live with him always."

I open my Bible and read, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish" (Psa. 146:4). "His sons come to honor and he knoweth it not; they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them" (Job 14:2). Dear reader which will you believe; Job, or the preacher? Both cannot be true; you must choose between the two.

The condition of the dead is said in God's word to be that of sleep; a quiet peaceful, dreamless sleep, with no knowledge of the lapse of time. In 1 Kings 2:10 we read that David slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of David. David was a most eloquent player on the harp, and a man after God's own heart; and one would naturally suppose that if anyone went to heaven to play on golden harps before the throne of God it would be David; but there is nothing in the above account of his death that would indicate that he enjoyed that privilege. He simply fell asleep and was buried. However, lest there be some who question that conclusion, Peter says in Acts 2:34 that "David is not ascended into heaven." And in verse 29 he says that "David is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us to this day." David himself, looking forward with prophetic vision, and seeing the glories of the promised awakening of those who sleep, the resurrection of the dead, and the change from mortality and incorruption to immortality and incorruption, exclaimed with profound rapture, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy (Christ's) likeness" (Psa. 17:15). David indulged in no dreams of a home beyond the bounds of time and space; he had no visions of mansions in the skies; he knew that he must come under the cruel and relentless hand of the enemy, and fall asleep, and return again to dust, and sojourn for a time in the land of forgetfulness; but he also knew that Jesus, his royal son and Lord, would surely come and open his grave, awaken him in his likeness, and the powers of an endless life, to wax old and die no more. And as that glorious event is yet future, we cannot possibly avoid the conclusion that David now sleeps with his fathers. Solomon also slept with his fathers, and was buried (1 Kings 11:43). Rehoboam, Abijam, Asa, Omri, Ahab, and a host of others are said to sleep with their fathers, and were buried; not one of them ever went to heaven. Jesus said, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go that I may awake him out of his sleep" (John 11:11). "And when he had thus spoken he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth; and he that was dead came forth." He had been sleeping; Jesus did not say "Lazarus, come down;" he said, "Come forth," and he obeyed. He had no story to tell of a trip to heaven while his old abandoned house became putrid in the tomb? why? Because he had been sleeping during those days and knew nothing of time. Then

WHERE ARE THE DEAD, AND WHAT IS THEIR CONDITION?

We answer that God's word declares that they are sleeping in the grave, they have returned to dust as they were, and "have become as though they had not been." They know nothing; their thoughts are now perished; they remember not God, neither do they praise him: no knowledge, nor device have they; also their love, and their hatred, and their envy are now perished. "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even the one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast: for all is vanity. All go into one place: all are of the dust, all turn to dust again" (Eccl. 3:9, 10).

What, then, has the enemy triumphed? Was the earth and its teeming millions created in vain? Are they doomed to remain for ever in the land of forgetfulness? Is there no hope? O God, must the works of thy hands, and the desire of thy heart perish? Listen to the glad answer, ye unnumbered hosts of the dead; leap and shout for joy, ye living who trembling and in doubt stand on the brink of the grave. The answer comes from our noble Lord, the mighty captain of our salvation. He also went into the land of forgetfulness, and passed under the relentless hand of the enemy; but the evil one was unable to hold him. for he burst the bonds of death and came forth from the tomb triumphant, holding aloft the keys of death and of hades. Listen, O ye faltering and fearful, to his glad paean of victory: "I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death" (Rev. 1:18). "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me. though he were dead, yet shall he live" (John 11:25). "O death where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" Listen to the answering shout as it echoes through the ages; it is from the patriarch Job: "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shal behold" (Job 18:25-27).

Dear reader, in conclusion, let me say that whereas most questions have two sides, this has but one. There is absolutely no foundation in Scripture or human experience for the heathen fable of the immortality of the soul, and the structure of foolish, inconsistnet, and God-dishonoring doctrines that have been erected thereon. The most primitive examples of heathen mythology now extant, can boast of no greater, or more inconsistent absurdities, than those unblushingly taught as God's word, by modern priests and clergy, some of which absurdities have been pointed out in this short chapter; and it is the author's earnest prayer that the false doctrine herein presented may arrest the attention and excite the interest of some at least who are seeking for truth, and cause them to investigate into these and kindred subjects.

GOLDEN TEXT: 2 Samuel 22:31

Rainin'? Well, I'm thinkin' mebbe.
  Some one's suited, if you ain't,
An' the grass an' trees are freshenin'
  So they'd had a coat o' paint.
Some one didn't want the sunshine,
  Some one needed this same rain;
We can't all be suited always,
  Things will come your way again.

Straighten out your puckered forehead,
  'Tain't becomin' worn in folds;
Folks can tell by merely lookin'
  If a body frets or scolds.
Turn your mouth a little upward
  At the corners. Don't you know
If you keep your lips a-smilin'
  Discontent hain't room to grow?

One long face is worse than storm clouds
  'Cause it's shut inside the door,
Just be cheerful an' be happy
  Or pretend to, if no more.
Then you'll find there ain't no weather
  Goin' to make you have the blues.
An' you'll never be a-wishin'
  For some other feller's shoes.—Mrs. A. K. KARREL.

WHAT DO YOU DO WITH YOUR COPY?

IT is estimated that since the art of printing became general that more than six hundred million copies of the Bible, in whole or in part, have been printed and circulated. Up to the close of 1919 the whole Bible had been printed in one hundred and fifty-nine languages, and the New Testament in two hundred and ninety-seven. Surely there is no excuse for anyone, no matter where, or how situated, for not knowing God's plan of salvation as revealed in the person of Jesus Christ our Lord.

MEANING OF BIBLICAL TERMS

THE FOLLOWING table translates biblical terms into present day meaning, and is convenient for reference. At times it may be used to arrest the attention of boys whose alert minds will be glad, for instance, to figure out how tall Goliath was, and to appromimate what measure in the room the giant would reach were he present.

A day's journey was about 23 miles.

A sabbath day's journey was about an English mile.

A cubit was nearly 22 inches.

A span was nine inches.

A hand's breadth is equal to three and five eights inches.

A finger's breadth is equal to one inch.

A shekel of silver is about fifty cents.

The ratio of a shekel of silver to a shekel of gold was about sixteen to one.

A talent of silver was $538.30.

A talent of gold was $13,809.00.

A piece of silver, or a penny, was thirteen cents.

A farthing was three cents.

A mite was less than a quarter of a cent.

An ephah, or bath, contained seven gallons and five pints.

A hin was one gallon and two pints.

A firkin was about eight and seven eighth gallons.

An omer was six pints.

A cab was three pints.

CHRIST THE CENTRE

IT IS reported that at a great world's conference once held in London, England, Mr. Gladstone charged the assembled ministers and missionaries, saying: "It is the preaching of Christ our Lord which is the substance and heart of all preaching; not of facts about him or notions concerning him, but his person, his work, his simple yet unfathomable sayings. Here lies the secret."

Which reminds us of a dear old mother. Sick, nigh unto death, the assembled family saw that her eyes were closed and all thought the end had come, when with head uplifted and eyes open, she beckoned to her youngest child to approach, and taking the tiny hand in hers, exclaimed: 'Christ the centre; Christ—" the sentence never was finished; she had fallen on sleep. No wonder this good woman's life also her death, has been an inspiration to her family, all of whom have accepted Jesus as their "wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption," and are waiting his return from heaven. All who have named the name of Christ mark this:

Wouldst thou forth to bless
  Because of thine own ground,
Fix well thy center first,
  Then draw the circle round.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, APRIL 26th, 1921. NUMBER 16

Whom will the Lord Assemble at His Coming?

And he will send his messengers with a loud sounding trumpet, and they will assemble his chosen from the four winds, from one extremity of heaven to the other (Matt. 24:31, Diaglott).

WHENEVER A meeting seems to lack spirituality and inspiration, if the leader will quietly introduce the subject of the Lord's coming, what a change takes place: faces brighten, eyes sparkle, voices become animated, and a spirit of attention and alertness prevail. We ask why is this? Simply this, that to a believer there is no subject so near and dear to his heart.

We often sing, and none love more than the writer to do so:

> The Lord is coming, let this be
> The herald note of jubilee;
> And when we meet and when we part
> The salutation from from the heart.

But with all our knowledge of this subject, what do we really understand to be the teaching of the Scriptures upon this glorious subject? In a vague way we understand that "he shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice" (Psa. 50:4, 5). We become enthusiastic as we grasp a brother's, sister's hand saying, "One of these days when I am walking along the street the Lord will come and take me away leaving my companion behind," etc; probably we may quote Luke 17:36: "Two men shall be in the field: the one shall be taken and the other left," to support this view We should all be thankful to our heavenly Father, his word is so written that it is only after prayer and diligent study that with Paul we can say. "Which things also we speak, not in the word which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Spirit teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (1 Cor. 2:13, 14). "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15).

Now what does Jesus mean by two men being in a field? Let us begin like a skillful musician to enquire. "What is the key?" If we know the key, then as we play our part, harmony will prevail; if in a wrong key, discord surely will result.

In Matt. 13:38, 39 Jesus says, "The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom, but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels." Then the field is the world, that is clear. Now who are the two men? 1 Cor. 15:44-49 will answer this. Paul reasons that God deals only with two men, the natural and the spiritual. At the sound of the last trump Jesus will gather to himself, who? the natural man? No, indeed: Paul says, and to this Jesus agrees, John 1:9-13, "the spiritual," the spiritual man of whom Jesus is the head. Again Jesus says, "I tell you in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other shall be left" (Luke 18:34).

What night is this? Jesus says, "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work. As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world" (John 9:4 5). Probably Paul will help us to see this a little clearer. In Rom. 13:11, 12: "And that knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep, for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness and let us put on the armor of light."

Listen again, Ferrer Fenton in his translation, will bloom this bud out for us: 1 Thess. 5:3-8: "When they shall say, peace and security, then suddenly destruction seizeth them as the agony of woman with child; and they cannot escape. But you, brethren, are not in darkness so that that day should seize you like a thief; for you are all sons of light and sons of day. We are neither of night nor of darkness, consequently we do not sleep as the rest, but we keep guard and are sober. For the sleepers sleep at night, and the drunkards are drunk at night, but we, being of day, are sober, clothed in a breastplate of faith and love, and a helmet a hope of, salvation."

Isaiah says, "The morning cometh, also the night" (Isa 21:12). Jesus, quoting Dan. 12:1, describing this night says: "For there shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, nor ever shall be" (Matt. 24:21).

What bed are these two men lying in? Read Isa. 28:14-22. This bed is the bed of wickedness and false doctrines taught and espoused by the false church and her daughters; the true church, the spiritual man is exhorted to come out of her (2 Cor. 6:17, 18; Rev. 18:3-9). In Rev. 2:22 Jesus said, "Behold I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation." This is the bed from which one will be taken and the other left; not a literal bed surely.

Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left (Matt. 24:41). What is the thought suggested by the mill? Is it not the place where wheat and other cereals are prepared so that they may be eaten and digested? Who are the two women grinding? Rev. 12:12 reveals to us one woman, the true church, of which Paul says, "This is a great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the church." You recall Jesus with this woman in mind said, "Verily, verily I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven, but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world . . . and Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.' ' Who is feeding this woman today? She is feeding herself through the instrumentality of those elected to serve her (Acts 20:28; 1 Tim. 4:16; 1 Pet. 5:2; 1 Cor. 12).

Who is the other woman? She is clearly portrayed in Rev. 17 and 18. This is the false church, the counterfeit (Isa. 8:12); she is rapidly fulfilling prophecy today concerning the union of Church and state.

The prophet says of her, "To the law and its evidence if they do not speak in accordance with it there is no day break for them; but a passing over to distress and hunger; and when they hunger and suffer and curse their king (the pope) and their God (wealth) they will examine the sky (their government) and search the earth (Democracy), but only see trouble and darkness, oppressive blackness and driving gloom" (Isa. 8:20-23; Fentor's translation).

Our Lord's disciples then asked this question, "Where Lord?" now notice Jesus' reply, "Where the body is, there also the eagls will be assembled" (Diaglott). Jesus is on the eve of returning, "When he shall come in the glory of his Father with his holy angels" (Matt. 16:27). What angels are these? I wonder if they are not the angels Jesus calls "Their angels who behold the face of our Father in heaven" (Matt. 18:10)? Why our angels? Who knows us better than they? and where think you they will look for us? In Babylon? being fed and nourished by the false woman? Nay, nay; they will look for us wherever the "body is"; and if we are not feeding there the night will close upon us, with all its gloom and sadness and the prophetic words will come true: "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved" (Jer. 8:20).

Love and Service

MOSES SAID to Israel: "What doth the Lord thy God require of thee but to fear the Lord thy God and to walk in his ways, and to love him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all the soul. To keep the commandments of the Lord and his statute, which I command thee this day for thy good."

"Loving is trusting;" it cannot otherwise prove itself to be love. It is faith made alive by obedience; "faith without works is dead."

Loving and serving are so intimately connected that we cannot separate them in our thoughts. The loving child if its love be genuine love will give quick and unquestioning obedience to the commands of its parents, even if such commands do upset some cherished plan or deny them any seemingly innocent pleasure. They trust here because they love. "Father is older and wiser than we, and would not ask us to give up anything that is for our good," is the attitude of loving children.

Just so must it be with those who desire to "enter the door into the sheepfold," and become the children of God, and bear the brand marks of the Lord Jesus. They must not balk at the very command that gives them entrance inte the fold. God is a great and wonderful God, we cannot understand how great and wonderful he is until we look into the starry worlds that he has made and learn how many billions and trillions of miles away some of the most beautiful of them are. Would such a God ask anything of us that was unwise or unresonable? Water is a cleansing purifying element. It cannot of itself wash away sin, but God has seen fit to make it the gateway to pardon and to life. He commands us to come to Jesus through that very door, and through no other. To how many will the plaintive words of Jesus be said, "Ye would not come unto me that ye might have life." "You choose death rather than life."

A servant is "a doer," "a tiller," "a slave." He binds himself to God as such according to the terms laid down in the Scriptures of truth. God accepts him as a servant when those terms are complied with "Ye are bought with a price; henceforth ye are not to serve sin." That master is considered dead, when once we have been buried with Christ and have been resurrected from the watery grave to a new life under a new master.

Sin is disobedience to God. It is refusal to keep his commands. We are serving satan when we serve sin, and "the wages of sin is death," while contrariwise, "the gift of God" for loving service "is eternal life." No universalism in this proposition.

But do we understand what it is to serve God? Is it not to yield ourselves wholly to him, all that we have and are? Not to please ourselves but him who has called us to glory and virtue. We must be different from the men and women of the world. We must no longer be mean and hateful, "picking at every flaw we see." All the bad feelings, thoughts, words and actions must be put away forever. Just as Brother S. H. Thomas says, we must learn the Scriptures by heart by putting them into practice in our daily lives. That is the true way to memorize them. God wants dear pure lives, and we can only make our lives clean and pure by "obeying the truth."

There is a great deal said in both the Old and the New Testaments about service, and we gather from it all that much more is required of the servants of God than the constant recognition of him in worship at appointed sanctuaries. If we love God, we will love not only our brethren, but lost sinners as well, we will be "tilers" in God's great vineyard; we will do the work that Jesus put into our hands to do when he went away; we will go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, if not personally, by sending others. God's vineyard is world-wide. Jesus died to save all races, all colors of men. Israel is to adorn herself with these as a bride adorns herself with her ornaments.

God has jewels in all continents. Young boy converts have been beaten and imprisoned in these heathen lands just recently, for daring to read the Bible to their fellows, and have sung on in prison in the same fashion that Paul and Silas did, until their jailers finding repeated punishment powerless to restrain them, have let them go. And the prayers of one native Adventist convert saved the mission church from being destroyed by fire: God turning the wind right about when the flames had almost reached the buildings. Love reaches out to save even these, knowing that " God is no respecter of persons.'

The apostles were missionaries; their converts were missionaries. Paul went to Arabia, to Asia Minor, to Spain, to the British Isles. Peter to the far East, the followers of Paul to the farthest confines of Europe. We too must go into the dark places of the earth, until the gospel has reached all nations as a witness. This is service. It is fulfilling the golden rule. It is doing to others as we would be done by. It is heeding the pleading cry of these poor searchers after God—the heartbreaking cry of "O why did you not come to tell us of Jesus before?"

And there are other things that belong to the service of love. We must "deal justly, love mercy, walk humbly before God." All that we can do to draw men to God is service to him. All that we can do to make men cleaner, happier, wiser in a right way is service. Nations can serve by molding their laws after the pattern given in his book, individuals by molding their lives by the life of Jesus.

Only the pure in heart can ever look on the face of God. And to be pure in heart we must both love and serve in obedience to our kind and loving Father. God help us to rightly love and trust, and serve, that we may be saved when Jesus comes.

For the time hastens on
When the bright day will dawn,
And the king in his glory descend;
We shall soon hear the song
Of the glorified throng
And the anthem that never shall end.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

Some one has said. "There are five B's that make lots of honey and never sting: B—True, B—Pure, B—Strong, B—Gentle, B—Obedient."

"I have Kept the Faith"

2 Tim. 4: 7

AT THE end of a long career, during which all his extraordinary powers had been engaged in "this one thing," Paul honestly could state, "I have kept the faith."

What was the faith that Paul kept with such absolute fidelity ? It was the faith which God had in him. He set out with all zeal to realize the divine purpose for him. He was called to become God's foremost herald, commissioned to be the apostle to the Gentiles. Comfort, convenience, cost ; their presence or absence, did not nor could not stop him. He was not disobedient to the heavenly vision ; he kept the faith which God had in him.

Again, the faith that Paul kept was the faith that he had in God. Even before he became a Christian Paul was faithful in what he did. Study the circumtsances carefully, remembering his remark that his conscience was clear, and you will see before you a man who made it the business of his life to keep the faith no matter what the cost.

After Paul knew and had accepted God's plan of salvation ; acknowledging Jesus as the Christ of the Son of God, he never had any doubt as to duty. Yet, rash as he was inclined to be in his burning enthusiasism, he was not in the least rash at this time. For three years he was in Arabia. He was not idle ; a man of his character never could be. He was preparing himself, or better, God was preparing him out there in the open places, as he prepared Moses for his wonderful work. In this patient, laborious preparation, submissive to the divine guidance, he shows forth his faith in God. Survey his after life ; three great missionary journeys ; disease ; a thorn in the flesh ; mobbed and stoned and left for dead ; a prisoner at Philippi ; Jerusalem, Cesarea, Rome : beaten with rods, not once but thrice ; in perils at sea, including a shipwreck ; in perils by robbers on various occasions – these simply are some of the hindrances, in spite of which he persisted in his beneficent work, demonstrating his unfailing faith in God. He established churches in Asia Minor and in Europe. He visited Jerusalem and made report of his stewardship. He wrote his epistles, a lasting monument of his devotion. And, finally, he sealed his fidelity with his life. His all was on the altar. Nothing was withheld. Only thus could he keep the faith, the faith which God had in him, the faith which he had in God .

When the Christian reads the story he is impelled to ask, "Have I kept the faith ?" He might even go further and ask what that faith is. It is the same faith that Paul kept. It is the faith that God had in him. In God's plan he has a place for each man who has accepted Jesus as the Christ, the Son of God. It always is a good place—never an easy place. This place assigned us by God should reveal to us the divine value God places on those who co-work with him. It will correspond in the humblest Christian's life to that which made Abraham the father of the faithful, Joseph the preserver of the people in Egypt, Moses the lawgiver, Isaiah the Messianic prophet, John the Baptist the forerunner, and Paul the apostle to the Gentiles. To each of us, as of the worthies of old, he has given some specific work which he expects us to perform. To meet the expectations of God is to keep the faith. Assuredly, God will not be disappointed if our faith in God, matching his faith in us, is lived up to, as it was in the life of the apostle Paul. Thus we perfect our career of faith. Hardness should be accepted and endured as good soldiers of Jesus Christ. Difficulites and problems should not be ignored as non-existent. They should be earnestly, prayerfully considered, not with the idea of escaping them, but with the confident expectation of triumphing over them. If God has faith in us, leading him to intrust great responsibilities to us, let us be confident that he will not leave us to carry a load so heavy that it would crush us. Working by ourselves it would crush us; but God is working with us : he is helping bear the burden. The work is God's, and if we will but keep the faith we can not fail, for he will be with us all along the journey.

Paul has a vision. It was a clear conception of God's faith in him, of what God wanted and expected him to do. It was, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." Big as the duty was the load would have been much heavier on shoulders and heart if he did not carry it. He carried it ; he fought a good fight ; he kept the faith, because he knew that God was with him.

Brethren, be not fearful of the heavenly vision ! Watch, listen, feel, search for and find it. It is God's revelation to you. Never halting, never faltering, match it by your faith in God, declaring God' revelation to you. It is your supreme fortune. It is God's measure of faith in you. Never halting, never faltering, match it by your faith in God, declaring with the apostle, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith ; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge shall give me at that day : and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

A. D. DONALDSON.

The Good Samaritan

THIS PARABLE is different from others we have examined, as it deals with an ethical, or moral subject. The Jews in the days of the ministry of Jesus, were lacking in the very necessary trait of neighborly kindness. They had passed beyond the requirement of the law on this subject and thought that a neighborly kindness was of little value.

It is not difficult to understand why Jesus spoke this parable. It was in answer to a question asked by a certain lawyer. He no doubt was of the pharisee class. Knowing of their habits, it is easy to imagine that they had just had a controversy with Jesus, and met with a defeat. They therefore sent one whom they thought well versed in the learning of the day. It is evident that he was not sincere, as he tempted Jesus and asked, "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life ?" Jesus quickly called his attention to the Scriptures and said unto him, "What is written in the law ? how readest thou ?" The lawyer was a very willing witness and answered : "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbor as thyself. Jesus said, Thou hast answered right ; this do and thou shalt live."

As is the character of most lawyers, he must justify himself and asked, "Who is my neighbor ?" He pretended to know what it meant to love God, yet he hypocritically asked the above question. It is evident that, if he knew the answer to the first question, he also knew how to answer the second. Jesus could have readily answered his question but desired to have the lawyer answer his own question ; therefore he spake the parable. Notice how cunningly Jesus chose his characters as the frame work of his parable. The first one was a certain man (evidently a Jew) who went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, who robbed him and left him wounded.

Here is one who needs a neighborly kindness , and we would suppose that the first one passing that way would care for him ; but not so. By chance there came down a certain priest, and when he saw him he passed by on the other side. And likewise a Levite when he was at the place, came and looked upon him, and passed by on the other side. But a certain Samaritan as he journeyed, came where he was : and when he saw him had compassion on him, and went to him and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn and took care of him. Here is an act which answered every requirement of the law. The Samaritan was the neighbor to the wounded man and not the lawyer, the priest, nor the Levite. The Samaritans were classed as non-Jews and were regarded by all Jews as a mixed race. When Jesus finished the parable he asked the lawyer which of three was neighbor unto him that fell among thieves ? There was but one answer ; he that showed mercy on him. Then said Jesus, Go thou and do likewise. With a few concluding remarks we will leave our exposition to our readers. It is our purpose to shed some light on the acts of the characters introduced into the parable. The scene as given is a wounded man stripped of his clothing and in need of help. A priest and a Levite passed by and rendered no aid. Both were connected with the temple service and probably returning from or to Jerusalem. It is difficult to understand how these two temple servants could treat an unfortunate person so cruelly. To love God as the law required should arouse in them a desire to help when needed. When we are able to analyse one sentence as given in the parable we are able to trace and see the cause. It is this, he had compassion on him. These temple servants were without compassion. One of the objects Jesus had in giving this parable was, we think, to show the hypocrisy of the scribes and pharisees. They stood behind the lawyer who came to tempt Jesus that his words might be used to condemn him before the Jewish high court. Instead the lawyer was led to answer his own question. Jesus answered him, Go thou and do likewise, which inferred that the lawyer was without the love of God and brotherly love. The pharisees were a bigoted and egotistical class. Their alms giving and prayers were condmned by Jesus in his sermon on the mount.

Biblical Usage of "Today"

IN TALKING with a Lutheran recently, in answer to his quotation of the Savior's reply and promise to the thief on the cross, I spoke about the placing of the comma as I have heard our people do so many times, and was met by the statement that the word "today" would be superflous if the comma should be placed after it. He also asked why Jesus would use the word in that way. I would be grateful for any help on this subject.

Yours in hope,

FLORENCE S. HANSEN.

Editorial Comments

IF THE Lutheran referred to in the above letter had been in the place of the thief as he hung there on the cross, with only a few hours at most, to live, he would not have thought the word "today" superfluous. "Today" was of great importance to him, for it was his last day of life.

When the comma is placed after "today," the grouping of the words places the emphasis on "today." This is in perfect harmony with the thought conveyed to the thief by the Lord's answer. The thief had asked a question relating to another day in the far off future, the day of his coming into his kingdom, of which no doubt the thief had heard him preach as he went about preaching the good news of a coming kingdom. He asked to be remembered at that time. His words were: "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." This gave the Master the opportunity to manifest his love and mercy as well as his power and authority, although impaled upon the cross. Taking advantage of the opportunity he publicly rewarded the repentance and faith of the thief by saying to him in effect: "It is not necessary for you to wait until that day when I come into my kingdom to be remembered; I give you that assurance now. 'I say unto thee today, thou shalt be with me in paradise.'" And so the thief died in peace with the blessed assurance given to him on the day of his death that he would be remembered in the day of Christ's coming into his kingdom. Where is paradise? Where was the paradise that was lost? On earth. Then it must be regained on earth. It will be, when the kingdom of God on earth transforms the earth into the garden of the Lord.

Doing Our Bit

OUR MASTER'S return draws near: how near, we know not. It is time for each of us to take stock of ourselves to see whether we have been making full use of every opportunity that he has given us to serve him. It is not enough to just be good. If we would gain the crown of life we must conquer, and to conquer we must fight, for "he that is not with me is against me, and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad" (Matt. 12:30). Christ wants active, not passive, disciples (Rev. 3:15, 16).

Besides this high calling all of earth's glories and pleasures become as naught. Should we not, when contemplating the glorious reward set before us, labor the more earnestly to make our calling and election sure (Jam. 2:17-20)? There is something for each one to do, and no matter how small, how unimportant it may be, we will be held responsible if we neglect its performance (Jam. 4:17). We cannot all be ministers, or evangelists, or even teachers; but if in every little act of our daily life we do all to the glory of God, that is acceptable with him. Some of us can write; some can give money to proclaim the truth somewhere, but the foundation of the big things is the cultivation of those little qualities of character which mark every true follower of Christ.

Let us then seek for every chance to serve our Master, directly or indirectly, for our Christian growth depends upon activity just as surely as does our muscular development (Eccl. 9:10). If we are not to hide our light under a bushel, we must become a shining example to all the world, else our light may go out for lack of air. "For yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry" (Heb. 10:37). And when he does come may he not find us asleep.

The Master will knock at my door some night:
And there 's the silence, hushed and dim,
Will wait for my coming with lamp alight,
To open immediately to him.

I wonder if I, at his knock shall spring
In eagerness up, and cross the floor,
With rapturous step, and freely fling
In the murk of the midnight, wide the door.

Or will there be work to put away?
Or the taper that burns too low to trim?
Or something, to cause too much delay,
To open immediately to him?

Communication

"They Spake Often One to Another"

TO THE BRETHREN AND SISTERS IN CHRIST:

I HAVE intended writing to you through The Restitution for some time but others seem to write so much better than I, and I have found almost every point of interest discussed, and so have remained a quiet listener, as it were. Now in the issue of March 8th, Sister Frances Zeller asks why more of the Bereans do not write.

Perhaps others hesitate for the same reason that I have given. But any of us can say how much we appreciate the words of those who do write. How much help and comfort they bring into our lives. If it were not for The Restitution and its staff of willing workers, I would hardly know there were any members in our church. I have enjoyed "Good Company" and found comfort and help in each article and poem.

Two Symbolic Beasts

Rev. 13

A KNOWLEDGE of these two symbols and their correspondence in history, will furnish the watcher with a good understanding of the signs that herald the return of the Master.

Vs. 1: "And I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name of blasphemy."

The sea out of which this symbol came is the same source from which came Daniel's four beasts of chapter seven; and by his ten horns we know him as Daniel's fourth beast.

Vs. 2: "And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power and his seat, and great authority."

This verse is entirely for identification. This symbol is like a leopard because Rome had conquered Greece, and the Greeks were incorporated into the Roman Empire.

This same principle of incorporating one nation in to another holds good to the feet of the bear, Medo-Persia, and to the mouth like a lion, Babylon. This same principle is revealed when the fourth beast is described as going into the "burning flame." As it is written, "As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time" (Dan. 7:12).

The same principle applies to the destruction of the metalic image, "Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloor" (Dan. 2:35).

Vs. 3: "And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast." the seven heads of the beast are figuratively based on the seven hills upon which Rome is built: and in Rev. 17:9 we read, the seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth. Here one figure is transferred to another, but the mountain is one easily understood. "And it shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow into it" (Isa. 2:2). Here we learn that the "mountian," the "head," represents a government, and seven heads on one symbol must represent seven forms of government in one empire: and as John says: "Five are fallen, one is, and the other is not yet come," they must be successive (Rev. 17:10).

There is a fact in connection with these seven heads that confirms the foregoing exposition, and that is, the beast has eight heads (Rev. 17:11). "And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition." Why does the symbol have only seven heads, when the empire has eight? The answer is, Rome is built upon seven hills, and to bind the symbol to Rome, the symbol must have also seven heads; otherwise it would not represent Rome. The reader will notice that although Constantine removed the seat of goverament from Reme to Constantinople; yet the prophecy follows the fortune of Rome. It was Rome that suffered by the northern invaders, even to the ceasing of the imperial succession in Reme A. D. 476.

And of these seven heads John says: "The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth: and they are seven kings; five are fallen, one is, the other is not yet come: and when he cometh, he must continue a little while" (Rev. 17: 9, 10. R. V.)

Kings always imply kingdoms (Dan. 7:17, 18). Five were fallen in John's day, and the one that was, was the imperial that ended in A. A.476 when Odoacer became king of Italy. The head of short duration, short when compared with the imperial sixth head, and more so when compared with the eighth or papal head, that has lasted longer than all the seven added together.

The wounding of the imperial sixth head of the "dreadful and terrible" Roman empire, was a large affair: it was done by the "great sword" of the second seal (chap. 6:4).

The infliction of the deadly wound was a long process, that took for its accomplishment more than one hundred years. Commencing with Rome's great war with Persia in the third century, and continuing during the sounding of the first four trumpets of chapter eight. The enemies of Rome being led by Alaric, Genseric, Attila, and Odoacer, who became king of Italy in A. D. 476, when the imperial succession ceased in Rome. During the fifth century Rome was depressed, suffering from the deadly wound. What authority she had left was vested in the exarchate, and in the senate.

Here Rome is suffering from the effects of the deadly wound she received by the sword of the northern invaders of the empire, the seat of government is removed to Constantinople, but all this misfortune aided greatly the rising power of the bishops of the church, who gradually took charge of the civil, as well as of the spiritual affairs of the empire.

Paul, speaking of the rise of the man of sin says: "And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time. For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now hindereth will hinder until he be taken out of the way" (2 Thess. 2:6, 7).

The civil power being moved to Constanainople, the way was open for the rise of the papacy in the city of the seven hills. Therefore we read: "And there was given unto him (the beast) a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies, and power was given unto him to continue (margin, to make war) forty and two months" (vs 5).

This in symbolic time is the 1260 years reign of the papacy: the same as in Dan. 7:25 where the saints are given "into his hand until a time, and times, and the dividing of time." The emperor Phocas gave the saints into his hand in A. D. 610, the period ending in 1870 when the pope lost his civil power. And now notice, as soon as the beast receives "the mouth" it is written, "And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God," etc.

The Roman empire is now controlled by the papacy: in fact the papacy is the last phase of the empire, the eighth head (Rev. 17:8) "And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them." Yes, Daniel says, "He shall speak great words against the Most High and shall wear out the saints of the Most High" (Dan. 7:25). "And unto the angel of the church in Sardis write: These things saith he that hath the seven spirits of God, and the seven stars; I know thy works that thou hast a name that thou livest and art dead" (Rev. 3:1).

The death state of the church in Sardis synchronizes with the death state of the two witnesses of chapter eleven. Their dead bodies lay 3½ days in the street of the great city which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt: evidently spiritual Babylon. The 3½ days are literally 3½ years. The true witness set before the church of Philadelphia an open door and the Reformation came, and thereby the spirit of life entered into the witnsses, and they stood upon their feet. The death and resurection of the witnesses are not literal: they were silenced and ceased to bear testimony. In 1523 after the Reformation had broken out, we find pope Hadrian saying in a missive to the Diet of Nuremburg. "The heretics Huss and Jerome are now alive again in the person of Martin Luther."

The papal horn was to "wear out the saints" (Dan. 7:25). The church of Sardis had a name to live "but was dead" (Rev. 3:1) The two witnesses "lay dead" 3½ days (Rev. 11:8). The beast "overcomes" the saints (Rev. 13:7). A. D. 610 to 187 measures the reign of the papacy as a civil power during which he had power to "make war," margin of verse 5.

"If any man have an ear, let him hear" (vs. 9). Our Lord had a custom of using this exclamation at the ending of one subject, and before the beginning of another. It is found at the ending of each message to the seven churches. "He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity; he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword: here is the patience and the faith of the saints" (vs. 10).

Here the Master uses a little philosophy; the beast having led millions into captivity, and he finally goes into captivity; and the patience of the mass of the saints was during his reign.

Remarks

ON THE first day of the month in company with Brother Morris Zeller, who had been making us a few days visit, we started for Palmer, Neb., where we arrived at 4 P. M.. After arriving at Tycher Zeller's and enjoying a good supper, they went to the phone and gave out the meeting, and in the course of an hour we were there, with a hundred per cent of the brethren in attendance; and it kept up for two weeks, although the roads were very bad and at last they had to use teams instead of cars.

It was a pleasure each evening to see every brother and sister in the community present. Sister Lambertson, who lives farthest away, came and stayed with her parents, Brother and Sister Forbes, and attended the meeting. Sister Lambertson has been in poor health, but we should praise the Lord that he permitted her to recover her strength, so that she could come and be present at every meeting. Sister Lambertson is a living example of faithfulness in teaching and bringing up her children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. I wonder if we fully realize what it means to be faithful. It is so easy to grow careless in these days of indifference. I do not say this to find fault, but to admonish all to faithfulness to God and his truth. If anything must be neglected, let it always be other things, and not the Lord's work. There may be things not wrong of themselves, but if by indulging in them we have to neglect or put off the Lord's work, it makes it a sin.

We learn a good many things by comparison. We often hear people say Sunday school or preaching holds too long, but who ever heard any one say the party was held too late? The one is enjoyed to the end if it does not come till the morning; but the other drags if it lasts a couple of hours. Where our treasure is, our heart is also. Let us get our hearts firmly fixed on the works of God, and forget the worldly frivolities. In the above meeting, I gave nearly all the first week to the text in 2 Tim. 4:7, 8, and dwelt mostly on the part that says, "Not to me only, but to all who love his appearing." We showed that before we love anything it is necessary for it to possess some qualities worthy of love. Then why should we love the appearing of Jesus? Because there must be something in it worthy of love. If it is true that when Jesus comes everything is to be destroyed, and is blackened and charred with the fire of God's wrath how could we say we love his appearing?

Again, people say that Jesus comes when anyone dies, and that is all the coming taught in the Bible. We could not love that kind of appearing. Do you love to think that Jesus has come, and taken away your loved ones? I think not; but when we see the present condition of the world, politics, social, and religion, and remember when Jesus comes these things will be righted, we can love his appearing then. Turn and read Isa. 2:1-4. There we are told that the nations are taught from Mount Zion and Jerusalem; from there the people are to be judged. Where do we now get the laws that govern us? From Washington, D. C.: in England, from London; in France, Paris; and so on; but then we will get it from Jerusalem. And what will be the result? They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

Now if a league of nations, or an association of nations can accomplish this, then the Bible is a failure, and the coming of Christ and his rule is a myth. If the Baptist church, to which president Harding belongs, had taught him the truth, he not only would have rejected the league of nations, but never even talked of an association of nations, and never would have held out any hope to the people that anyone could bring about universal peace. He would have said, "We will do the best we can under human rule, and wait for the Divine to work out the perfect government." As it is, Mr. Harding is destined to disappointment, and when the people see that he has failed they will blame him and call him a failure, and he will not be able to deny the fact. Who will he blame for the failure? He should blame the Baptist church, but he won't for he will still be in the dark.

Mr. Wilson tried to bring about this, all contrary to God's word and plan, and collapsed under the strain. Every one who follows such a plan will collapse, and so in the wind up the church which should have taught these truths must also collapse. If in past years they had pointed out plain statements of Scripture, and taught accordingly, when the supreme moment of his political career came, they would have said, "Mr. Harding, go ahead and give us the best rule a Christian gentleman still in the mortal state can give; but we must wait for Jesus to give us the perfect rule." Would the church of God send a man to the presidential chair under these false hopes? You say no. Then what are you doing to get the people to see that they are building on false hopes, and are destined to woefull disappointment?

I am crying aloud against these false hopes, and am trying to turn their eyes toward the coming of Jesus, which is the only true hope, hoping to reach some listening ear and willing heart. Are you, my brethren, doing your share? Have you told your neighbor you were not against the league of nations because you were a Republican, or the association of nations because you were a Democrat, but because you are a Christian, and believe that Jesus is to do that work? They might surprise you by believing, and on the other hand, might surprise you by saying when it is too late, "If you had only told me of those things," and their blood be on your heads.

The last week we gave to lecturing on the book of Esdras, but we have not the time here to speak of the nature of it; but suffice it to say the church was aroused as they have not been for some time. We then bid them good by and once more started for home, and on the following Sunday held meeting in Omaha, when part of the brethren from Kennard and Avery came and we had a house full and good fellowship. I forgot to mention that the last week at Palmer one outside family became very much interested; and may yet be obedient. The following Friday after the meeting in Omaha, wife and I went to Blair and stayed over Sunday. We held the meeting at Sister John's and had all we could seat. They came from Kennard and Bennington, and on Sunday brought their dinners, and we had an all day meeting, which we all enjoyed very much. Because of a wedding the following week at Palmer, I was compelled to close on Sunday night with the promise of coming again as soon as convenient. I am now in Missouri to defend the truth against error in a 12 day discussion at Buckhart.

We hope to have something interesting to report in our next. In the meantime we ask other points to be patient; we will reach you soon as possible.

REPORT

THE EXECUTIVE board of the National Bereans was held in Chicago, March 26th, 1921. The meeting was called to order by the president, Leila E. Whitehead. Psalms 112 was read by Leland T. Hanson, followed by prayer by Clyde Randall. The Recording Secretary was absent so the minutes of the last meeting were not read. L. B. Hanson was appointed Secretary, Pro. Tem.

Reports from the various departments were read and approved. All showed much progress.

The program for the Eighth Annual Conference was arranged. After the new business it was moved to adjourn.

Leota B. Hanson, Sec. pro. tem.

The next annual Berean Conference will be held in Oregon, Ill., at the close of Bible School. Date not yet decided.

A LETTED FROM OUR ISOLATED DEPT.

DEAR ONES IN THE TRUTH:

HOW I would like to be with you all at this meeting, but as we cannot come to both meetings, have decided in favor of the Oregon Conference. I sometimes think if only I were rich how I would help the Lord's work and attend every meeting "far and near" but the Master knows I would not do it after all, I suspect, so keeps our noses to the grind-stone.

I have written 288 letters since my last report and received 135 answers.

To further the work, some one in each state should be appointed to round up the isolated, get all the names they could, every way they can and threaten some dire calamity or exposure through our papers if they do not write in answer to the questions you ask, and really take some interest in our Lord's work and not let every day affairs crowd out the Berean work, etc.

Sister Drew sent me such a good outline of questions for isolated Bereans to answer, and do you think but two [illegible] answer? Why cannot things be stirred up, and perhaps the isolated would send in their own names if they knew the name and address of a worker in their own state. I even wrote to what few state presidents I had to please appoint one on the isolated committee, only one answered and on writing to the one name given, my plea was not noticed and nothing was done. Now how can we accomplish anything worth while? Some one should write a notice to all the papers just showing how shiftless and careless it is, and how very dangerous to neglect the work of this kind.

I have written between six and seven hundred letters, received over three hundred replies and almost everyone a social letter never answering a single question, I asked. I try to put it up to them, how important the work is, right now, when we are expecting the Lord's return any day.

My prayers are with you all and hope you will be guided aright and for the best in your efforts to advance the work for Christ.

Your loving sister,

Mrs. M. E. BRAY.

FEAR NOT

"Fear not little flock for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

Fear not little flock, 'tis your Father's good pleasure
To give you the kingdom, the robe, and the ring.
Fear not the mad foe, who, beholding your triumph
Pursues to destroy with the merciless sting.
Awake to your birthright! and, guided by wisdom,
Communing with spirit, the quickening dove,
When Jesus comes and establishes his kingdom
You'll rest, safe in joyous, omnipotent love.

BECAUSE I'VE LIVED

As I sit here in the gloaming
  And review the day now o'er,
How much now doth seem its profit
  How much now I must deplore,
And a voice within me whispers,
  Sweet and low I hear it say,
"Is the world a wee bit better
  Because you lived today?

"Has some one whose heart is heavy
  Found new courage in your smile?
Has your kindly understanding
  Made his life to seem worth while?
Is his heart a little lighter,
  Just beause he's passed your way?
If it is, the world is better,
  Because you lived today!

"Do the chilrren run to greet you
  As you join your happy throng?
Do the birds sing all the sweeter
  As an answer to your song?
Are you kind to every creature
  That perchance may pass your way?
If you are, the world is better
  Because you lived today!

"Have you tried to help a sinner,
  Tried to raise him up again?
Have you stifled selfish longings?
  Look within yourself and then
You'll life! perchance be lifted!
  And, who knows? perhaps there may
Be a song of joy in heaven
  Because you lived today."

WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT THIS?

ONE OF our readers has suggested that we open a department entitled such as, Question: Who said, "Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness." Answer: Jesus (Luke 11:35). We want to know what you think concerning it?

Should we adopt this suggestion there will be from seven to ten questions each week, answers to appear in a later issue.

Resurrection, Responsibility, and Judgment

PART ONE

ONE OF the greatest questions which confronts all seekers of the truth is, Who will God hold responsible by a resurrection from the dead? This is a very important subject, because there are two classes of people who are recognized with the true church who are extremists on this subject. I will venture to say that these two extremes on this subject cause a greater apostasy in the true church than any other false doctrine. This is because they begin with only a slight deviation from the truth. It is similar to the throwing of a switch on the railroad: where the switch is thrown, the rails move only a few inches, but the slight deviation of these rails from the main line, leads on and on, and before we realize it we are miles from the main track. We never think of anyone who has obeyed the truth apostatizing into Mohammedanism, and rarely in Catholicism, and not very often into Protestantism at large; because these doctrines are at right angles with the truth. The human mind could not make so sharp a turn as this any easier than a train can take a switch at right angles with the main line.

Therefore we need not fear these false doctrines destroying the true church, as much as the two extremes under discussion. There are two humanly conceived extremes on every doctrine of the Bible. We will only take time to illustrate by two. Thus we have drunkards and gluttons on the one hand; and prohibitionists, total abstainers, and hunger strikers on the other. The Bible stands on the middle ground. "Be temperate in all things" (1 Cor. 9:25; 2 Pet. 1:6). Again, we have the doctrine of the immortality of the soul on the one hand; and the doctrine of annihilation on the other. One teaches man never dies; the other teaches that he dies for ever. The Bible points again to the middle ground, by teaching that man is mortal (Job 4:17; Rom. 8:11), and can die forever, but also that he can live forever by obeying God's great plan of salvation through Jesus Christ.

The Bible also stands between the two extremes under examination. Now we will examine them from a logical standpoint.

First, we will examine the doctrine of the extremists who believe that God will not hold any one responsible who has not been baptized into the faith. They believe that it makes no difference how well a man may know the truth, if he does not obey God's commandments by baptism, God will not hold him responsible for transgressing his laws. These extremists cause great havoc in the true church by teaching their children and others who probably would come into the church, that if they have any temporal ambitions to be gratified that are inconsistent with the commandments of God, then do not obey God by being baptized. Then you will not be held responsible. The results of this teaching should be apparent to any mediocre mind. It dissuades their children and others from obeying the commands of God, instead of persuading and encouraging them. This extreme has the same result as the other extreme, that is, the doctrine of universal resurrection and posthumous probation. Under the doctrine of the first extreme, one can wilfully disobey God's laws, sin against the Holy Spirit, enjoy all the pleasures of this life whether consistent with the laws of God or not, and still sleep a sweet perpetual sleep, and never be disturbed: under the doctrine of the other extreme one can also enjoy all the pleasures of this age, have what the world calls "a good time" whether congenial with the will of God or not, and still be saved in the next dispensation. Consequently we see that these two extremes foster disobedience, wickedness and immorality; instead of fostring obedience, love and zeal.

Or[illegible] B[illegible] College
Or[illegible]

We will now view these two extremes with the searchlight of Scripture. First, we will view the doctrine of the extremists who believe that God will only hold those responsible who have been baptized. They claim, as Paul states, "where no law is, there is no transgression" (Rom. 4:15); and, "For as many as have sinned without law, shall also perish without law" (Rom. 2:12). Therefore as no Gentile is under law before he comes into covenant relationship with God by baptism, and does not have any personal sins to give an account of consequently he has no need of a judgment.

This doctrine destroys the very object for which Christ was sacrificed, that is for the remission of sins (Rom. 3:25). If one does not have any sins imputed unto him before he is baptized, what is the motive of being baptized for the remission of sins (Acts 22:16)? Let us now examine Rom. 2:12 carefully. What does Paul mean by the phrase, "sinned without law"? can a person sin without a law? Paul says "no" in Rom. 4:15, and we agree with him. But Paul here is speaking of the knowledge of law. A person can sin without a knowledge of law, but it is not imputed. Therefore as many as have sinned without a knowledge of the law will perish without the knowledge of law; and as many as have sinned with a knowledge of the law, will be judged by the law. Therefore it is the knowledge of God's law that causes sin to be imputed, and consequently causes responsibility (Rom. 3:20). "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him is (imputed) sin" (James 4:17). "Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin" (Rom. 4:8).

What law is Paul speaking about in Rom 2:12? He is not referring only to the Mosaic law; because if that were true, all the Gentiles (which would include us too) would perish without the Mosaic law. Paul here is speaking of the two laws which he also speaks of in Rom. 8:2: "For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus (the gospel) hath made me free from the law of sin and death" (Mosaic law); and also the laws of God which were before the Mosaic law, that the Mosaic law was added to because of transgression (Gel. 3:19) There had to be a law before the Mosaic law or there could not have been any transgression. Therefore Paul is speaking of all the laws of God in general or God's great plan of salvation which was given under three dispensations from Adam until the second coming of Christ.

Under the first dispensation, that is, from Adam to Moses, they were under the laws of God and the gospel (good tidings of the kingdom) which preached unto them faith and obedience in Christ through sacrifice. Paul says, "The gospel was preached unto them as well as unto us, but it did not profit them, because it was not mixed with faith" or because of unbelief (Heb. 4:2, 6). The gospel was preached unto Adam and Eve (Gen. 3:15). If Cain did not know the law, or was not instructed what kind of sacrifice to offer unto the Lord, would God have said unto him "If thou doeth well, shalt thou not be accepted" (Gen. 4:7)? If Enoch did not know the gospel, could he have prophesied of the second coming of Christ (Jude)? Noah was a preacher of righteousness (2 Pet. 2:5). The gospel was preached unto Abraham; and God blessed him because he obeyed his voice, statutes and laws (Gen. 26:5; Gal. 8, 16).

During the second dispensation, from Moses unto Christ, they were under the Mosaic laws also, which were added because of transgression (Gal 3:19). This also proves that there were laws of God before the Mosaic law; because if there were not, then there could not have been any transgression (Rom. 4:15). It was added to the laws and the gospel already in effect. It did not disannul the laws, the gospel and the covenant which God gave to Abraham (Gal. 3:17). Moses knew the gospel. He prophesied of both the first and second coming of Christ (Deut. 18:15, 18; 33:2, 3). All the prophets searched diligently and prophesied of the grace that should come unto us, by preaching the gospel by the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven (1 Pet. 1:10-12).

During the third dispensation, that is, this dis-dispensation unto the second coming of Christ, we are under the gospel and the laws of Christ. We are not under the Mosaic law or schoolmaster (Gal. 3:25; Acts 15:21; Col. 2:16-22). Paul says in Rom. 1:16, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth: to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (Gentile). It is the faith and obedience to the gospel and laws of Christ in this dispensation that is essential to salvation (1 Cor. 15:1-4; Acts 8:12). So we see that the gospel or God's great plan of salvation has been preached from the downfall of Adam and Eve unto the present day. Therefore all have had a chance; and will not be given another chance. For Paul says that as many as have sinned without the knowledge of the law, shall perish (without a resurrection or judgment) without the knowledge of these laws. God does not conceal or withhold the gospel from the knowledge of anyone. It is the god of this world (the lust of the flesh) that blinds their eyes (2 Cor. 4:3-6). They reject the knowledge of the gospel and God's laws; and judge themselves unworthy of eternal life, and shall perish in their own corruption (Hosea 4:6; Acts 13:46; 2 Pet. 2:12).

It is the knowledge of the law or the light of the glorious gospel of Christ that causes responsibility instead of baptism. Jesus said in John 3:19, "This is the (ground) condemnation that light is come into the world." In 2 Cor. 4:3-6 we learn that the light here spoken of by Jesus is the "light of the glorious gospel of Christ." Jesus in speaking to the pharisees, to whom he had preached the gospel, said, "If ye were blind (ignorant) ye should have no (imputed) sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth" (John 9:40, 41; 15:22). He also said, "The words that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day" (John 12:48).

Responsibility is always commensurate with knowledge. "To whom much is given, of him shall much be required" (Luke 12:47, 48). The logic of this statement should be apparent to all. To whom much is given, much is required; to whom little is given, little is required; and to whom nothing is given, nothing will be required.

In Lev. 4:13-28 where the Lord is instructing Moses concerning sin offering, we read: "If the whole congregation of Israel, a ruler, or one of the common people sin through ignorance, and the thing be hid from their eyes, and are guilty; when the sin which they have committed is known or come to their knowledge: then they shall bring their offering before the Lord." Notice carefully that although they sin through ignorance they are guilty; but their guilt is not imputed unto them until the sin is brought to their knowledge. As soon as sin is made known unto them, "then" and only then, are they commanded to bring a sacrifice unto the Lord. What was the penalty if the sinner did not bring his offering unto the Lord, after the knowledge of his sin? Paul says in Heb. 10:28: "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses." Well, then, what do you think should be the penalty awaiting all those who have received the knowledge of the truth; who have had their sins made known unto them by the gospel (Rom. 3:20), and have despised and disobeyed the comamndments of God, by treading under foot the Son of God, and rejecting God's plan of salvation by not obeying the command, "Ye must be born again" (John 3:3-5; Acts 10:48; 17:30; 2:38). Paul argues that they should receive a much sorer punishment (Heb. 10:29). Therefore they will receive the wages of their sins (imputed unto them by the knowledge of the truth, Rom. 3:20; James 4:17; Luke 12:47) which is the second death (Rom. 6:23).

Now we will view the doctrine of the other extremists who believe in a universal resurrection and posthumous probation with the searchlight of Scripture. We will begin by bombarding the fortresses behind which these extremists hide. They believe because God promised Abraham, "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 12:3), that he will bless all the families of the earth unconditionally. In Jonah 3:4 we read that Jonah cried and said, "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown." In the 10th verse we learn that "God repented of the evil that he had said he would do unto them; and did it not." So we see that the word "shall" does not necessitate God's blessings or curses; but that they are wholly controlled by conditions (Deut. 11:26-28; Psa. 103:17, 18).

These extremists also believe that every individual of the whole house of Israel shall be saved; because God said unto Ezekiel, "Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel" (Ezek. 37:11). We read in Lev. 10:6 that "Moses said unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons, uncover not your heads, neither rend your clothes, lest you die; but let your brethren, the whole house of Israel, bewail the burning which the Lord hath kindled." In this sense, Moses, Aaron, Eleazar and Ithamar are not included in "the whole house of Israel." Therefore we see that God is not speaking of the resurrection of every individual of the house of Israel; but is speaking of Israel as a nation, "all the tribes of the children of Israel" (Rev. 7:4). It would be unreasonable to say that just 144,000 will be saved, no more and no less, as that the "whole house of Israel" means every Hebrew that ever lived.

Who is an Infidel?

ONE WHO does not believe the Bible is the word of God, and does not believe that what is written was written by the supernatural influence of the Spirit of God on the human mind. Neither believes the declaration of Paul: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God" (2 Tim. 3:16) and "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit" (2 Pet. 1:21).

What is it that makes infidels? The thousands of preachers that preach and teach the "false gospel" that was taught in the garden of Eden by the serpent: Ye shall not surely die, but eat the forbidden fruit and ye shall be as gods (Gen. 3:45). This is the doctrine taught to every 999 out of a 1000. And an infidel is one who has studied God's word and finds it does not teach the gospel he has learned so he denounces the Bible and does not try to search the Scriptures to get the truth, but studies the word to find evidence for the popular doctrine of the world.

Who Employs the Devil?

IF AN endless hell of torment for the wicked is a necessary part of God's plan, and if God has to have the devil employed to run the place and keep the fire going, then there is simply no getting around the fact that God and the devil are business associates and good friends. If there is an endless hell of torment in God's scheme at all it is a very important part of the scheme. And surely God would not appoint his very worst enemy to such an important position as General Superintendent of Hell. Supposing for the sake of argument, that God needs an endless hell of torment in his business and supposing that God had employed his enemy to run the place, don't you see that the enemy could take advantage of God and let the thing go smack out? Or he might go to the other extreme and waste the brimstone and burn out the flues and do lots of damage that way. Where there was so much fire there would be constant danger of getting the whole place burnt up. So you see God would need to have a man on the job that he could trust---one who could be depended on at all times to run hell in a perfectly honest and Christian manner.

Now, Buddy, I put it up to you plain and honest: If the devil is as mean and low-down and treacherous and tricky as people say he is, do you honestly believe God would keep such a character on his pay-roll throughout eternity and trust him with all the important business affairs of the Everlasting Fire Works? Huh? What do you think about it? Looks to me like the theologians have got their hind legs so badly tangled in their foresight that they can't tell blue smoke from the breath of a Democratic candidate. The Restoration of Israel and Zionism

THE UNLOCKING of Palestine to modern economic progress was greatly quickened by the Jewish Colonial Trust through its subsidiary financial instrument, the Anglo-Palestine Company, previously mentioned. The latter introduced a modern credit system into the country, and in addition, has encouraged the organization of co-operative credit associations among the tradesmen and farmers. The latter have also organized co-operative selling societies for marketing their products. At the outbreak of the World War, when every other financial agency in the country closed its doors, the Anglo-Palestine Company, owing to the general confidence which it enjoys acted as a great stabalizing force. It issued notes which were accepted as currency and gained general circulation. The Palestine office, like the Anglo-Palestne Company, is another agency of the Zionist Organization for the economic development of Palestine. The office acts chiefly as a clearing house of information and among its other activities it employs agricultural experts for the education of the Jewish farmer.

At one end of the old ramshackle seaport town of Jaffa, a growing suburb has arisen, composed of clean and pretty houses with gardens, front and back, and straight broad streets. at the end of one of which (Heizl Street) stands the handsome buildings of the Hebrew High School. The suburb is called Tel Avid, the Hill of Spring, and it exhales the spirit of the new life, the life of vigor and hope which the Jews have brought to Palestine. The soul of this new life is the old Hebraic spirit in modern garb, and it is this spirit which reigns in the schools and through these in every other sphere of life. The revival of the Hebrew language is perhaps the most extraordinary achievement of Jewish nationalism. This has again become the medium of daily intercourse. It is a living language in the fullest sense of the term. The Hebrew tongue, called a dead language for nearly two thousand years, has, in the Jewish colonies and in Jerusalem, become again the living mother-tongue. The effect of this common language in unifying the Jews is, of course, great; for the Jews of Palestine came literally from all the lands of the earth, each speaking, excepting those who used Yiddish, the language of the country from which he came, and remaining in the main almost a stranger to the other Jews. But the effect of the revival of the Hebrew tongue is far greater than that of unifying the Jews. It is also an important factor in reviving the essentially Jewish spirit. And not only in Palestine, but also in other parts of the world, plans are now under may to standardize and encourage the teaching of Hebrew as the Jewish national language. The following newspaper clipping testifies to this fact:

> Hebrew instructors from all over the United States will meet in Cleveland Saturday to organize a national federation. The convention will be in Cleveland Hebrew College, 2500 E 55th St., and will continue four days. More than 200 delegates, representing about 2000 Hebrew schools, are expected. The purpose, according to Rabbi Samuel Benjamin, of Anshe Emeth Temple, is to standardize the Hebrew language and to encourage teaching it.

Arguments in favor of Yiddish as the national language have ben completely refuted, and there seems to be no doubt that Hebrew is the logical and only language worthy of consideration.

The Jewish schools of Palestine are the crown of modern Jewish achievement in the ancient land. They originated in various ways; they were built and supported by different Jewish organizations, English, French, American, and German. We saw how in 1913 these schools repelled the aggressions of Prussianism, for no matter what their origin, the Hebrew language and the Hebraic spirit are making them all Jewish and nothing else. Moreover, the Zionist Organization itself is now in control of the greater part of the Palestine educational system. From kindergarten through elementary, secondary, vocational and technical schools, it constitutes the beginnings of a national educational system. It needs only the opportunity for normal growth to become again the source whence will issue the word of the Lord. And when, in July 1918, was laid the foundation stone of the Hebrew University on the Mount of Olives, near Jerusalem, Palestine began its function as spiritual fount for the Jewry of the world.

Only passing mention can here be made of some of the other institutions which have been established in Palestine. The Jewish Agricultural Experiment Station near Haifa has already made discoveries which doubtless will benefit humanity at large as well as Palestine. The Bezalel School of Arts and Crafts to which are attached the Bezalel Work-shops, have brought the joy of creative work as well as the means of livelihood to hundreds previously dependent and destitute. Important experiments in co-operative colonization have been made in Merhavia and elsewhere. Hygienic institutes and hospitals have been built, a national library and museum have been founded, as well as other institutions which go to make up the life of a civilized and cultured community. The world war threatened for a time to destroy these tender shoots of the Jewish revival in Palestine. They were enabled to survive, however, thanks chiefly to the liberal and statesmanlike action of the Zionists and Jews generally of America. These Jewish accomplishments in Palestine have already served their chief function: that of demonstrating the ability of the Jewish people for self-determination, and the capacity of Palestine to become again a centre of Jewish civilization.

In England, Disraeli could become Prime Minister and, the first Jewish governing ruler of a Gentile state. In England George Eliot wrote her Zionist novel "Daniel Deronda." In England the God of the early Old Testament, the exacting and unrelenting God who demanded righteousness and who broke the teeth of the wicked, became the daily working God of the Puritans who sang the Psalms through and broke the teeth of Charles the First. In England, first among the countries of the western world the Jews were assured a genuinely free home by Charles the Second in 1644. In England Chaim Weizmann, chemist and Zionist, labored to make a certain chemical which the Admiralty needed for munitions. And after a while the First Lord of the Admiralty was Arthur James Balfour and Chaim Weizmann talked to him about Zionism. Mr. Balfour liked him, and other Britons of authority and power liked him. Weizmann's chemical was a gift to Britain, a free gift, in gratitude for Britain's friendship toward Weizmann's race, but the British government was grateful in its turn. And as the ear 1916 drew to its close there was a new Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. And it was Arthur James Balfour. And the year 1917 came in. It was to be the special year of the modurn resurrection of Israel.

Sister Marvel Gibbs reports that the Fellow Helpers held their fifth meeting of 1921 Friday evening, April 1st, at the home of Brother and Sister Tabor. The meeting was opened with song, and prayer by Brother Daniel Miller. The minutes of the preceding meeting were approved as read. The meeting was then turned over to Brother Eugene Miller, who was the leader for the evening. The lesson on Responsibility and the Resurrection was very ably handled. An account of it appears in this issue of The Restitution. The meeting was then closed with song, and prayer by Brother Prosek.

SUPPORT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

HONEST TEACHING and upright example never fail to win success. Give the Bible school teachers a fair chance and let the parents of the scholars back them up in their good work.

As prepared places are for prepared people, let us see that only competent persons are placed in charge, both as teachers and officers. Then let us make it our business to see that our children are faithful in regular attendance, punctual as to time and diligent in studying their lesosns, that they shall be fitted, when the proper time comes to take their place in the church fulfilling their duties, obligations and privileges.

It is not fair, either to the teachers or the scholars to allow this most important part of education to go by chance. A. D. DONALDSON.

The Christian Pulpit

An Editorial in The Mount Vernon, N. Y. Daily Argus

PERHAPS WE display more courage than discretion when we venture to discuss the pulpit. Be that as it may, however, we hold the conviction that the pulpit, with some exceptions, is failing to achieve greater sucess, because it does not stick to its job.

We do not question the ability of many preachers to discus various social, industrial, political and economic questions intelligently and in an instructive manner. Yet, that is not the job of the preacher.

Teaching the gospel of Jesus Christ is the greatest job in the world, and the man who assumes to do it is cheating the public, if he seeks to command and hold attention by discussing economic, political, social and industrial conditions under the guise of teaching the gospel. These questions are all discussed in the secular press, and most church audiences are "fed up" on them.

There are three prominent influences which operate to bring men within the doors of the church. One: habit. Two: a desire to satisfy curiosity and the itching for something sensational, where a "catchy" theme is announced. Three: true religious heart hunger. Those who attend church from habit, may get out of the habit—millions have. Those who attend church to hear what some minister will say who has advertised a "catchy" or sensational theme, are not going because they expect to hear the gospel, and they seldom do. Those who seek the house of the Lord because they are heart hungry, are cheated unless they have the "bread of life" broken to them sweetly, persuasively and free from the husks, chaff and soiled straw with which they have had contact during the work-a-day week.

In our opinion the church of Christ will make more headway if those who seek spiritual food are fed on the gospel even if the attendance is small—than it will if crowds are attracted who may get a little gospel but much entertainment, such as it is. We may be all wrong, but we entertain the conviction that the trouble with some Christian churches is in the pulpit, to the extent that the pulpit seeks to attract hearers on any other ground than teaching the gospel. No pulpit can compete with secular attractions, no matter how gifted the preacher may be. Perhaps the congregations will be small; but they will be of the stuff on which the church of Christ must grow and expand its influence.

All can recall occasions when something has been said in the pulpit, clearly with the intent of catering to the sensational—when great harm has been done. These things may bring crowds for a time, but the end is not only unprofitable, but it is injurious to the cause as well.

Perhaps we can best illustrate what we mean by presenting the gospel of Jesus Christ, by referring to the methods of Gipsy Smith. Gipsy Smith is never sensational—yet he draws enormous audiences. The gospel he preaches is sweet and persuasive. He is not critical. He holds up the Christ as a pattern. They gaze into the gospel looking glass and in its perfect depths they see their own imperfections. No words of condemnation are needed, no sensationalism is required—nothing but the pattern, the example and the longing of the human heart to be like such a beautiful perfect pattern.

If that won't fill or churches with eager men and women, nothing will. The pulpit of the Christian church has a sphere all its own. In that sphere is may be strong, helpful, and successful. When it departs from that sphere and attempts to attract in a worldly fashion it is doomed to failure.

God's King

Part One

OUR COUNTRY has just witnessed the inauguration of another president, which in a great country like this is considered a great event, for when a change takes place in the presidency, a change in administration of affairs is expected to follow. Man is constantly experimenting in different forms of government, but no sooner is a new form tried than he finds it lacking in something essential. We have read, that every form of government had been tried by the Romans; but there is another form to be instituted which has not been tried.

In speaking so confidently it is necessary to say why we so believe. We are assured of it because it is made known to us in the Bible. We take it for granted that you believe God is the author of it, and when we read it we are reading God's word to man. On this foundation we ask you to hear what we have to say regarding God's king.

The word of God is the only reliable authority we have, regarding events that are to transpire in the future. We shall just give a few occurances showing this to be true. In the 15th chapter of Genesis it is recorded that Abraham's posterity should be "a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and they afflict them four hundred years; and also that nation whom they shall serve will I judge; and afterwards shall they come out with great substance." This prophecy was made known to Abraham even before he had children, and school children know how literally is was fulfilled. In Deut. 18:15 we have the words of Moses as follows: "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren like unto me; unto him shall ye hearken."

To know how literally and accurately this was fulfilled, we only have to turn to the New Testament, for in John's gospel it is recorded that Philip, who was a disciple of Jesus, said to Nathaniel: "We have found him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write: Jesus of Nazareth." And Peter in the third chapter of Acts and Stephen in the seventh, both quote this prophecy as referring to the Lord Jesus.

There is one more prophecy to which we desire to direct your attention, as it bears directly upon the subject of God's kingdom. We ought also to keep in mind the fact that prophecy is just history written in advance. In Micah the fifth chapter it is written: "But thou, Bethlehem, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel." Now we are informed when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, wise men from the east came to worship him (Matt. 2:2). "And when Herod the king heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him." Why was the king troubled? Because he was then usurping the position of the king of the Jews. He knew the opinions of the Jews regarding their Scriptures that at some future time God would send them a deliverer. Herod therefore rightly believing that the king for whom the wise men sought would some day occupy the position of ruler in Israel, took steps to get rid of him. So he called together the chief priests and scribes and demanded of them where Christ should be born, in order to make away with him and thus prevent him becoming king. The chief priests with all their caviling and corruption of the word, answered Herod with a plainness and positiveness born of strong conviction: "In Bethlehem of Judea, for thus it is written by the prophets." If then, that part of the prediction concerning his birth was exactly and literally fulfilled, why we ask may we not expect that part concerning his rulership in Israel to be just as literally fulfilled in due time?

We now desire to show from the word of God that it reveals a plan of government that will bring righteousness and peace, and good will to all mankind, all of which are essential elements to make a government stable. We read in Isaiah 32nd, chapter: "Behold a king shall reign in righteousness and princes shall rule in judgment." Here is a plain and absolute statement of something to transpire in future from Isaiah's time. But it might be argued that such a time has existed in the past as the world has had many righteous rulers. If so, then the effects of righteousness ought to be manifested which the same prophecy informs us are to follow a reign of righteousness. "And the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever. And my people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in sure dwellings and in quiet resting places." Such a condition has never existed upon the earth, for if it had, the world would not have just passed through a great war, because it says the effects of righteousness "shall be peace, quietness, and assurance forever."

To accomplish all this, it is necessary to choose one who, after due probation, should develop a character qualified for the work. Such an one has been found and chosen, and we are also informed why he was chosen, In the first chapter of Hebrews is says, "God spake in times past by the prophets, and in these last days hath spoken by his Son;" and unto this Son God said, "Thy throne O God, is forever and ever; a scepter of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom. Thou hath loved righteousness and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows."

Do not think we are mistaken regarding this Scripture, in applying it to Jesus because it says, "Thy throne O God, is forever and ever," for Jesus has been given the Father's name because he loved righteousness; and his love for righteousness made him obedient unto death. "Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow" (Phil. 2:9) Paul tells us he prayed for the Ephesians that they might know the exceeding greatness of God's power which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right in the heavenlies, far above all principality, and power, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this age, but also in that which is to come" (Eph. 1:20, 21). All this is in accord with that written concerning him some hundred years before his birth: "Behold my servant whom I uphold, mine elect, in whom my soul delighteth: I have put my spirit upon him: he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles, he shall not fail nor be discouraged till he have set judgment in the earth." And then, as if we might be mistaken regarding who is the speaker he continues, "Thus saith God the Lord, he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; he that sperad forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it; he that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein;I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles" (Isa. 42).

In the ninth chapter of this same book we have another wonderful prophecy concerning him who is to rule the world in righteousness: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Eeverlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."

From these Scriptures we learn that God has selected the one whom he purposes to place at the head of the government he will establish upon this earth: that a sceptre of righteousness is to be the sceptre of his kingdom: that God hath highly exalted him and given him a name above every name: that he shall be for a covenant to his (God's) people Israel, and a light to the Gentiles: and that he shall sit upon the throne of David, and establish it with justice and judgment forever. All of these terms and appellations apply to God's king and his kingdom; for we understand when it says a sceptre of his kingdom, that righteousness will be the rule of authority in his kingdom; when it says. God hath highly exalted him and given him a name above every name, that he is exalted to be head ruler in the kingdom; when it says

God has given him to be a covenant to the people, we know that he is the one through whom his (God's) promises concerning the kingdom shall be fulfilled; and when it says, he shall sit upon the throne of David and establish it with justice for ever, we are assured that the kingdom will be David's kingdom restored.

Since it says the king shall sit upon the throne of David, how then can it be God's kingdom? It is on this wise; the kingdom over which David and his successors ruled was the kingdom of the Lord, as it testified in 1 Chron. 28:29. It was God's kingdom because instituted by him. It was David's throne because he sat upon it. It will be David's throne restored in fulfilment of certain promises made to him, the first of which is recorded in 2 Samuel 7. God told Nathan the prophet to go to David the king and tell him these words: "Now therefore, so shalt thou say unto my servant David. Thus saith the Lord of hosts, I took thee from following the sheep to be ruler over my people Israel." Read verses 9-13 for the meaning, and David's understanding of this promise. We find it in the 23rd chapter beginning with the first verse: "Now these be the last words of David, the man whom God raised up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, the spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his word was in my tongue. The God of Israel said, He that ruleth over men must be just ruling in the fear of God. And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by the clear shining after rain."

WALTER TOMLINSON.

The Prodigal Son

THIS PARABLE was spoken in the presence of and to condemn the pharisees for their continual murmuring and fault finding. This parable is introduced by the following statement: "Then drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners to hear him. And the scribes and pharisees murmured, This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them."

Note, please, the attitude of these two classes. One came to hear, the other to murmur. This is followed by two brief parables, viz., The lost sheep and the lost piece of money. These two parables are in strong condemnation of the murmuring class.

According to their own religious views they needed no salvation.Jesus announced at another time, "I came to seek and save those that are lost." Again, those who are whole need no physician. These applied to the scribes and pharisees, exhibited their hypocricy. They would not enter the kingdom nor permit others to.

The parables at the beginning show the loving care of the true shepherd and others in connection with the shepherd and his flock. Jesus was then seeking for the lost sheep, and when found, was restored to the flock when there was a general rejoicing. The lost piece of money has the same application. The publicans and sinners constitute the lost sheep and the lost silver.

Jesus added another thought, and a very impressive one, viz., "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." When the lost are found and restored, there is joy and gladness. In strong contrast we see these self-righteous pharisees and scribes murmuring against the true shepherd and saying, "This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them."

Jesus now declared the parable of the Prodigal Son. This parable represents a father who had two sons. The younger son demanded that his father give him his portion of the goods that would fall to him. Not many days after he gathered together all that he had and took his journey into a far country. There he wasted his substance in riotous living. The parable represents this son in real want and when he hired himself to a man of that country he made him a herder of swine. His hunger was so strong that he would have eaten the husks of the swine. In this condition he thought of home and its comforts. He saw that the servant in his father's house had enough and to spare. He decided to arise and go to his father's house. He was in a mood to acknowledge his sin against heaven and before his father. "I am no more worthy to be called thy son; make me one of thy hired servants." His father received him joyfully and ordered his servants to prepare a feast and acclaim him with a ring and a robe. He was again received as a son. The father rejoiced saying: "My son was dead and is alive again; he was lost and is found; and they began to be merry."

The above is a brief history of the younger son. His repentance was genuine and was approved by his father. The religious schools take a surface view of the prodigal and apply this parable to this age and the present condition. Every convert to their religious views is a prodigal returned to the father's house. We must remember that all the parables of Jesus were spoken to or concerning the Jewish people and the kingdom of God.

This son represents something more than a repentant sinner. The prodigal as a character represents to the intelligent Bible student the return of Israel to the Father whose substance they wasted and are now in a famishing condition or will be when they have passed through "Jacob's trouble" (Jer. 30:4-10). In that trial the dross will be burned out and the silver retained as a remnant which will be the beginning of Israel's acceptance by Jehovah. They will be the beloved subjects for the fathers' sake. Jehovah will return to his ancient people and through them fulfill the covenant made with Abraham and David. The prodigal has long been a wanderer in a far country, and will as literally return.

The intelligent Bible student can see the two principal characters as representing those who came to hear and those who came to murmur. This phase of the parable was applicable to the ones addressed. It was spoken to condemn first the pharisee for his opposition to Jesus and his gospel. We see these traits exhibited in the elder son. In the second place, it was spoken to the apostles that they might know the future regarding their nation. The elder son who was in the field, hearing of the rejoicing, came and enquired of a servant its cause. When informed of his brother's return he became angry and would not go in. When his father came out and entreaed him to come in he answered, "Lo, these many years have I served thee: neither transgressed I at any time thy commandments, and yet thou never gavest me a kid that I might make merry with my friends. But as soon as thy son was come who hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf."

How easily we are permitted to see the unrighteous and murmuring pharisee exhibited in the elder son. He was selfish and arbitrary. His father reminded him that the opportunity to have a feast and make merry was ever present. All things were his to use as he saw fit. The father said: "It is meet that we should make merry and be glad: for thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found." The repentant prodigal impressively represents the return of God's lost son Israel when succored from Jacob's trouble. They will come acknowledging their sins, and pray the Father for his forgiveness. They will plead with the Father for a servant's place in his house. For twenty centuries this prodigal son has been a wanderer.

As true as the above statement is, so true must be the many prophetic utterances that he will again be recognized as a son and will be the recipient of all the attendant blessings promised to Abraham and David. In that day they will become willing subjects and be permitted to build and inhabit, and plant and eat thereof. Besides, the Gentiles will become their plowmen and vine dressers.

GOLDEN TEXT: Isaiah 66:13

MOTHERS!

Mothers! the name than which nothing is dearer,
  Hallowed by sacrifice; radiant in joy;
Man in his weariness understands clearer,
  Love and protection that sheltered the boy.

Some of us swept to renown and attainment;
  Some of us wandered the eas'est ways:
But in the throes of acclaim or arrignment
  Each of us begs your forgiveness or praise.

Spread 'round the hemispheres, daily we're giving
  Thanks to our God that --whatever w've done--
Still we are bound in that sacredest living,
  Unions of unions--mother and son!

Mothers! forever in beauty Madonna'd;
  Faithful and constant, whatever we be;
We in our manhood, triumphant—dishonored,
  Pray to be babies again at your knee.

ON MOTHER'S DAY WEAR A CARNATION

ON SUNDAY next, the second Sunday in May, is what is known as MOTHER'S DAY.

On that day let us pay a special mark of respect, a silent tribute, to our best earthly friend by wearing a carnation in her honor. Regarding this custom there is a little rhyme which runs as follows:

For mothers living, blossoms bright,
For mothers memory, blossoms white.

For mothers living a red carnation, blood color. The second line needs no explanation.

MOTHER

QUITE FREQUENTLY we hear of Mother Earth. In the spring time we plant in her ample bosom the seeds that in the autumn return to us such abundant crops. She receives the rain and the sunshine, and with them she converts the planted seed into food for the children of men. That the earth should be referred to as "she" is a symbol of motherly love, because she returns much more than she receives. She gives more than she takes. She labors in season and out of season and often without thanks. She feeds and she clothes us. She furnishes warmth and verdant beauty; she is an inspiration to her children and a glory to herself. So we cannot refer to the earth in any other way than "she."

And if all we have said regarding the earth be true, what is to be said about the most animate, the most inspired, the most infused with the spirit of love, the mose affectionate creature in our lives —our mother?

Many a life giving stream starts out from its course to benefit all it encounters, only to be swallowed by the thirsty sands along the way. But where is the mother who ever fails in her love, and where is the mother's love that ever fails to survive to the end—aye to the end of her time?

How, my young friends? Let me picture to you the unceasing love and care and vigilance of a loving mother's heart, which knows no hours in its labor of love, which permits no personal convenience or pleasure to come between it and its duty. How am I to do this thing for you? How can I make you know a road you have not yet traveled? How can I open your eyes the watchful care of a loving mother who, having passed over that road knows the snares and pitfalls that await you, and is ever alert that your feet may not be led astray.

There are two ways of acquiring wisdom: one is by personal experience which is a long way, and a hard way; the other way is to profit by the experience of others. This implies the placing of your faith in others and the exercise of your judgment as to who you will so place it in.

Every man and woman—worthy the name—will tell you how immeasurable is the depth and breadth of a mother's love. How often they have seen it wounded by the beneficiaries of it, and how those recipients of that love have grieved, when it was too late, that they had not been more responsive to and appreciative of, that fine gift when it was tendered them.

How sure are we that we truly have opened our heart to the love of mother and of the Master. Christ says, "Behold I stand at the door(of thy heart) and knock." Will you not let me in? Open it; open it fully. For where there is the sunshine of love there can be no shadow. Shadow exists only where sunshine can not reach. Sunshine in the heart makes sunshine in the mind. Will you radiate sunshine or shadow? Will you radiate happiness or unhappiness? Will you radiate contentment or discontent? Will you exert an influence for good or an influence for evil?

The heart, the mind grow on what they feed upon. Shall it be love? love for mother, love for Jesus; or will it be lovelessness? Make your choice, and be sure your choice is going to show what you are. If you are filed with love, you will radiate love; if you have no love then you will show an irritable temper. You will be cross. But take my advice: accept the love that Jesus offers; accept and cherish mother's love. Don't ever be ashamed to acknowledge your love for your mother; and never do anything that would make her ashamed of you.

THAT LETTER TO MOTHER

DO YOU live at home? No. Then you know what mother's letters mean to you, you know how much she puts into them; how much you can read between the lines of her longing for you, of her prayers for you, for her hopes concerning you, of your safety and uprightness and well being.

But you have no idea what your letters mean to mother. You have no idea how many times she reads them over, how much she treasures them, how much she gets out of them—how much they buoy her up when times seem dark and work seems hard, and you seem so far away.

Your letter and the hope of the next one is all she asks for these days, the only thing she really lives for. She asks no more than to know you are well. She knows—without you or anyone else writing it—that you are her son; and being such you must be good and strong, and clean and true and loyal.

POOR FATHER

A MAN—a father—recently remarked, "Mother has a day set apart in her honor; but where does poor father come in?" His daughter answered, "Father's day is every day. You have the privilege of working so mother can use your money in keeping the home and the family together." Is this all father is in your home?

The only people who have no regret for anything they ever said are those who have never said anything of importance.

Discretion

A little said is oft times best,
  Let people think and learn the rest;
A noisy tongue and much abuse,
  Like a chattering magpie, is little use.

The gift of the gab and an empty mind,
  Belongs to the workman that lags behind;
His work half done, his day is spent;
  The time is lost, that to him is lent.

Dig deep when you build your mansion grand,
  Found on the rock and not on the sand;
The rock below, though it be hard to find,
  Will support your house, as well as your mind.

Some seek a life that's free from care,
  Where hidden lurks some worldly snare,
Where pleasures dance before their eyes,
  In rainbow radiance on the skies.

But if you'd be a soldir true,
  There is lots of work laid up for you:
Search first to know the Master's will:
  Then faithfully your task fulfill.

Let wisdom be your constant theme,
  In waking hours, and while you dream;
If the written word your guide you make,
  The proper course through life you'll take.

Then when he comes, well done he'll say,
  Thou followed me with care each day;
Share thou the joys of thy Lord:
  This shall be thy sure reward.

J. E. HOGARTH.

So Many Hypocrites

The man who finds fault with the church because "there are so many hypocrites in it," should be consistent, says a writer in the "United Presbyterian." He should refuse to eat bread because he had once found a loaf that was sour. He should refuse to partake of mutton because he had once seen a hog in the field with the sheep. He should refrain from marriage because some homes are unhappy. He should refuse to indulge in fish because he had found frogs, muskrats, and snapping turtles in the same pond.

Of all the types that a preacher has to deal with, there is none equal to the man who will not come to Christ because some poor soul has fallen from grace.—Selected by Robt. G. Huggins.

The Inauguration of God's King

Part Two

IT WOULD be nice to stay and dwell upon this beautiful description of the coming ruler but you will have to fill it in at your leisure. David understood the grandeur of it, for he continues: "Although my house be not so with God, yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things, and sure, for this is all my salvation, and all my desire." This was all of David's desire and furthermore, he would not obtain his salvation until it should be accomplished. Knowing as he did that the promises made to him related to the future, he breaks out in an exalting strain in the 89th Psalm: "With my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations." "I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant." "My covenant will I not break nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips; once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven." And again in the 33rd chapter of Jeremiah after we are informed of the captivity of Israel by the Chaldeans, the Lord tells Jeremiah to say these words: "Behold, the days come, that I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah. In those days and at that time will I cause the branch of righteousness to grow up unto David, and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, the Lord our rightoousness."

Oregon State College

You must not be in a hurry to get away from this chapter, for the Lord has yet to tell us how we may know it shall be accomplished or fulfilled: "Thus saith the Lord, If ye can break my covenant of the day and my covenant of the night, that there should not be day and night in their season." We find God's covenant of the day and night in Gen. 8.22. It was given after the earth was smitten with the flood, and God said, "I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake." "While the earth remaineth (there shall be) seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease." Now God says, if we can break this covenant then "may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne." It is now over forty-two hundred years since this covenant of day and night was made with man, and it has not yet been broken. It was some four hundred and fifty years after the covenant made with David that God said it could not be broken; and in likening it unto the covenant of day and night. with each successive day and night we are reminded of God's faithfulness; as the seasons come and go with seed time and harvest, we are reminded that God has not forgotten his plan nor altered his purpose. Summer's heat and winter's cold are a pledge to us that God will establish an everlasting kingdom upon this earth.

There are those who tell us these things are old; that they belong to the things of the past; and if they are to be understood at all, they must be interpreted spiritually. We says so too, for to interpret spiritually is to interpret according to the Spirit's word, and the Spirit's word tell us how to do it by comparing spiritual things with spiritual. On this principle we will look at another prophecy. You will recall the words of David after he had repeated what God had promised him, "Although my house be not so, yet hath he made a covenant with me ordered in all things and sure." Yes; David knew his immediate successors would not fully answer to the description God gave him of the coming ruler; and their history makes the fact known to us. To the last ruler on David's throne these words were spoken: "And thou, profane, wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end. Thus saith the Lord, Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more until he comes whose right it is: and I will give it him" (Ezek. 21:26, 27). If language means anything, the same throne that has been overturned is to be restored and given to the one for whom it is reserved.

Our next task then is to find the rightful heir, so we go to the New Testament, and in the first chapter and first verse we find these words: "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David." Then we turn to Luke's account and find that an angel was sent by God to a certain woman and said to her: "Thou art highly favored, the Lord is with thee: thou shalt have a son and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." The throne of David was on Mount Zion, one of the hills upon which Jerusalem was built, and hence if we ever see Jesus reigning on David's throne, we shall see him there. Jesus was a mortal man subject to death: and to reign on a throne forever he must have an immortal nature. The apostle Peter knowing this said to the devout Jews who had assembled at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, "Men and brethren, let me speak unto you of the patriarch David, who being a prophet and knowing that God had sworn with an oath unto him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit upon his throne. He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ." The fact of Christ's resurrection not only makes known to us that he is now qualified to reign forever on David's throne, but also an assurance that he will do so. We have Paul's word for it in the 17th chapter of Acts: "He hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained: whereof he has given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."

What testimony did Jesus leave us concerning his kingship when here upon earth? In Matt. 21:5 it is recorded that he applied the words of the prophet Jeremiah to himself: "Tell ye the daughter of Zion, behold thy king cometh unto thee.' "The daughter of Zion" in this place can mean nothing but the Jewish nation, Zion being the place of their capitol. When Jesus was brought before Pilate upon the charge of being a king in opposition to Ceasar, Pilate asked him plainly, "Art thou a king then? Jesus replied, thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world" (John 18:36). Paul in writing to Timothy calls this a good profession. Now we are many times informed that Jesus preached the gospel of the kingdom of God, and sent his disciples to preach the same message; and we can learn from them what their idea was concerning the kingdom from the question of Peter when he asked, "Lord, we have left all and followed thee; what shall we have?" Jesus said unto them, "Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit upon the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matt. 19:28).

To make it certain that the kingdom of God is synonymous with the kingdom of Israel, let us look at Acts 1:3 There we are told Jesus spent forty days with his disciples, speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God; and "when they were come together, they asked him saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israe?" There can only be one kingdom on the earth for Daniel says the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and this kingdom shall consume all others. This is why Jesus taught his disciples to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven, Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth." When the kingdom comes then will come the time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and God will send Jesus Christ whom the heavens must retain until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

We have seen some of the things the prophets have said. Here are some of the things that will come with the return of Jesus the Christ: "He shall judge the world in righteousness" (Psa. 9:8; 72:2; 96:13; 98:9). "I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning, afterward thou (Jerusalem) shalt be called the city of righteousness, the faithful city" (Isa. 1:16). Concerning the king it says, righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins and faithfulness the girdle of his reins (Isa. 11:5).

Many more testimonies of the same glowing nature might be given, but it would-consume too much time to notice them now God speaking prophetically through the Psalmist says, "I have set my king upon my holy hill of Zion." Not one jot or tittle of his word shall pass away until all is fulfilled, for his word endureth forever. Ages ago God sware unto Moses, "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with my glory;" and it will come to pass at the inauguration of God's king. The history of the world bears little resemblance to God's will being done and the earth being filled with his glory. Take a glance at the world today. Behold, the suffering, the oppression, the widows and orphans, caused by the rule of earth's unholy potentates. Look at the enormous amount expended in war by this country, 26 billion dollars, and then think of France, Great Britain, Italy, and Germany; and then ask yourself what more glorious tidings could be heralded through the land than a righteous administration is to be inaugurated. Still more glorious would those tidings appear to you could you realize that in the execution of them a princely diadem should deck your brow. The invitation still holds good. God is willing, yea, anxious and has pleaded with his people of old; he is still pleading with you: "Incline your ear, and come unto me, hear and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David" (Isa. 55:3). Jesus says to us from his Father's throne in heaven, if any man will hear my voice I will come in and sup with him. In Christ stead we beseech you to be reconciled to God; lay hold of the hope set before you in the gospel; reform your life and wait for God's Son from heaven.

WALTER TOMLINSON.

As it Was; As it Is

IN READING God's word, we find every dispensation ending in a great turning away from the truth as taught by inspiration. For a little while let us contrast the end of the Jewish age with the present age. To the Jews were given the oracles of God, which Paul styles the Holy Scriptures which he says are able to make us wise unto salvation through faith in Jesus the Christ (Rom. 3:2; 9:4).

To the church of the first born was given the word of truth (John 17:8; 2 Cor. 5:19).

To the Jews God sent his own Son that they might receive salvation through him (Matt. 21:37-45).

To the Gentiles God sent his own Son that through him they might be saved. How did the Jews receive the Son of God? They said to him, "Thou blasphemest in saying I am the Son of God" (Mark 14:61-64). This is the "son of Joseph" (John 6:42). They crucified him because he said, "I am the Son of God" (Matt. 26:63, 64).

How has the church in this end of the call to reign with Jesus received him? Some as did the Jews in the end of their age. They virtually say, "Thou blasphemest in that thou sayest I am the Son of God. This is the son of Joseph."

What does Jesus say of them? That when a man attributes the work of the Holy Spirit to an evil source that is blasphemy beyond forgiveness (Matt. 12:32; Mark 3:28, 29). God says of Jesus, I have begotten thee by my Holy Spirit (Luke 1:35; John 1:13). As said the Jews, they who reject the Son of God say, "Not so; he is begotten by Joseph." They crucify the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame; they cannot be renewed to repentance, because they have rejected the only name given unto men in which there is salvation (Heb. 6:6).

In the end of the Jewish age some believed on Jesus as the Son of God, but were afraid to confess him for fear of losing the patronage of those who did not believe (John 12:42, 43). Others believed but were afraid to confess him openly (John 3:12). How many are there today who believe, but are afraid to speak and write openly; afraid of losing caste; afraid of offending some in high places; afraid of losing custom or place; afraid to rebuke openly, having fellowship with those who deny the Lord; judging adversely between a brother of high degree and one obscure. There is a dividing line, as my beloved husband showed not long age in The Restitution; and all are either on one side or the other of this line. On one side is the broad way, pleasant to walk in, but the end is death eternal; on the other side is a narrow, strait path beset with thorns in the flesh, with sorrow, with scoffs, with adversity, with none of the pleasure, with none of the riches of this world; with persecution, with slander and all manner of evils to be borne for Christ's sake; and in this path is a little body who have counted it all joy to suffer these things for the great reward waiting for the faithful at the end. The Scriptures of God are the guide which leads us in this narrow path; we enter by becoming aliens to the world then crucify the flesh with all its (fleshly) affections and evil desires, forsake all whom we love if they will not come with us; hold no man's person in admiration for gain's sake; hold not one brother in high esteem for fear of loss in any way, nor lower another that one may come up higher. Finally, avoid even the appearance of evil. There are things which may seem innocent to the doers of them, but to those beholding, dishonor our high profession. Beware, lest we, as some in the Jewish age, are afraid to cry aloud and spare not lest the blood of those not warned be found on our skirts. To whom much is given, of him much is required. If we seek to please those who hold the truth of God in unrighteousness we are not having fellowship with God, but are walking with those in the broad way. Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, and be not partakers of their sins (Eph. 5:11).

FLORA A. KNAPP.

The Gospel

THE WORD Gospel is from the Saxon Godes and spel. The former designates the Divine Being, and signifies good; the latter signifies a charm, consisting of some words of occult or hidden power. Put these together and you have as the meaning of the word—God's good Charm or Tidings (Acts 20:24), good news from the hidden source of all good, "whom no man hath seen or can see," and which truly is "the power of God unto salvation to every one who believeth" (Rom. 1:16; 1 Cor. 1:18). The Greek word used in the New Testament is euanggelion, from eu, sugnifying pleasing, joyful, good, well; and angello signifying to announce. Put these together again and we have an announcer, who is the Deity, and an annunciation of acceptable import, which is his message, and which is called "glad tidings" in Luke 8:1, and Acts 13:32, and which is also otherwise variously designated in the prophets, "good tidngs" (Isa. 61:1); "that good thing" (Jer. 33:14); and "the joyful sound" (Psa. 89:15).

The descriptive words "good," "glad," "joyful," as applied to the Deity's message are doubly true and appropriate in their application, describing as they do, 1st—The intrinsic value of what is thus communicated from above, from whence cometh every good and perfect gift; and 2nd—The joyful and gladdening effect produced in the thankful recipient. This cannot perhaps be better illustrated than by the saying of a wise king (Prov. 25:25), "As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so it good news from a far country." (Compare this with Luke 19:12).

This good news is, as to its nature, comprehensively, the whole will and purpose of God, concerning the earth and mankind in future, and styled by the apostle (Eph. 3:11) "the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus." More specifically, however, it is as preached by Philip. Acts 8:12, "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ."

Originally these things or details concerning both the kingdom and name were all in the future, and consequently were all a matter of prophecy or prediction; now, however, and since the ascension of Christ, the gospel is partly a matter of prophecy and partly a matter of fact—a fact in relationship to the death, burial, resurrection and ascension of Christ (1 Cor. 15:1-4), comprehending the particulars of his name, but a prophecy yet, until he returns to earth, as respects the establishment of the kingdom.

The sacrificial death of Christ as the Lamb of God has reference to the fall of the Adamic race, whilst the kingdom and exaltation of Jesus is instrumental and illustrative of the rise and ultimate perpetuity of the race. Without the first, the second would have been impossible; nothing higher than "the law of sin," which is death, could ever have had dominion in our members; the original sentence of "return" to that dust of which we were formed would have forever remained upon us, the blank finale of our existence.

It is the distinctive and exclusive feature of the gospel, however, to bring life and incorruptibility to light.

Apart from what is herein disclosed, men know nothing respecting these things. True, they have "sought out many inventions," but how to effect his own deliverance from the grave, whither he is justly consigned by reason of sin, is not in man. Man never had, in his best estate any experience of immortality. This has never yet been with any of the human race, with the exception of the Christ more than a matter of possible attainment. We say possible attainment, because the conditions imposed by the Deity involve such a whole souled surrender of the candidates therefor, to his will and commandment, that many, very many, even most, are thereby excluded by their own act and deed. This was never more graphically set forth than in the beseeching words of Jesus Matt. 7:13, 14: "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, which leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat; because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be who find it."

The characteristic feature of the good tidings is "deliverance" (Luke 4:18). Hence it is called (Eph. 1:13) "the gospel of salvation." This salvation, as to the place where it will be realized, is locally connected with the earth, and as to the time when it will be realized, that will be at the termination of the present time of the Gentiles; hence it breaks in upon the world at "the set time to favor Zion" Psa. 102:13); "the time that the saints possess the kingdom" (Dan. 7:22); "the times for the restitution of all things" (Acts 3:21); "the times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord" (Acts 3:19); "the dispensation of the fullness of times" (Eph. 1:10); "the times of Messiah" (1 Tim. 6:16); "and the time of the dead that they should be judged and receive their reward" (Rev. 11:18): concerning which John adds, Rev. 20:4, "And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years and to add once again, it is at this period that the rejoicing conquerors over death and the grave exclaim in rapturous adoration of their powerful Savior, "Thou hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nation; and has made us to our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:10). WHAT GOD SAYS CONCERNING OUR DUTY TO OUR PARENTS

IN EXODUS 20:12 we read: "Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

This is the fifth of what is known as the "ten commandments." These commandments were the law given by God to Moses for the guidance of Israel in their journey through life. Paul in Ephesians 6:1-3 calls attention to this commandment when he wrote: "Children obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right. Honor thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise; that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth." Notice that the apostle lays a special stress on this commandment, for he says this is the first commandment with promise. Then in Matt. 15:4 our attention is again called to this when we read: "God commanded saying, Honor thy father and thy mother: and, he that curseth father or mother, let him die the death." The latter part of this verse is a quotation from Exodus 21:17 which reads, "And he which curseth his father or his mother shall surely be put to death." In Deuteronomy 27:16 is the following passage: "Curseth be he that setteth light by his father or his mother, and all the people shall say Amen." The wise Solomon commenting on this subject, wrote in Prov. 20:20: "Whoso curseth his father or his mother, his lamp shall be put out in obscure darkness." If God caused all these and other passages to be placed in his Book for our guidance, what should our attitude be toward our parents? The answer is, love and affection, with perfect obedience. This not only is our duty, it also is our privilege, a privilege we should constantly exercise, for it is pleasing to our Lord.

Practical Suggestions

DEAR BROTHER BROWN:

IF AGREABLE to you I wish to publish the following in the paper of which you are Editor.

To those interested in the edification of God's church:

You have no doubt received and read the report of the meeting held in Oregon, Ill., last November. One of the results of that meeting was the appointment of the committee named at the close of the report whose duty are worded as follows

To put forth diligent effort toward discovering a scriptural plan and method that will in practical application provide us with a central working body, with a view to providing at the earliest opportunity literature other than regular church papers for disseminating among all; likewise books and booklets for common sale, an educational system for aiding and directing those who desire access to such advantages, and a General Headquarters through which interests now unserved, but common to the fellowship in general, can be served.

The chairman of the committee has appointed the undersigned to conduct an educational campaign through those of our papers which are agreeable, the object of the campaign being the discovery through co-operative study the scriptural plan and method that will make us into such a working body which will bring about the above results.

To introduce this campaign, I am appealing to any and all who may read this to write and publish your thoughts on the needs and benefits of united work in the Master's service and the duties and opportunities of Christian life or any other topic touching upon this subject.

Th committee hopes to be able to give something for your consideration and we hope it will be received in the spirit in which it is given, the spirit that comes from the desire to see Jesus alone magnified in the church and through him God.

What you write, write with this desire and in this spirit, praying for wisdom that you may so word your thoughts that this spirit may be manifest to all, and we have confidence toward God that the desire of our hearts will be gratified

We need each other's co-operation in this work and, to safeguard the work from being tained with fleshmindedness, let our constant prayer be consecration to Christ.

If you have not sent Brother Austin a reply to the report, do so at once, after studying it and spirit back of it. Comment on it freely and honestly, pointing out anything which you consider unscriptural or wrong, but in the spirit of love.

Yours for Christian love and Christian unity,

ALZA KING.

Editorial Comments

IN PUBLISHING the above communication we must confess to a feeling that in some respects it is vague and lacking in clear definition. The establishment of a central working body would involve a tremendous amount of labor and expense, and for that reason alone it should only be undertaken where there is a clearly defined purpose to be served or an urgent need to be met. The object and purpose for which this central body is to be established, as stated in the above letter, does not seem to us to justify so great an undertaking.

The first reason given is: "To provide literature for dissemination among all; likewise books and pamphlets for common sale." Now I am sure there is no lack of such literature; the cover pages of The Restitution and other papers advertize an ample supply and variety of books and booklets. It has seemed to us that this is the one thing in which we excell. Every subject seems to be covered with well written leaflets, pamphlets, and books. To establish a central body for this purpose would seem to us to be an unnecessary duplication of effort.

The second reason given is. "To provide an educational system for aiding and directing those who desire access to such advantages," and a general headquarters through which interests now unserved, but common to the fellowship in general, can be served. This conveys no definite thought to the readers; "an educational system" may mean much or little. "Interests now unserved" means absolutely nothing to those not in the secret. We have read through the pamphlet containing the report of the Oregon Conference, and have been unable to obtain from it any clear, definite idea as to its meaning. It seems to deal in vague abstraction. Perhaps it is our obtuseness that is the trouble; if so, we will be glad to be instructed. We earnestly desire to serve the cause of Christ and the truth, and if this movement for a central body will help in that direction we may be depended upon to support it. In any case we will go along with it just so long as its proceedings are in harmony with the Scriptures and is true to the faith once (for all) delivered to the saints (Jude 3).

There is no use deceiving ourselves, however, with the thought that organization is the thing we most need. When the writer united with the church of God one of the things that delighted him was to find a splendidly organized and active Berean Society, the object of which is to stimulate Bible study and distribution of literature. Despite the efforts of the capable staff of workers, the secretary some time ago reported that there was practically no call for the literatue freely offered. This illustrates the fact that the thing needed more than organization is, consecration of the individual believers; more love for Christ and the truth, and more crucifixion of self. Let us, dear brethren and sisters, take care that while we are looking for larger fields of usefulness, we do not overlook the work that lies at our feet in the little corner in which God has placed us. Let us each do our individual duty, and by our example inspire those arond us, to do the same, and we will do the greatest service for Christ, the truth, and our fellowmen.

Don't Read Your Bible

AT LEAST if you don't want to run the risk of becoming a pro-German. That there might be danger of this we gather from knowledge that has just come to us. It seems that late in 1917 Dr. Willard A. Paul, a Boston physician and a humanitarian, a member of the Association to Abolish War, proposed to print the Sermon on the Mount without note or comment. Whereupon the Secretary of the association was officially informed by the Department of Justice that such a proceedure would be regarded by the Department as "pro-German." It may be dangerous even now to give wide publicity to this rare bit of oriental literature. To read it in Congress and suggest that the slightest heed be paid to its precepts would upset many a kettle of fish. We judge, from what we see in the daily press, that a large majority in Congress never heard of the Sermon on the Mount.—Our Dumb Animals, April, 1921.

Good Company: A Serial Article: By Bro. S. H. Thomas

Immortality and the Prophets

LAST NIGHT in earnest meditation, I in my humble lodgings sat, my Bible on my knee. In vain had been my search, and lifting up my tearful eyes to him who knoweth all things, even the end from the beginning, I raised my voice in earnest prayer: "O God, maker of heaven and earth: thou who can toss the mountains as a ball, or gather the sea in the hollow of thy hand: give me I beseech thee light upon the great question of immortality, and of the mystery that stands behind the portals of the grave. Is death a friend that frees a captive soul, as priests and preachers teach? Or is the dread enemy of our race, who holds beneath his cruel hand secure in lands of darkness, silence, and forgetfulness, the great, the good, the pure and the noble, and likewise the low and beasly of men? Oh that I had lived in the days of the blessed Jesus or thy servants the prophets, that I might enquire of them this most vital question."

And behold, as I prayed a wondrous thing did happen. The narrow walls of my lowly room faded away, and in their stead a chamber that might the new Jerusalem. Its magnificance was beggared the power of description; its ceiling like the heavens, and set with sparkling diamonds like the stars. Its walls and balconies, of burnished gold and studded thick with dazzling gems and precious stones. And as I marvelled at the change, methought I heard strains of music, sweeter far than ever heard by mortal ear. Nearer, and yet nearer, came this heavenly harmony, and as I gazed in speechless rapture for the source of this marvelous melody, I saw (and falling prostrate at the sight) a heavenly host advancing through the portals of the temple. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the holy prophets stood before me, and king David also. Yes; and Peter, Paul, and others—all were there, one vast and awesome pageant. And at its head stood Jesus Christ, my Lord and King, his eyes like flaming fire, his countenance kind, and gentle, yet as the sun when he doth shine in his brightness. At this noble and appalling sight, my speech forsook me, and I hid my face in fear, when lo, I head a voice sweet and low like running waters, or the voice of spring say: "Son of man, thy supplication has come up before me. Thy prayer is heard. Behold. Jesus and the prophets are before thee. Cast aside therefore thy fear; arise, and question them."

And as I heard the gracious words, behold, the strength returned to my palsied limbs; my trembling tongue regained its speech, and standing on my feet I spake as follows:

"O Jesus, Lord and King of all the earth! Be it known to thee and thy most noble associates, that much discord and strife exists among the children of men concerning the state of the dead, and the nature of the soul; and I come to thee for knowledge. Is it a fact that the soul of man is immortal by nature, and remains alive and conscious after the change which we mortals call death? Is it a fact, dear Lord, that death is not death, but endless life in bliss or misery as the children of men do teach?"

"Son of man, 'the wages of sin is death: but the gift of God is eternal life. In death there is no remembrance of thee, in the grave, who shall give thee thanks' (Psa. 6.5). God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him shall not perish, but have everlasting life (John 3:16). Be it known unto you that these rewards and punishments are not meted out until the resurrection morn; the state of all the dead, between death and that great day being that of forgetfulness. A peaceful, dreamless sleep. Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear my voice and come forth: they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of condemnation (John 5:28).

"King David, thou sweet singer af Israel, what is thy testimonm concerning the dead? Are our loved one that have gone before, now playing on golden harps before the throne of God?"

"When man dies his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish (Psa. 146:6). In death there is no remembrance of thee (God), in the grave, who shall give thee thanks? (Psa. 6:5) For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything (Eccl. 9:5)."

"Then King David, you do not expect to go immediately at your death, to your reward?"

"Son of man, as for me, 'I shall be sataisfied, when I awake in his likeness' (Psa. 17:15).

"Paul, thou great apostle of the Gentiles, what is thy testimony concerning the soul? Has man an immortal part, which therefore cannot die, and which even God himself cannot destroy, but by virtue of its undying nature must of necessity continue in conscious existence after the dread calamity we men call death."

"Mortal man, I call heaven and earth to witness that Jehovah God, the only potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, he only hath immortality (1 Tim. 6:15, 16)."

"O Paul, most reverend sir, dost thou tell us then that death ends all, that the dread sleep is endless slumber?"

"Nay, nay, my son. 'For as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall be made alive' (1 Cor. 15:21). Be it known unto thee that the only hope of all mankind rests upon a resurrection of the dead, for 'if there be no resurrection of the dead, then they which sleep in Christ are perished' (1 Cor. 15:18)."

"I crave your pardon, Paul, but if they who are in Christ be now in heaven, playing on golden harps before the throne of God, as men teach, how canst thou say of them, 'they are perished if there be no resurrection of th dead?' Wherein would they profit by a resurrection of this vile body of sin and death, and a second union therewith, if their lives be already cast in such pleasant places?"

"Son of man, as has been said, so say I again, 'the dead do not praise the Lord, neither any that go down into silence' (Psa. 115:17); 'For there is no knowledge, nor wisdom, nor device, in the grave whither thou goest.' The children of men do greatly err in this matter. The state of the dead between death and the resurrection, is a calm, dreamless sleep, and its duration, though it may span long centuries, is to the comprehension of the subject but the flash of a sunbeam, the twinkling of an eye."

"Solomon thou son of David, upon whose kingly brow doth wisdom sit enthroned, give us of thy knewledge concerning this matter."

"Son of man, as has been said, so say I also, 'the dead know not anything' (Eccl. 9:5). Their worw has ceased; no device have they, nor knowledge nor wisdom. These possessions belong to life; death is forgetfulness, a land of darkness, as darkness itself, without order, and where the light is as darkness."

"Father Job, thou who art famed among men for thy patience and loving kindness, tell me, I pray thee: Do God's people take on a mantle of life at death? Do they still watch over the destinies of their children and loved ones on earth, while enthroned in the high courts of heaven, as men teach?"

"Son of man, your teachers are blind and greatly err, for as king David has said, 'man dieth and returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish.' 'His sons cometh to honor, and he knoweth it not; they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them' (Job 14:21).

"Isaiah, thou faithful prophet of the most high God, what is thy testimony concerning the state of the dead? Is it a fact they are not dead, but alive in heaven, singing praises before the throne of God?"

"'The grave cannot praise thee (God); death cannot celebrate thee: they that go down into the pit, canont hope for thy truth' (Isa. 38:18). Son of man, the prophets of God know nothing of an immortal soul in man, as a present possession, nor of conscious existence for the dead, between death and the resurrection. Let your sages and wise men seek wisdom at the feet of a little child, which mourns the loss of a fond and loving mother and refuses to be comforted, because she is not. Mortal man say not to those who mourn, 'The dead still live.' Seek not with pagan lies and groundless fables to comfort those who weep. But rather point with joyful hope to resurrection's glorious morn, and shout with us the gladsome truth, Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust; for the earth shall cast out the dead' (Isa. 26.19).

Then, he who is my King raised up his voice and said: "'Fear not; I am the first, and the last: I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore. Amen; and have the keys of hades and of death' (Rev. 1:17, 18). Behold with these 'keys,' I will come in due time, and open wide the doors of the grave, and let down the bars of hades. I will say to death, 'Give up;' and to the enemy, 'Hold these not back.' And my voice they shall heed and come forth, my sons and my daughters, out from under the hand of the enemy shall they come with leaps and shouts of joy and gladness. For have not I said, O grave, I will be thy destruction?"

And as he spoke these words of hope, for death cursed man, I closed my eyes in silent praise and adoration; and when again I gazed, behold, the vision grand had passed. Again I sat within my humble cot, my Bible upon my knee: I had been dreaming.

"Another Beast"

Verse 11: "And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon."

"Another beast," as compared with the dragon and with the beast like a leopard.

"Another beast," because he is different in his origin, "coming up out of the earth," while "the beast," like a leopard, came from the sea. "Another beast," having only two horns, while the one like a leopard has ten horns. "Another beast," because he has no marks of royalty, nor of blasphemy: while the beast like a leopard has "ten crowns upon his horns," "and upon his heads the name of blasphemy."

The divine Spirit foreseeing the efforts that would be made to make this beast some phase of the seven headed and ten horned Roman beast, has given marks enough, so those that do so are without excuse.

COMING UP OUT OF THE SEA

This beast being a symbol, must come out of the symbolic earth, because the law is every thing after its kind (Gen. 1:25). And to find the genealogy of this symbol, we must find out what the earth is a symbol of. On the literal earth there is a symbolic heaven and earth.

The heaven is above and the earth beneath. Therefore we read in Deuteronomy 32:1: "Give ear O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth." And again in Hosea 2:21 we read, "And it shall come to pass in that day, I will hear, saith the Lord. I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth." The same truth is illustrated in Rev. 12. The great red dragon is cast out of the heaven into the earth; as was the German Kaiser; he was supreme in the German heaven, but the world war cast him out of the heaven "into the earth." The mother of Constantine was of plebian birth, and when her husband Constantine was promoted to the rank of Ceasar, he divorced Helena the mother of Constantine, and took a royal bride, leaving Constantine and his mother in disgrace. But Constantine being named by the soldiers in Britain to succeed his father Constantius, made war against Galerius, and fought his way to the throne, being hailed by the people as their deliverer from the tyranny of Galerius. So that during the war Constantine and his army was in rebellion against the royalty of the empire. Therefore in symbolic language, Constantine and his army were the army of the earth. Therefore we read in Rev. 12:16: "And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth."

The flood out of the mouth of the dragon was the pagan armies of the empire; and the earth that swallowed them up was the victorious army of Constantine that helped the woman: the Christian church

Now we can understand the symbolism of the earth, out of which the two horned beast came And we perceive him to be a product of the clay that was mixed with the iron, in the feet and toes of the image of Daniel 2, the clay being earth, the same material out of which our two horned symbol came. The evidence is complete that the counterpart to this symbol is a democratic nation.

First, because he comes up out of the earth, the symbol of the common people, in contrast with royalty who inhabit the heaven.

2nd. Because he has no marks of royalty in contrast to the crowned leopard and dragon, both of which bear marks of royalty.

3rd. Because he appeals to the dwellers on the earth to make the image of verse 14, as Woodrow Wilson did to the American people to ratify the peace treaty, and the Peace League of the Nations.

And as nothing but big things are noted in the Revelation, as sure as it represents a democracy, it represents the United States, the greatest democracy on earth; and if the prophecy failed to notice the United States of America, in revealing future events, it would be from a national standpoint a failure.

TWO HORNS LIKE A LAMB

Two horns are natural to most horned animals, and here the numbers may have no signification; but being like a lamb indicates the peaceable disposition of the animal.

But the combination of lamblike horns with speech as a dragon in the same power is a paradox among symbols; and if we find it in the counterpart of this symbol, it will be a wonderful exhibition of foreknowledge.

Speaking of Joseph, it is written: "His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth" (Deut. 33:17). "And Jedekiah . . . . made him horns of iron: and he said, Thus saith the Lord, with these shalt thou push the Syrians, until thou hast consumed them" (1 Kings 22:11). These quotations give the sense in which horns are used in the Bible. The nature of the power indicated by horns like a lamb, and speech like a dragon, is exhibited in the United States as in no other power known in history.

In the war of the Southern Rebellion 1862-65, to the rebels it spoke like a dragon, strong and powerful; but to the conquered states it was lamb like; no executions for treason, nor confiscation of property.

In her war with Spain, she spoke in the Philippines and on the coast of Cuba like a dragon; but was lamblike to Cuba. And in the late world war, the United States entered the conflict in the cause of liberty and humanity; seeking no territory, only safety and liberty for all nations.

But she spoke to Germany like a dragon, and to the young republics she is very lamb like. And on our northern frontier from the Atlantic to the Pacific there are no fortifications, no big guns; and this fact silently but surely proclaims our lamb like, peaceable disposition.

The dragon like speech is plainly seen in our Munro Doctrine as voiced by Secretary Olney of the Cleveland administration, when in controversy with Great Britain over the Venezula affair. He said, "We are sovereign on this continent and our fiat is law." It would be hard to conceive of any speech more dragon like, and that to one of the strongest powers of Europe.

The dragonic speech of our politicians is plainly in evidence when they speak of scrapping the Peace League of Nations; and of forming a new association of nations. Now why is the dragonic speech so much in evidence in our country? Answer, because we are a young giant that knows his strength and is afraid of no nation.

Why then are we so peaceable and lamb like as a nation? Answer, because we are educated in our public schools to know that war is hell, and should be awarded for the benefit of the human race.

Verse 12: "And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first whose deadly wound was healed."

The worship here spoken of is by the two horned beast making an image to the first beast, and enforcing its worship.

Verse 13: "And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire to come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men."

The United States is noted for doing big things; not lying wonders. but scientific wonders. The French failed in digging the Panama Canal; the United States took hold and finished the work. The world was in danger of being enslaved by Germany. The United States in fifteen months selected, trained, equipped and transported over three thousand miles of submarine infested seas, two millions of men; "the war was won and the world was saved" (Woodrow Wilson). And great are the wonders done in the realms of electricity, of which Benjamin Franklin heads the first rank. Edison being recently asked, "What do you feel to be your most valuable contribution to humanity and civilization?" replied, "Probably the application and distribution of electricity in our daily life."

Verse 14: "And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword and did live."

This symbol and the dwellers on the earth are one party, for he came up out of the earth: and when they are deceived, he is deceived; for he is their symbol.

The Miser's Prayer

O THOU well beloved and all-powerful dollar; we come to prostrate ourselves before thee, to pay our devotions at thy shrine. We acknowledge that thou art the source of all our enjoyments in this life,—and of all that we can hope for in that to come. Our hearts best affections are centered in thee, and in thee do we delight; for thee we sacrifice every finer sensibility of our natures; for thee we pass toilsome days, and sleepless nights; for thee we become aliens from the comforts of home—and the kindly enjoyments of society; for thee we willingly sacrifice our own comfort and that of others, diligently following the meanest practices that we may secure thine all-powerful favor. For thee we grind the face of the poor, keep back the hire of those who serve us, exact the utmost farthing from the widow and fatherless, drive the grey-haired beggar from our doors, and spurn the infant child that solicits bread at our hands. For thee we are guilty of every mean and dishonorable action, for thee we pierce ourselves "through with many sorrows," and sacrifice our hope of eternal life and everlasting inheritance.

To thee we look for comfort when the icy hand of death shall feel after our heartstrings. Forsake us not when our grey hairs come with dishonor to the grave; when those we have wronged—the orphan, the destitute and forlorn—shall invoke curses on our hoary heads. To thee we look for consolation when the terrors of the great vengeance day shall stare us in the face; when the canker of our ill-gotten and closely hoarded gold and silver shall eat our flesh "as it were fire;" when the cries of those who have "reaped down our fields," and whose hire has been kept back by fraud shall have entered into the "ears of the Lord of Sabbaoth."

Even now, there is with us a "certain fearful looking for of judgment, and fiery indignation that shall devour the adversaries;" and we are forced to invoke to our aid the memory of all the millionaires of the past time to keep us true to our purpose of loving thee, and thee only. O thou great dollar, that hast rescued the greatest villians of past time out of the hands of justice, save us from the hands of the final Judge. Forsake us not, we pray, for it is our determination to be faithful unto death, and then the judgment. The judgment! Our hearts sink within us at the thought! The course of justice is turned by thy mighty influence now, but will it avail in the coming day, and with a spotless judge? O Almighty dollar hear us, hear us, for all our trust is in thee. Amen.—J. Lenfest.

Certainty of Destruction

LORD GREY ON THE NEXT WAR

LORD GREY has made his long delayed appearance at Glasgow to receive the Freedom of the City, which was to have been bestowed upon him August 4th, 1915. He says that he then warned the Austrian ambassador that the war would result in something approaching revolution in all the countries that took part in it. Lord Grey tells us that if we "have another war 20 years hence it will in a sense be like this war, but it will be infinitely worse, and there is a certainty that it will destroy the civilization of Europe. The suffering it will cause with its deadly scientific weapons and owing to the economical chaos it will bring about will be too much for human endurance and the world will go the way of Russia." Lord Grey now opposes any fresh attempt to rely upon armaments and would rather depend upon the League of Nations preferring as he puts it, "the chaos of Utopia to the certainty of destruction.—Selected by Geo. B. Alldridge.

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, MAY 17th, 1921. NUMBER 19

Sing!

Don't find fault, just sing a little,
  That will help the world along;
I forget that I am toiling,
  When I listen to your song.

Just last night, a little robin
  Hidden by the brooklet's side
Said "Be cheery, cheery, cheery,
  Whatever may betide"

And I straightway grew the stronger,
  Gladness leaping through my veins,
And my tasks were quickly finished,
  Hands so helped by red-breast's strain.

How much more your peaceful stanzas
  Has of power o'er troubled breast,
Hushing marshalled strife to quiet,
  Soothing vain regrets to rest.

AUNTIE WINCE.

Resurrection, Responsibility, and Judgment

PART TWO

THEY ALSO quote Job 10:21: "Are not my days few? cease then, and let me alone, that I may take comfort a little, before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death." They argue that as Job states in the 21st verse that he shall go to the grave and shall not return, and in Job 19:26 states that after worms destroy his body, yet in his flesh he shall see God; that Job did not mean that he would not return from the grave, but that he said it under the impulse of the moment. Therefore they claim that all the numerous passages of Scripture which state that all those who have not come into the knowledge of the truth, shall not be resurrected were written by their authors under the same conditions; and do not mean what they say! Suppose that we would apply this argument to the other side of the question and say that Job did not mean that he would see God after worms destroyed his body; but that he intended to remain in the grave and not return; what would be the result? It would destroy our blessed hope. The Scriptures must harmonize from Genesis to Revelation. If they do not harmonize there is no truth in them. That is the reason there are so many higher critics and infidels, because the preachers make the Bible contradict itself by preaching lies and false doctrines. This verse, when analyzed correctly, harmonizes correctly with all the other passages of Holy Writ which prove manifestly that the unresponsible will not be raised.

You will notice that in the 21st verse there are two supplied words; the words "whence" and "even." These words do not occur in the original Hebrew. Young's translation reads: "Before I go, and return not to the land of darkness and the shadow of death." Job did not mean and did not say that he was going to the land of darkness and the shadow of death. He said that he was going to the grave, but he did not say that he would not return to the grave. He said that he shall not return to the land of darkness and the shadow of death. What is the land of darkness and the shadow of death? In reading Isa. 9:2; 60:2, 3; Jer. 13:16; Matt. 4:16, we learn that it does not refer to the grave, but to the condition of the earth and its inhabitants, especially before the light of the glorious gospel of Christ shined unto the Gentiles. It is to these conditons of the earth, trials, temptations, afflictions, wickedness, murder, idolatry gross darkness, etc., and Job says he would not return to. When Job returns from the grave, he shall not return to these conditions; but shall return to the glorified state, the immortal state. Death, afflictions, gross darkness, etc., shall not have any effect on him.

Oregon Bible College

David in the 23rd Psalm states that, "though he walk through the valley of the shadow of death, he would fear no evil." David did not mean that he would walk up and down through the grave; because there is not any consciousness there, and nothing to cause fear. He had reference to his walk as a son of God in this life: being surrounded by his enemies, who caused him great danger. Therefore death was overshadowing him or staring him in the face, but he did not fear because God's rod and staff comforted him. In Job 10:22 we read that "the light is as darkness (utter gloom, Leeser trans.). Leeser says that the word darkness or utter gloom in this sense means, "not perfect darkness, but that grey, uncertain glimmer before perfect night sets in. There is no such light like this in the grave.

The light in this verse has reference to the truth of God's great plan of salvation, which men pervert and hold in unrighteousness: and thereby changing it from light into darkness (Rom. 1:18; Gal. 1:6-9). Also in Isa. 5:20 we read, "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness!" So we see that Job did not signify that he would not return from the grave; but that he would not return to these conditions upon the earth. Because he will return from the grave to the glorified state with immortality.

They love to quote Rom. 11:26, "And so all Israel shall be saved, as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob" Paul states in Rom. 9:6-8, "They are not all Israel which are of Israel: neither because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children: but In Isaac shall thy seed be called. That is, they which are children of the flesh, these are not the children of God: and the children of the promise are counted for the seed." Therefore all those who have accepted God's plan of salvation by faith in Jesus Christ in every dispensation are truly Israel, and are heirs according to the promise (Gal. 3:28, 29). Paul says that "Esaias also crieth concerning Israel. Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea a remnant (not all) shall be saved" (Rom. 9:27). A few out of all tribes.

Another fortress which they love to hide behind is 1 Cor. 15:22: "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." The first extremists quote this verse also to prove that only those who are baptized into Christ are made alive; and the second extremists believe that through Christ all will be made alive. Who is Paul speaking to? The Corinthian brethren, who were followers of Christ, and who will be raised to immortality. He is not speaking of those who heard the gospel and would not accept it, or those who have apostatized from the faith; or those who have not heard the gospel. He tells us in the 51st and 52nd verses of this same chapter who he is speaking to: "Behold I show you a mystery; We shall not not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." Who would be so ignorant to argue that the word "all" in this verse includes all the heathen, the responsible and apostates? We know that these will not be changed to immortality. They also argue that as every individual dies in Adam, as every individual will be raised through Christ, and the word "all" is used in both cases. But if you question both classes of these extremists you will find that they do not believe that Enoch and Elijah died. Consequently they falsely admit that there are two exceptions to the word "all" in this verse: because it includes every individual in the same class spoken of in verse 51.

We will now destroy the last breastwork. They quote John 5:28, 29 as their strongest argument. "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the grave shall hear his voice, and come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." They build their whole doctrine on the little word "all."

We have already proven that there are exceptions to the word "all," and that it only includes all those of a certain class. We read that Christ is an exception to the word "all" in 1 Cor. 15:27. The three Hebrew children were exceptions to the word "all" in Dan. 3:7, 12. The word "all" in John 5:28, 29 includes every individual of two classes only: "They that have done good, and they that have done evil." It does not include the heathen or the ignorant who cannot discern between good and evil. Daniel also modifies this statement by saying, that "many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." Also it only includes those whom God remembers as in their graves. The heathen or all irresponsible are not recognized by God as in their graves. "They are like the beasts whom God remembers no more" (Psa. 88:5; 73:22; 49:19, 20; Eccl. 9:5, 6). They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise" (Isa. 26:14). "They are extinct, they are quenched as tow" (Isa. 43:17) "They shall remain in the congregation of the dead" (Prov. 21:16). "And sleep perpetually and not awake" (Jer 51:39, 51). "They shall be as though they had not been" (Job 3:16; Obadiah 16). "For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee; they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth" (Isa. 38:18). They have sinned without the knowledge of God's laws, and shall perish without the knowledge of his laws (Rom. 2:12). They will not be judged, because they have sinned without the knowledge of God's laws or the gospel, and do not have any imputed sins to give account of. They "have their portion in this life" (Psa. 17:14). They shall utterly perish in their own corruption (2 Pet. 2:12). "They shall go to the generation of their fathers; they shall never see light" (Psa. 49:19, 20). Many more passages could be quoted, but if these are not convincing, it would be useless to quote more.

Now the question arises, Is God just and merciful in dealing with mankind in this manner? "O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the potter power over the clay; of the same lump to make one vessel unto honor, and another unto dishonor? Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will." God is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart, neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight (Heb. 4:12, 13). Jesus said, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him" (John 6:44). Therefore, we must first have love for God, and a desire like the prophet Daniel, to know the truth of the matter (Dan. 10:12). "Seek, and ye shall find: knock and it shall be opened unto you" (Matt. 7:7, 8). God is also seeking those who will worship him in spirit and in truth (John 4:23). Christ also states in Rev. 3:20, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." So we see that it is not God that causes the gospel to be hid from those who are lost. Paul states in 2 Cor. 4:3-6 that "the god of this world (lusts of the flesh) hath blinded the minds of them which believe not." We have already proven that the gospel has been preached in all these dispensations from Adam unto the present day. Paul also says that, "the gospel was preached to every creature which is under heaven" (Col. 1:23). Also there are thousands of angels sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation (Heb. 1:14; Matt. 18:10). Christ also makes intercession for them (Heb. 7:25; Rom. 8:34). The Bible is printed in every language under the sun, and is distributed to every part of the globe. He has set before all mankind a blessing and a curse: a blessing if they obey the commandments of God; and a curse if they disobey or turn aside out of the way of the commandments of God (Deut. 11:26-28). Therefore Paul says in Rom. 2:11 "There is no partiality with God" (Emphatic Diaglott). Then in the 12th verse he tells why; "For as many as have sinned without law, shall perish without law: and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law." So all those who "wander out of the way of understanding" by not "seeking the Lord while he can be found," and not opening the door while he is knocking, "shall remain in the congregation of the dead." "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation" (2 Cor. 6:2).

Why were there only eight saved out of the flood, only three out of Sodom, and only two entered the promised land? God could have destroyed all of them just as easily. He had mercy on only those who found favor in his sight. Christ says that "as it was in the days of Noah and Lot so shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed. One shall be taken and another shall be left (Luke 17:26-36). A remnant only shall be saved (Isa 11:16; 24:6; Zech. 14:16; Zeph. 3:12). Only a few, a little flock, shall enter the strait gate into the kingdom (Luke 12:32; 13:23, 24; Matt. 7:13, 14; 22:14; 11:25, 26). This little flock will not be composed of the highly educated rich, honorable and wise men after the flesh; but are constituted of the meek, humble, and poor of this world, rich in faith (Jam. 2:5; 4:6; 1 Cor.126, 27; Matt. 5:5; 11:25, 26).

Dear reader, do not be a radical or an extremist. Do not be swept into oblivion with the current of civilization. It is easy to swim with the current. Make for the shore before you sink never to be raised again. "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you." Cease from making the heart of the righteous sad, whom God have not made sad; and strengthening the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked ways, by promising him life (Ezek. 13:22). Convert the sinner from the error of his ways, and thou shalt save his soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins (James 5:20). Dear reader, put on the breatplate of faith and love; and for an helmet the hope of salvation: Watch and be sober that the day of th Lord may not take you as a thief in the night.

The Restoration of Israel and Zionism

ON NOVEMBER 2, 1917, Arthur James Balfour, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of the British government, wrote a letter to Lord James Rothschild, Vice-president of the English Zionist Federation. That letter will go down as the most important document in the history of the Jewish people since the destruction of Jewish political life in the year 70 of the current era. History will record how England with all her mighty energies strained in a life-and-death struggle with the most powerful and ruthless military autocracy the world has ever known, spoke to the scattered and helpless Jewish people the following momentous words:

"His Majesty's government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people and will use their best endeavor to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which shall prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine or the rights and politcal status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

This action on the part of the British government was entirely in accord with its traditional policy of sympathy with Jewish national aspirations. What gave the Balfour Declaration a new significance however, was that the British army was at that moment engaged in the conquest of Palestine. This conquest was finally achieved by General Allenby at the end of September 1918, by what many believe was the most brilliant military stroke in the whole war. And the fact that in the final stroke for the liberation of their homeland Jewish soldiers fighting under the British and Jewish flags as a distinct unit of the English army participated, and the fact, further, that a Zionist Administrative Commission headed by Dr. Chaim Weizmann is functioning in the land with the authorization of the British government, these two first bear testimony to the sincerity and promptness with which the British government was prepared to facilitate the establishment of a national home for the Jewish people in Palestine.

Even before the British forces encircled the Turkish army in Palestine, the Balfour Declaration had received the concurrence of the principal nations arrayed against the Teutonic alliance. On Feb. 12, 1918, the following announcement was made for the French government: "M. Sokolow, representing the Zionist organizations, was received today by M. Stephen Pichon. M. Pichon was happy to reaffairm that the understanding is complete between the French and the British governments, concerning the question of the Jewish establishment in Palestine." On May 9, 1918, the following declaration was made for the Italian government by the ambassador from Italy in London: "On the instructions of his Excellency Baron Sonnino, His Majesty's Minister for Foreign Affairs, I have the honor to inform you that H. M. government is pleased to confirm the declarations already made through their representatives in Washington. The Hague and Salonica, to the effect that they will use their best endeavors to facilitate the establishment in Palestine of a Jewish national center. it being understood that this shall not prejudice the legal or political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country." An expression of sympathy was received from Pope Benedict XVI on June 8, 1918, and the Balfour Declaration was endorsed by the Serbian government on Jan. 7, 1918, and the Greek government on March 14, 1918. And how about the United States? It is a matter of certain knowledge that the American government, including president Wilson and an overwhelming majority of the members of Congress, were in entire sympathy with the Balfour Declaration, that is to say with the Zionist program. Due, however, to the circumstance that the United States and Turkey were not formally at war, this sympathy could not express itself in an official endorsement. But on August 29, 1918, president Wilson, in a letter to Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, spoke the mind of America as follows: "I have watched with deep and sincere interest the reconstructive work which the Weizmann Commission has done in Palestine at the instance of the British government, and I welcome an opportunity to express the satisfaction I have felt in the progress of the Zionist movement in the United states and in the Allied countries since the declaration of Mr. Balfour on behalf of the British government of Great Britain's approval of the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and his promise that the British government would use its best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of that object, with the understanding that nothing would be done to prejudice the civil and religious rights of non-Jewish people in Palestine or the rights and political status enjoyed by the Jews in other countries. I think that all America will be deeply moved by the report that even in this time of stress the Weizmann Commission has been able to lay the foundation of the Hebrew University at Jerusalem with the promise that that bears of spiritual rebirth."

These endorsements, official and semi-official, have been re-enforced by expressions of public opinion the world over, particularly in England and America. On February 22, 1917, the Interallied Labor Conference which met in London and which included representatives from England, France, Italy and Belgium in its declaration of war aims, expressed its approval of Zionist claims in Palestine. The American Alliance for Labor and Democracy at its meeting in Minneapolis, Minn., took the same action. The great majority of the American and English press, gave editorial expression of its approval and sympathy. Even in the lands of the Central Powers, the British declaration evoked expressions of sympathy, and the governments, the German as well as the Turkish, felt obliged to approve with vague promises concerning Jewish rights in Palestine. Now that Germany and Austria have shaken off the yoke of autocratic imperialism there are many reasons to believe that the Zionist program will find acceptance among all the people who base their hopes for their future upon the recognition of the principle of self determination. Zionism may therefore be said to have become a recognized part of the program of world-reconstruction. To secure the approval of mankind, every program of practical statesmanship, national or international, must possess two qualities, justice and feasibility. Every application of the principle of national self-determination must be guided both by the inherent justice of the case and the capacity for self-determination of the people in question. The reason why Zionism has received the endorsements of the world's practical statesmen is because it combines these two qualities. With the dawn of an era of world justice, the claims of the Jewish people to a free national life in Palestine were bound to be heeded; while the achievements of Jewish energy and self sacrifice in the land of Israel endowed that claim with the necessary reality.

Does it not look as though Israel is coming back into its own? The nations have declared their entire sympathy with the age-long aspirations of the Jewish people to recover the land which was and is its own, the land of Israel; and the Jews, true to their highest tradition, and true, likewise to the cause of the new world, have embarked in the great task of self-restoration. Zionism, for more than nineteen centuries but a cherished hope for less than one generation a practical movement with a political program, is fast making real its never-changing aim: a national homeland for the Jewish people in Palestine. Zionism has become the concern of international statesmanship. Zionism has won over the world as a whole. The cause of the Jewish people has become a part of the cause of the new world since the World War.

It is indeed hard to find any movement in the modern world with a stronger imaginative and emotional appeal than Zionism. A virtual resurrection is taking place before our eyes, as Ezekiel the prophet predicted (Ezek. 37). By the resurretion of dry bones, the dead hope of Israel is revived. Restoration is Israel's hope, while they are scattered and persecuted. Is it not wonderful that a people whose history ran parallel with that of the ancient Egyptians, Babylonians, Greeks and Romans, of whom all are now only a memory, is to resume its national life beside the modern nations and the "ultra-modern" like the Czechoslovaks and Jugoslavs, the Ukrainains and Lithuanians. Palestine, the cradle of three great religions,, is to receive back the people whose genius produced them, with what possibilities for the spiritual regeneration of mankind who can conceive? Twenty centuries of hatred, contempt and persecution are to be atoned for. Twenty centuries of prayer and hope are to be rewarded. The hand of God is made manifest in history. Zionism has had a remarkable spiritual influence on every section of modern Jewry. And this elevating influence whose action has not confined itself to Palestine, must be looked upon as one of the major achievements of the movement. Zionism endows with the purpose and meaning that maze of trial and suffering which makes up the history of Israel in dispersion; Zionism is a demonstration of Jewish historic continuity, and as such it has been the strongest force for healing the tragic rift between the old generation and the young in Jewish life.

A high non-Jewish authority, speaking of the probable results of the Word War, said: "There are good grounds for hoping that the war will also give a new and healthy impetus to Jewish national policy, grant freer play to their splendid qualities, and enable them to shake off the false shame which has led men who ought to be proud of their Jewish race to assume so many alien disguises and to accuse of anti-Semitism those who refuse to be deceived by mere appearances. It is high time that the Jews should realize that few things do more to foster anti-Semitic feeling than this very tendency to sail under false colors and conceal their true identity. The Zionists and the orthodox Jewish nationalists have long ago won the respect and admiration of the world. No race has ever defied assimilation so stubbornly and so successfully. The race is a miracle.

Sister Charles A. Lockwood, of Brock, Neb., Rt. 2, Box 14a, writes that she has "a large box of Restitutions," and will gladly send them to anyone who can put them to a good use.

May 5th, Sister Barbara Bremner and Brother A. E. Griffiths, manager of "The Restitution," were united in matrimony. After refreshments had been served Brother and Sister Griffiths began their new life with the prayer on the part of all who were present that they might have a long and useful life, and that God would grant them finally a place in the Lord's house forever.

Sister Alice Chappelle reports that The Young People's Society passed an enjoyable as well as profitable evening at the home of Brother and Sister Lang, April 29th. During the business meeting it was decided that the young people should do their share toward visiting those who are unable to attend the church meetings; so a motion was carried making this one of the aims of the society. At the conclusion of the business meeting, Sister Kathryn Keiffer gave an instructive lesson on the "Authority of the Bible."

The Unjust Steward

THIS PARABLE was spoken primarily for the benefit of the apostles and those who would become converts to the gospel as taught by Jesus. This is one of the parables that requires much study and a close analysis. A careless reader will glean from it that Jesus commanded the dishonest practice of the unjust steward. Such could not be true, as Jesus was using a parable to enlighten his followers.

The parable recites that a certain rich man had a steward; who was accused of wasting his goods. He was required by his lord to give an account of his stewardship, for he could no longer act as a steward on account of his dishonesty.

Note, please, what he said concerning himself and future care: "I am resolved that when I am removed as steward what I will do, that I may be benefited by his debtors." He called all his lord's debtors before him and said unto the first, "How much owest thou unto my lord? He said a hundred measures of oil. He said take thy bill and write fifty." Then he said to another, "How much oweth thou? He said a hundred measures of wheat. He said unto him, Write fourscore." As a steward he made an unlawful and dishonest use of his lord's goods. He was soon to be deprived of his stewardship, so he continued his dishonest practice, as he reasoned, "I cannot dig: to beg I am ashamed."

His act was not only dishonest but selfish. By it he knew his lord's debtors would receive him into their homes. The opportunity for a future home lay in favoring his lord's debtors in their payment of an honest debt. This was making friends with unrighteous mammon, or the goods acquired by his lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done wisely. Tis dishonest scheming made him friends of his his lord's enemies, or debteors. Jesus said, "the children of this age (or generation) are wiser than the children of light."

At this point it is well that we have clearly in mind the acts and the purpose of the unjust steward. When deprived of his stewardship he reasoned, "I cannot dig," that is, become a common laborer; "and to beg I am ashemed." So I will use my lord's riches to my own advantage. This was an act of the children of the generation in which Jesus lived and preached.

Now to rightly interpret our Lord's advice to the apostles we must dismiss the thought that Jesus commended his dishonesty. It was that he used the mammon of unrighteousness to secure a future home. We must remember that unrighteous mammon or riches may be used wisely and honestly as well as foolish and dishonestly. It is the honest use of riches or mammon that the apostles were to make use of that through it they might receive them into the kingdom of God. It was to make use of in the same tactful way the unjust steward used his lord's riches.

The Lord's remaining charge to them is proof of the above statement: "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much: he that is unjust (dishonest) in the least is unjust in much." The logical reasoning here deprives us of the thought that Jesus commended an unrighteous act for any purpose. We are to be faithful and just. We are required to make a faithufl and just use of our own riches as well as the gifts of others. All selfishness must be eliminated from our hearts. The only purpose must be to further the gospel of the kingdom of God.

Note the further sayings of Jesus: "If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?" True riches cannot be obtained through a dishonest use of unrighteous mammon. "If ye have not been faithful in that which is another's man's who shall give you that which is your own?"

Jesus closes this parable with the statement that no servant can serve two masters: "For either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." From the above we glean that we can serve but one master. To make an honest use of riches is not following them as a master.

Questions and Answers

IN THE RESTITUTION of April 5th, 1921, an answer to two questions is wanted by Flora A. Knapp

1. "Who tempted man for three or four thousand years before the devil was cast out of heaven of God?"

2 "If there was war in heaven between immortal angels of God, what assurance have we that there may not be sometime another rebillion started there?"

To the last question, I will say that if rebellion among the angels of God in heaven was possible, and did occur in the past, we have no security whatever that it may not happen again.

And to the first question I will quote James: "But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lusts and enticed" (Jas. 1:14). This covers the whole ground from Adam to the present time. Milton's vision of paradise lost, and of satan being hurled out of the battlements of heaven, is inspired by the mythology of paganism; it has no standing in the Holy Scriptures.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that "The revelation" is all future from its date: if not, it is wrongly named. The author of The Revelation would not be guilty of giving us old history for future prophecy. The revelation is of future events; it is a prophecy (Rev. 1:3).

The war in heaven of Rev. 12:7, took place in the fourth century, when Constantine providentially came to aid the Christians, who were hard pressed by the pagans. Constantine is symbolically called Michael, and the Dragon is a symbol of the Roman pagan empire: the pagans being beaten, is expressed by the dragon being cast out of the heaven into the earth; the heaven and the earth being that of the Roman empire.

This is proved by the ten horns of the dragon. See Dan. 7:7.

For the Next War

GUN WHICH CARRIES 210 MILES

A FRENCHMAN has just invented a gun which has a range of 210 miles. "When the next big war comes," comments a writer in the "Daily News," "we shall certainly all know about it. These men of genius with a perverted passion for discovering new ways of dealing out death wholesale are nearly as dangerous to the peace of the world as any jingo government. There is something about a new lethal weapon which seems to mesmerise most governments, however practically inclined. I hear incidently that good progress is being made in America with the new poison which, according to report, will be capable when all its possibilities are exploited of blotting out a large population at a single puff."

When M. Andre Lefevre, the French War Minister, gave the reasons which led him to resign he mentioned that Germany was in possession of a new 77 M. M. field piece and of a new double-barrelled machine-gun no specimen of which had been delivered to the Allies.

"The first inkling of the new German machine-guns," writes a special correspondent of the "Times," was obtained shortly before the cessation of hostilities by the French Intelligence service. Krupps had actually begun the manufacture of this new type of machine-gun with two mobile barrels placed one above the other but mounted on a common joint so that they could be manipulated like a pair of scissors. This machine-gun which gave an easily adjustable sweeping fire in two directions could be worked by one man with the aid of a feeder for the replacement of the cartridge belts. It had only one trigger and as it could be fired in two directions at the same time it was virtually proof against capture by infantry using rush tactics finally, another and different type of heavy machine-gun for use against aeroplanes flying low over the infantry lines and also against tanks was used in August 1918. Although in the final German retreat in 1918 the battle fields were scoured in search of these new types of weapon which the Germans had learned to use so effectively, none were ever captured. It is known, however, that the famous Baltic brigades were equipped with these two weapons and the French government possess reliable information that they have been further improved and manufactured."—Selected by G. Obituary

MEDE LOGAN was born in Center township, Marsall County, Indiana, Dec. 3, 1847, and died in Niles, Michigan, April 18, 1921, aged 73 years, 4 months and 15 days. Mede was one of a family of eight children, one sister, Julia (Logan) McCrory, and six brothers, Leonard, Sylvester, Willis, Gideon, Marshall and Hugh. These all survive him except the sister and one brother, Willis.

He was married to Eliza A. Abshire, May 4, 1873. To this union were born two sons, Iden Ward, of Miles Mich., and Culver Ray, of Plymouth, Ind. These with six grand-children and many other relatives and friends remain to mourn his loss.

At the age of twenty-four he became a member of the Church of God and was a devoted Christian throughout a long and useful life. Upright in all his conduct, in church and business matters, he commanded the respect and esteem of all who knew him. He was extremely rigid in putting into practice in his daily life the precepts of his religion.

Two weeks before his death, in the presence of a number of relatives and friends assembled by his request at his home, he said he did not want to leave one comamnd unobserved.

Although never seeking notice, he was ever willing to be of service and fulfilled the duties required of him in an efficient manner. As one of the first trustees, he took an active part in the building of the Church of God in Plymouth, and was one of the trustees at the time of his death. He had also served as deacon for a number of years.

He, in partnership with his brother Sylvester, ran a saw mill for many years and was engaged in the lumber business during the active part of his life. In recent years he was in business with his son Ward, in Miles, Mich., and only abandoned work for the past seven months, when malignant cencer compelled him to retire.

Mrs. PHEBE WILLEY.

Funeral services were held at the church in Plymouth, April 20, at 2 o'clock, and burial was made in Oakhill cemetery, where we laid him to await the coming of Jesus and his resurrection.

GOLDEN TEXT: Psalm 37:7-9

ANGER AND WORRY

Anger and Worry, when meeting one day,
  Were both in a talkative mood,
They talked very plain, but I'm sorry to say,
  It wasn't of anything good.
You may think it absurd, but the words they said
  Made me shudder with horror and pain.
They talked about troubles, the dying and dead,
  And they counted how many they'd slain.

"Worry," said Anger, "you're a bright little chap,
  But you can't hold a candle to me,
In getting the people right into a scrap,
  By making them mad as can be.

Why, some people I know, when they listen to me,
  Will murder, if I lead the way,
And work 'em right up to the killing degree
  Though it's funny, now isn't it, say?"

"I can make a man's wife give him blisters at night
  By rousing her temper by day,
And the poor man gets into a terr'ble plight—
  Oh, it's jolly, now isn't it, say?
To see the hot times I can make in a town,
  Or a country, wherever I be;
Say, I can blow a man up, or knock him clear down,
  'Tis done in a moment with me."

"Anger," said Worry, "you may think you're smart,
  And you brag about what you have done,
But when it comes down to affairs of the heart,
  As a killer I'm A Number One.
True, I don't work so fast as you often must do,
  And put yourself all out of breath;
I first get 'em feeling despondent and blue,
  Then I rush 'em right on to their death.

"I can worry the men, and sweet women too,
  Till they feel that their living is pain,
Death and its terrors have lost its black hue
  When I've stricken again and again.
'Tis the world, then, is dark to their narrowing gaze,
  And they drive off their friends by the score:
Yet I give them no rest, in their nights or their days;
  I bring 'em new troubles the more."

DEAR YOUNG PEOPLE:

WELL HERE I am again! it has been a long time hasn't it, since we have had a good long talk together? Can you guess what I am doing this week? You cannot? All right I will tell you: I am cleaning house! All of you have, no doubt, helped mother with her house cleaning, and know just how to do it. It is hard, dirty work, isn't it? but how nice and sweet and clean our house is when we have finished! What a comfort and pleasure it is to go through the different rooms, peep into the cupboards and closets and see everything in its place and spotlessly clean, to know that the hardest of the work is over, and all that remains to be done is to keep it clean and in order.

While I was at work today the thought came to me that each one of us is a part of a large house. Did you ever stop to think of that? This house is called the "Lord's house," and we are all some especial part of that house. Every so often we clean our earthly dwelling place, but do we ever think of cleaning our part of the Lord's house? There is just as much trash and dirt collected in our spiritual dwelling each year as there is in our earthly home. For instance let us start our house cleaning by sweeping out of our mind all wicked and unclan thoughts. Let us discard and destroy all hatred or ill-feeling toward our fellow men. After we have sorted over our good and bad thoughts let us take the good ones, clean and brighten them up so they fairly shine, then set them in a conspicuous place where our friends and neighbors may see and admire them, while we quickly take the bad ones and throw them on the trash heap to be burned.

When we hear a mean or unkind remark, how often we stow it away for some future use. How often we take a rare loving word or action and poke it back in a corner to be forgotten and neglected. It is these unkind words that we must root out and destroy, else some day they will be remembered and used to hurt some brother or sister, and cause all kinds of troubles. It is the kind loving words that we must take out of the dark corners and polish them and set them out in the light where all may see their rare beauty.

It will prove very hard at first to do this house cleaning, but what a lot of pride and satisfaction we will have when we survey our new and orderly corner of the Lord's house. And better still, we may hear the great Head of this wonderful house say to each of us, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." That, dear young people, will repay us for all of our labor. So let us "clean house" often, for we never know when Jesus the Head of our house will drop in on a tour of inspection to see if we are clean enough to keep our corner; for you know, the worst part is, if we are not, he will cast us out, and put another more worthy in our place.

AUNT BESS.

THE SIN OF WORRYING

Dr. ROYAL S. COPELAND, health commissioner of New York City, recently published a bulletin on the harmful effects of worrying, of which the following is a part:

"No underlying factor of ill-health should be disregarded. Bad teeth or tonsils may be responsible for infections that have detrimental effects on the nervous system.

Then comes worry, with a big W. I have said that the particular disturbances of sensation we are here discussing are almost exclusively complained of by women. Women cannot stand worry, real worry. There is a difference between the daily fussiness of some persons and the deep seated worry of others.

"Just as sure as fate, there is physical trouble ahead for one who gives way to worry. You must find a way to stop it. Have faith that God's in his heaven still."

In this we feel that Dr. Copeland is right. Let us fully understand that God still is, and that he is the rewarder of all those who diligently seek him; that he is the ruler of our destinies—through our faith in his Son Jesus our Lord—and we will have no cause to worry or to worry other people. Therefore have faith, and through faith, peace.

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

TO OUR mind there are many proverbs that are misunderstood, and the one with which we have headed this article is one of them.

In Proverbs 24:5, we read, "A wise man is strong; yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength."

In this passage we have the same meaning of "knowledge" as we have in "knowledge is power," as it was used in the dim past, when this expression originated.

Today the phrase is almost invariably accepted as the equivalent of learning acquired through book study, but the word knowledge in its original form, "know-ledge," was in use long before books were freely accessible. We today consider "knowledge" a scholastic achievement, but "knowledge" implied a grace received by divine mercy, the gift of knowing, or of being able to know. The second syllable, "leche," is a form of the Anglo-Saxon "lac," meaning a gift.

DAILY THOUGHTS

At thy right hand there are pleasures forever	Psa. 16:11
He that keepeth his mouth, keepeth his life	Prov. 13:3
Mind not high things	Rom. 12:16
I am poor and needy yet the Lord thinketh upon me	Psa. 40:17
Let us not be weary in well doing	Gal. 6:9
I am come to call . . . sinners to repentance	Matt. 9:13
His ears are open unto their prayers	1 Pet. 3:12

A CONTRAST

Proverbs 10:15: "The rich man's wealth is his strong city."

The rich man trusteth in his money, but note the difference with the child of God.

Proverbs 18:10: "The name of the Lord is a strong tower: the righteous runneth into it, and is safe."

The power of money lasts only with natural life. Unless money is used wisely it is more of a curse to a man than it is a blessing. But who knows and loves God and has accepted Jesus as his salvation, has an enduring peace during this life and everlasting life in the kingdom of God.

By Way of Comparison

IT HAS been said that comparisons are odious, but sometimes they are eloquent teachers of the truth. The condition, expectation, and hope that suffer not by comparison, but rather shine with greater beams of glory thereby, and they which comfort us and command our confidence.

Kind reader, have you ever carefully compared the Abrahamic promises with the faiths of mankind? Have you ever marshalled them, one by one, before the throne of your reason, and asked yourself, Which is true? which is noble? and which is most in harmony with your conception of Almighty God whose foreknowledge, justice, mercy, and love are unlimited and eternal?

The Mohammedan teaches that when a man dies he is not dead, but merely changed to another condition of life, wherein he is served day and night, throughout eternity, by a number of maidens, more beautiful than the mind of man can conceive, and who will never grow old, or wrinkled, and whose beauty will never fade. Nor will they ever tire, or grow weary in their efforts to anticipate and supply the slightest desire of the one whom they serve. Such, according to Mohamet, is the condition and occupation of the faithful dead.

The Indian dreams of happy hunting grounds, where game and wild creatures are so numerous that he can slay and slaughter at pleasure and without labor, and where every day is full of bloodshed and feasting.

Orthodox Protestant creeds accept the heathen absurdity that a dead man is not dead, and have added to the heathen fables a hell or pit that is bottomless, and dimensions termendous, filled with a raging sea of everlasting fire, and huge billows of eternal heat. Into which terrible place devils are constantly plunging precious immortal souls, countless millions of whom are already there, many of them since before the flood; but their term of torment no nearer an end than when it began. God himself is also present in hell, so we are told, and by his divine power making the sensibilities of the damned infinitely more acute, so that their sufferings may be most intense, while the thunders of his wrath shake hell to its foundation. And we are told that God in his infinite power, love mercy and justice has decreed a perpetual continuation of this horrible triumph of deviltry.

According to these orthodox teachers, the righteous dead are not dead, but in heaven, playing continually on golden harps and singing praises to God, while old mother earth, which gave us birth, is condemned and doomed to sudden and complete destruction; satan having out witted God, and blighted it with sin beyond repair.

The Roman Catholic accepts the above absurdities as truth, but insists on adding numerous others. For example, to the orthodox hell he adds a separate compartment called purgatory, the same being a sort of anti-room, where torment exists, but not so severe as in hell proper. All mildly wicked Catholics, or those who have failed to secure absolution immediately before death, are sent to this compartment, where they must remain until released by virtue of prayers by some priest, whose intercession has been purchased by some friend or relative of him who suffers in purgatory. This feature of the Roman Catholic faith has, from its birth, been a source of rich revenue to the church, as sorrowing friends and relatives have frequently been known to deny themselves, even the necessary things of life to satisfy the demands of some priest, and get their loved one out of purgatory. Millons of dollars have been paid under similar circumstances to a corrupt priesthood, who are masters of the art of bleeding the sorrowing friends and relatives of the dead. Is it not passing strange that men and women, whose judgment is sound, and reasoning powers narmal in other matters, may be easily blinded and deceived in questions of faith and religion?

But now, dear reader, let us turn from these foolish, man-made traditions and look for a few moments at God's plan of salvation, the hope of the prophets and apostles as revealed in the holy Scriptures. Let us go out on the hills and mountains. Lift now your eyes and view this beautiful earth, with its sunshine and shadow, its rivers, oceans, and fertile plains—lovely, and beautiful, beyond description, even now while under the blight of sin and death. Then consider what will be its condition, when God has performed his purpose, removed the curse, and restored the Edenic conditions of perfection. Perfect climate, neither too hot nor too cold; no destructive storms, nor too much rain, nor not enough; no more floods nor high water to destroy life and property; no more rending and tearing of flesh, and shedding of innocent blood; no more savage wars, for "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the Lord;" for "the lion shall eat straw like the ox, and dust shall be the serpent's meat." "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." As we view this lovely picture with what joy do we recall God's precious promises, "The righteous shall inherit the earth, and dwell therein forever;" "The righteous shall never be removed, but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth;" "The heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's but the earth hath he given to the children of men." No more sorrow and tears, no more suffering, sickness, nor death; no more graves. The undertaker must change his business, and the manufacturer of monuments and tombstones his calling; the rum-seller will have no place in all the earth, neither him that debauches his fellow man. And this grand old world, the mother of us all, upon whose gentle breats we have been nourished and sustained, will, throughout the endless aions of eternity, swing through space a purified and glorified orb, peopled by a perfect and incorruptible race, the obedient ones gathered from all nations and races, since the world began, with our blessed Lord and redeemer at their head. When this grand culmination has been reached, creation will be finished and complete. The eternal purpose of God which he purposed at the beginning will be performed. Neither satan, nor the sins of mankind and their resulting curse, have been sufficient to prevent the ultimate accomplishment of his will.

THE CHURCH—RELIGION

IN A recent address, Dr. Alexander S. Lyons, a Jewish rabbi had this to say:

"Brooklynites need a revolution of civic and religious pride. We are said to be a city of churches. Far better would it be were we to become a city of religion."

WHAT IS MAN?

Go stand upon a mountain top,
And cast your gaze afar!
Look long into the firmament,
And study each great star!
And you will learn at last, I think,
What puny things men are.

Discussion on Universal Salvation

Debate on the Attributes of God: Alpha Affirms; Omega Denies

ALPHA'S THIRD SPEECH

FELLOW CITIZENS:

MY OPPONENT manifested quite an anxiety at the commencement of his speech, that I should not present too many points; and that he wished to have sufficient time to examine thoroughly every argument I adduced. I think he has no ground for complaint, and in his next speech, he had better request me to make no arguments at all; for he has utterly failed to notice those upon which I relied in my last address, in support of universal salvation.

It is true he examined the doctrine of God being the author of sin, and of sin being overruled for good; but did I make that a point in this discussion? By no means. I simply referred to that idea, as the only reasonable way to account for the existence of sin, and from the fact that my first argument necessarily leads to the conclusion that sin is according to the will of God: hence the necessity of making him the author of sin, that he might overrule it for good. I was aware also of the difficulties and absurdities, that might be presented according to this ground; and am not at all indebted to my opponent for the information, as I had thoughts of the same conclusions years ago. Hence I have never argued that point very strongly, neither do I think it would be detrimental to my doctrine, if I should throw that matter up altogether, and admit that sin came into existence contrary to the will of God. But here again difficulties would stare us in the face. Let my friend first tell us why God, who is almighty in power, did not prevent the existence of sin, if it be an evil of a positive character (that is, one that shall not be overruled for the good of the sinner), before he undertakes to expose the absurdities of my position. If I cannot reconcile the tendency of my doctrine, in all sin being overruled for good; neither can he account for its existence at all, so that he is as deep in the mud, as I am in the mire.

But my arguments, as I observed before, upon which I based my doctrine, have not been met, neither do I think they can be. The audience no doubt recollects them. I will however state them again: God is infinite in power, wisdom and goodness. This proposition, my friend does not call in question. From this, we drew the following conclusions: 1. His infinite goodness would prompt him to desire the endless happiness of the whole human race. 2. His infinite wisdom was sufficient to devise means, adequate to the accomplishment of the end desired; and 3. His infinite power is all-sufficient to carry into effect the means devised by infinite wisdom so that the end prompted by infinite goodness will be attained! The result is Universalism!

I predicated another argument upon this same foundation, arranged in a different manner. One of three grounds must be admitted: either 1. God can save all men, but will not; or 2. God will save all men but cannot; or 3. God can save all men, and will save all! If he should take the first, and say that God can but will not, he limits his goodness. If he should prefer the second, and say that God wll, but cannot he limits his power: but if he should choose the third, and say he can and will he admits Universalism, the very doctrine for which I am contending. But more still: God is perfectly holy in himself, and it is not at all likely that he will permit unholiness eternally to exist in direct opposition to his nature. And if, as my friend argues, the Almighty has no pleasure in wickedness, will a being of infinite power permit a thing to exist to all eternity which is opposed to his pleasure? Nay, verily! It must be, it will be destroyed, as certain as "the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

But my opponent says I do not believe in the attributes of justice. But I say to him, in the language of Scripture, "Thou art the man." Universalists are the only men on earth who believe in the justice of God. This I say, fearless of contradiction; and for this reason: All men originally belonged to God, and it would be unjust for him to lose anything that is rightly his. Would it not be unjust for the devil to drag down to everlasting destructon, those who were the legal property of God? The justice of God is infinite, and requires the unversal salvation of all men; and it is not in the power of man, or the devil, to rob God, or to cheat him out of that which is justly his due. But more still: the infinite justice of God requires that his glory should not be diminshed: and if some are eternally lost it will be curtailing that glory which is due to God alone. But as no man has power to add to, or diminish from the glory of God, it follows hence, that infinite justice must be satisfied, and the declarative glory of God sustained, by universal salvation, and nothing less! I hope the congregation will bear this argument in mind, and se what way my friend will attempt to meet it, if he attempt it at all.

He did not object to my a priori logic, and I presume from this, he admits it to be correct. I have accordingly reasoned from what God is, to what he must do, and Universalism is the inevitable result. Let these arguments be first replied to, and we shall be forthcoming with an abundance more. I expect he will excuse himself, as he did before, for want of time, in order, doubtless, to get rid of noticing them; but he shall have as much time as he desires; and I hope the Moderators will put him in mind of them if he inclines to pass them by.

Before I take my seat, I wish to observe, that this discussion is not merely for the sake of victory, or who shall get the mastery, as far at least, as I am concerned; but my sincere object is truth. And certain it is, if I am in an error at all, it is one of an exceeding dangerous character. I shall therefore give my friend a fair chance to set me straight if he can, and at the same time, I shall endeavor to oppose the "golden rule," to do to him as I would like to have him do to me.

Omega's Third Reply

RESPECTED AUDIENCE:

THERE IS to be more spirit and interest, I perceive, in the present discussion, than I had at first anticipated. I am glad to find my friend of such an affable turn, and to possess such an accommodating disposition. I conceive it to be worthy of a better cause than Universalism. But he has, as I predicted, given up the theory of God being the author of sin, and overruling it for the good of the sinner. He says he had seen its absurdities years ago, and that he did not make it a point in the present discussion. But I leave it to the audience to judge, if he did not, when he introduced the argument, referring to Brother Rogers, and admit it to be the faith of all Universalists.

But he appears to have one thing to console him, and that is (to use his own language), that I am as deep in the mud, as he is in the mire! He tells me to account for the existence of sin, on my principles: how it is that sin could be introduced contrary to the will of that God who is infinite in power. But it is his place to account for it, as much as mine, as it is no more my doctrine than his, since he has yielded up the other notion, and acknowledged himself in the mire; and also that it leads to "absurdities" which he had seen years ago. And as no doctrine can be true, that can be logically reduced to absurdities, he must therefore believe with me, that sin was introduced contrary to the will of God. Now let him account for it, as he understands the attributes of God so well, as to risk his salvation on a theory which has no other foundation. I said at the commencement, and I say so still, that I do not profess to understand every thing connected with the attributes of the incomprehensible Jehovah. There is one thing, however, unavoidable, if sin came into existence contrary to the will of God, as we see must have been the fact, then no other conclusion can follow, only that God could not prevent it. But I know it is urged that all things are possible with God. This however is not true, without being qualified; for it is "impossible for God to lie" (Heb. 6:18), and "He cannot deny himself" (2 Tim. 2:13). Upon the same principle, it would be impossible for God to make man a moral agent, and make him a machine at the same time, and thus only, can we account for the fact that it was impossible for God to prevent the existence of sin.

He appears to intimate as much as that I have conceded his a priori logic to be correct. In this he is mistaken. I do admit, however, the true system of a priori reasoning, which is to draw conclusions from established premises, or to trace out effects from known causes. But this system adopted by my friend is not to be found in any logic in Christendom. Who can know the cause or the premise from which he deduces the conclusion of universal salvation? None by God! Well may the question be propounded, "Canst thou by searching find out God?" My opponent answers yes! "Canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?" Yes, says my friend, I can know him like a book: and one would think, from the positive manner in which he speaks of what God's attributes must do, and what they must not do, that Jehovah was nothing but a play thing in his hands! But in vain will he attempt to fathom the incomprehensible Deity. Infinity is an ocean without a shore—a centre without a circumference. All is mystery: creation responds Amen; and echo answers mystery! No more can we comprehend the infinite I AM, with the finite powers of perception, than we can measure unlimited space with a ten foot pole. We may tell what the power, wisdom, and goodness of man may do, for this is within the limits of our comprehension; but no man can tell what the definite attributes of God will do, only from what they have done. This is the a posteriori system of reasoning, the true, and the only true philosophy connected with this awfully sublime and mysterious subject; and as God, in all his judgments inflicted upon the human family has manifested his infinite wisdom, power and goodness, in separating the righteous from the wicked —in destroying the rebellious, and saving the godly out of temptation; it is illogical and unreasonable to infer that he will not continue to do the same. And as he does now, in the present state of being, cause such separations and destructions of the ungodly, as he did in the days of old it follows unavoidably, that such will be the case in the future state. This must be done, as certain as God is unchangeable, a proposition which my friend says is the very chief corner stone of the edifice he is endeavoring to erect. But a more perfectly suicidal effort, methinks, he could not have made, than to erect his cause upon the immutability of God. Look at the premises and conclusion. God has never justified the wicked; but has in all cases poured out his vengeance and indignation upon their heads, for trampling under foot his authority: but God is unchangeable—the same yesterday, today, and forever; therefore he will fail to do in eternity what he has always done in time!! This is the logic of Universalism.

Having now laid our foundation, I shall attend to my friend's arguments. He states his propositions thus: 1. God's infinite goodness would prompt him to desire the salvation of all mankind; 2. His infinite wisdom was sufficient to devise means adequate to its accomplishment: and 3 His infinite power was all-sufficient to carry those means into execution, so that the end prompted by infinite goodness, will be attained. This is a correct statement of his first argument, and it shall be fairly met. But why did not my friend bring into his argument all God's attributes as well as these three? The truth is, there would have been too many strings to play the tune of Universalism. Suppose the infinite attribute of vengeance had been substituted in the place of goodness, it would have created the very harmony of discord with his doctrine! Let us try how that string will vibrate: 1. His infinite vengeance (abstract from goodness) would prompt him to desire the damnation of the whole human family; 2. His infinite wisdom was all-sufficient to devise means adequate to bring about the end prompted by infinite vengeance; and 3. His infinite power was sufficient to carry these means into execution, so that the end prompted by infinite vengeance, which is universal damnation, would be attained! This is as sound logic as his.

But let us look at it from another angle. 1. God's infinite goodness would prompt him to desire the holiness and happiness of all men in this life; 2. His infinite wisdom was sufficient to devise means adequate to its accomplishment: and 3. His infinite power was all-sufficient to carry into execution the means devised by infinite wisdom, so that the end prompted by infinite goodness (present universal salvation from sin and misery), would be attained! Thus fellow-citizens, you discover that my opponent's logic contradicts plain matter of fact; and ergo, cannot be sound. He is compelled to take one of two grounds: either 1. That God is now in favor of universal holiness and happiness; or 2. He is opposed to it. If he choose the second then God will always be opposed to universal holiness and happiness; for he is without variableness or shadow of turning! But if he prefer the first, and say that God is now in favor of present holiness and happiness, then let him give us the reason why all are not now holy and happy. Will he venture to tell us that God's goodness is now deficient? Then he will never be any better, unless he is changeable; and consequently those whom his infinite goodness will not now save, will remain unsaved eternally! But will he take the ground that his wisdom is at faut? If so, then those who fail to be saved now, will be lost forever; for God is now as wise as he ever will be! But will he take the ground that the power of God is lacking, and that this is the reason why all are not now saved? If so, then it follows that infinite power is not strong enough to save some men here; and as nothing stronger than infinite power can be expected in eternity, it is incontrovertibly evident that such men cannot be saved there! But should he, in the last place, take the position that God's wisdom, power and goodness, are as perfect, and as much in favor of universal happiness and holiness now, as they ever will be, but that the fault is a on the part of man; then it folows, that man, as a mora agent, has power to frustrate a plan, prompted by infinite goodness, devised by infinite wisdom, and which infinite power was about to carry into execution; and also, that God exercises his atributes with regard to man's salvation, only in such a manner as wil comport with man's mora agency, as a being subject to mora goverment. This latter is unquestionably the true ground, and of course operates as much against universal salvation at one time as another.

But the same argument, to which we have now replied, was presented in a different form. Thus: One of three grounds must be admitted: either 1. God can save all men, but will not; or 2. God will save all men but cannot; or 3. God can save all men and will save all. If you admit the first, and say he can, but will not: you admit his power, but limit his goodness. If you admit the second, and say he will but cannot; you admit his goodness but limit his power. But if you choose the third, and say he will and can, you admit Universalism! Here then, is the argument and my opponent, no doubt, thinks it unanswerable. But if his mind is just as lopsided as this argument, I am not at all surprised that he should leave Universalism, or any other dogma that would happen to get on the upper-hill-side of his intellect.

One of three grounds must be admitted: either 1. God can damn all men, but will not; or 2. God will damn all men, but cannot; or 3. God can damn all men, and will damn all. If my opponent should admit the first, and say that God can, but will not, he grants him power but denies him vengeance. If he admits the second, and say he will, but cannot, he grants him vengeance, but denies him power: but if he admit the third: and say he will and can, he will have universal damnation, or his own logic is good for nothing!

But this can also be disposed of, by bringing it along side of facts as they now exist. Let us try it. One of three grounds must be admitted: either 1. God can save all men from sin in the present life, but will not: or 2. He will save all men, but cannot: or 3. He can save all men in the present life, and will save all! If my friend admit the first, and say he can but will not; he grants the Almighty power but denies his goodness. If he prefers the second, and say he will, but cannot; he admits his goodness, but denies his power: but if he adopt the third saying he can and will save all in the present life, he will say that which everyone knows to be false! Here, then, goes his ad captandum logic by the board, and let him gather up the fragments if he can.

After all my friend's reasoning and philosophy, he finds the stubborn fact of present sin and misery, and that too, as he has to admit, contrary to the will of God, staring him continually in the face; and as long as his hypothetical speculations contradict known and acknowledged matters of fact, the whole scheme must be considered sophistical and false. Notwithstanding before ever God created the earth, his wisdom, power, and goodness, were just as infinite as they are now, or ever will be; and yet, for all this, sin and all its concomitant woes were introduced into existence. This being the fact, it must either have been according to God's will, or against it. If we say against his will, then it may continue against his will to all eternity; for his will can be no stronger at one time than at another. But if we say according to his express will and decree, then sin and misery will eternally exist, as God is unchangeable! It will be a difficult task for any man to prove that God, who is without variableness or shadow of turning, will so vary and so turn, as to decree out of existence that which exists alone by the good pleasure of his counsel! The angels in heaven might have been cheated by this very system of logic, had my opponent been there, before the earth was created. The angel Gabriel comes to him and informs him that the Almighty was about to create a world, and to people it with a race of beings who, he predicted, would sin against God, and thereby introduce sorrow, sighing, sickness and death: and that more than eighteen hundred millions of those intelligent beings, whom God was about to create in his own image, would fall in the field of battle—would hew each other to pieces with the sword—would burn each other at the stake, and roast them alive; would commit each other to the dens of ferocious animals, to be furiously torn in pieces, and that the earth was to be no better than a slaughter house— a valley of carnage and blood-shed for six thousand years! No! says my opponent. Gabriel you are deceived upon this subject; in thinking, that the Almighty is a being who would permit such an enormous amount of sin and suffering to come into existence. I can demonstate from the attributes and perfections of God, that you are a false prophet and that such a disastrous result can never occur in all the universe of created intelligences. One of three grounds you must admit: either 1. God could prevent such a state of things from coming into existence, but will not; or 2. He would prevent it, but cannot; or 3. He can and will prevent it. If you choose the first ground, Gabriel, and say that God can prevent such a state of things but will not; you limit his goodness, which all the angels in heaven know to be infinite. If you adopt the second ground, and say that God would prevent all that suffering, but cannot, you admit his goodness but limit his power, which is too absurd to be admitted for a minute. But if you prefer the third ground, and say that God can prevent such a state of things, and will prevent it, you not only allow the attributes of God to exist, in infinite fulness and perfection; but you give up your cruel dogma of sin and misery, and admit that universal love, joy, and peace will be the ruling and predominant principle, in that beautiful world which the Almighty is about to create! At such profound reasoning, and astonishing powers of intellect, that mighty seraph would doubtless have yielded the point, and remained firm in the faith of universal holiness and happiness, until facts to the contrary had stared him in the face! Such too, may be the condition of my opponent, should he continue in his present faith till the great and terrible day of the Lord.

But I am not yet done with this subject, as I intend fully to explode this new system of a priori logic, before I take my seat: since my opponent offers me all the time I desire, and wishes me to set him straight, if I find him crooked.

The assumption that the nature of God, because he is perfectly holy, will not permit sin and misery to exist in the future state, is as baseless as the castle built in the air. Sin and misery are either opposed to the nature of God now or they are not. If they are not, then they never will be, for his nature changes not; and consequently they will always exist. But if sin and misery are now opposed to the nature of God, this proves that they may exist notwithstanding God's nature is opposed to them! And if they can exist six thousand years contrary to the nature of God, they may, on the same principle, exist eternally, for all the nature of God has to do with the matter. But as sin and misery do now exist, and that too, in opposition to the nature of God, it must be for one of two reasons: either 1. God is willing a thing should exist, in opposition to his nature, or 2. He cannot possible prevent it. If we admit the first, then God will always be willing for wickedness to exist in opposition to his nature (for he is unchangeable) and will consequently be eternally opposed to himself! But if we admit the second, and say that God cannot now prevent the existence of that which opposes his nature, then he can never prevent it, for he is as wise and as powerful now as he ever will be.

Because God has no pleasure in wickedness, my opponent thinks he will certainly destroy it, and that it cannot possibly exist to all eternity. But the arguments relative to sin being opposed to the nature of God, will apply equally to this case. But if, as my friend thinks, God will absolutely destroy out of existence that in which he has no pleasure, then it proves the utter destruction of some men, as well as wickedness, for it is written concerning them: "I have no pleasure in you, saith the Lord." What then, according to his own logic, becomes of my opponent's universal salvation?

Again: If God ever intends to destroy sin by absolute force, why did he not put a stop to it in the garden of Eden, when he would have had much less to do, than at present, or at any future period? Or if, as my opponent argues, the whole matter relative to the destruction of sin, depends upon the omnipotence of God, why did he not act consistently, and exert this attribute in putting a veto upon the power of the devil, and thus have prevented the existence of sin altogether? And as God did not prevent the existence of sin by absolute force, it was either because he could not or would not. If you say because he would not, then sin will eternally exist, for my opponent will tell you, as he has already done, that the will of the immutable God cannot change. But if you say that God did not prevent the existence of sin, from the fact that he could not, then it follows that infinite power (consistent with the moral government of God) could not prevent its existence: and as nothing stronger than infinite power can be expected in eternity, we can but reasonably infer, hence, that sin will exist there, as well as here! For if Almighty power was not strong enough to prevent the existence of sin, how can it be proved that the same power will cause it to cease, after obtaining the foot-hold it has? Any one can see, that it would be much easier to prevent that mighty rock from starting down the hill, then to put a check upon it, after it gets under headway!! So much for the existence of sin.

But still my friend thinks that the attributes of God are in favor of a future universal salvation. Granted: but no more so, than they are in favor of a present universal salvation. This I have hinted at before. If however, God's infinite goodness wills the present salvation of all men which it certainly does; if his infinite wisdom has devised the best possible plan for its accomplishment, which it certainly has; and if infinite power has been exerted to its utmost extent to put that plan into execution, which is most unquestionably the case; why then are not all men saved? One of two answers must be given: either God is to blame for the failure, or else the fault is on the part of man. If we say God is to blame, then he will always be

Emphasis: Right and Wrong

PLACING THE emphasis where it belongs is of the utmost importance, not only in writing, reading, and speech, but in our lives. Many a life has been wasted because of failure to put first things first. A great multitude of people go through life with one thought in mind, namely: "How much pleasure can I get?" Thus they place the emphasis on the frivolities of life, and their ideals rise no higher than the gratification of the cravings of the flesh. A certain amount of recreation is legitimate and necessary for a normal life, but when "having a good time" becomes the consuming thought in our livs then we are headed straight down the declivity of mental and moral degradation to the inevitable fate of final destruction. We are reminded of the words of the apostle: "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption."

Then there is that other large class of people who emphasize in their lives the thought of "making a living." They work early and late; they scheme and plan and worry over the problem of making more money. If you talk with them the conversation invariably turns to money making. They are so much absorbed in making a living that they forget to live. Let us be careful, brethren and sisters, that we do not allow ourselves to be swept along with the swiftly rushing current of humanity who would worship this golden calf; the god of this world. Let not "the care of this world and the deceitfulness of riches choke the word and make it unfruitful." We have heard it remarked concerning men of this type that they were good providers. How easily we are deceived. We call a man a good provider who provides only the bread that perisheth, while within his reach all the while was the heavenly bread which would give life forever more, but he sees it not. Surely this is placing the emphasis in the wrong place.

A few weeks ago we had a most refreshing experience. A brother called at our home one evening: he had come from the middle west where with his family he was in isolation as far as association with those of like precious faith was concerned. He earnestly desired to be with the brethren, and was willing to make sacrifices in order to accomplish this end. The industrial situation did not offer much encouragement for his finding employment in these parts; nevertheless with supreme faith he went back west and made preparations for coming this way. There has been no opening in the industrial field as yet for this brother, but there will be, for God surely will bless the course of true wisdom which he has adopted; he has put first things first. He has placed the emphasis where it belong.

Christ said on one occasion: "He that seeketh, findeth, and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." This is true both in regard to present and future things. We generally get in life the things that we seek. Not what we desire. We may desire a thing without seeking it. To seek a thing is to go after it, to look for it, to make every endeavor to obtain it. If we seek the temporal things of this passing existence, we get just that, and nothing more; but if we seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, we get all that is worth having both now and for eternity. But we must seek it with our whole heart, we must emphasize our desire by a life of obedience. If we put anything before it we will get that instead of it. Let no man or woman think for a single moment that God will accept second place in our lives. In the last analysis we will receive exactly the fruit of our own doings, the thing on which during our lives we have placed the greatest emphasis.

Discussion on Universalism

to blame, for he is without variableness or shadow of turning, and hence all men will never be saved! But if we say the fault is on the part of man, then this admission proves that God exerts his attributes with reference to man's salvation only in such a manner as will comport with man, as a moral responsible agent. And if man acting upon the principle of moral agency, can frustrate the will of God with regard to his present salvation, even when that plan was brought into operation by his infinite goodness, wisdom and power combined; can he not then, I ask, on the same principle, and acting upon the same moral agency, frustrate the same plan also, with regard to his eternal salvation? God either intends to save all men by absolute force, or else their salvation depends upon their own conduct. If the latter, then it is conditional; but if the former, why does he not act consistently, and save them all at once, and have done with it? As he does not now save men by the bare exercise of absolute power, it is either because this is not his way of saving men; or else he is perfectly willing that some men should remain guilty and condemned. If the latter, then they will always remain guilty and condemned, as certain as God is immutable; but if absolute power be not God's way of saving men, then all arguments, based upon the omnipotence of God, with reference to man's salvation, are of no avail! But finally; if God's attributes ever save the wicked, whom they fail to save here in time, it cannot be till his attributes get stronger, or till wicked men reform and get better. If they are not saved till God's attributes get stronger, then they will remain eternally lost, for my opponent boasts of the proposition that God is unchangeable. But to take the ground that the wicked must reform and get better before the attributes of God can effect their salvation, is to renounce Universalism, by admitting the eternal destiny of man to be suspended upon his own conduct!! Thus my opponent is cornered and hemmed in, until escape from the foregoing doubled and twisted dilemmas, and trilemmas, is rendered, I conecive, utterly hopeless.

NO ROOM FOR WASTE

"I am the true vine... Every branch in me that beareth notfruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit" (John 15:1, 2).

It becomes an increasingly solemn conviction to me, that God is using every usable man he can get his divine hand upon, and that to the very utmost. I believe that in the divine economy there is no room for waste; and I believe that if God is not using your life, it is because you are not usable. If God is not filling the vessel with his treasure and then poring it forth, it is only because the vessel is marred.—J. Stuart Holden.

"They Spake Often One to Another"

BROTHER BROWN:

I WISH to report the visits made by Brother W. S. Tomlinson of the Cleveland Ecclesia to our little flock located in Salem, Ohio. Brother Tomlinson has been our speaker once a month since February, 1921. His addresses have been educational and uplifting. He has a rare faculty of presenting the subjects in a logical and impressive manner. His subjects absorb the speaker's mind. The spirit in which he delivers them touches the emotions of his audience. His subjects on May 1st were both timely and interesting. Sunday morning he spoke on the importance of the subject of the death of Jesus the Christ. It nas been our good fortune to hear some of our ablest brethren as speakers and writers on this subject, but have never heard it handled in a more logical manner. His subject Sunday evening was on the subject of Old Testament testimony on the coming of Jesus to set up and establish his kngdom. The testimonies from both Old and New Testaments were so logically blended that the whole discourse was very convincing. We have known Brother Tomlinson for more than a score of years and have known of his educational and spiritual character. We have had the pleasure of meeting a number of the Canton brothers and sisters. They have helped to increase our audiences and have shown their interest in theings educational and spiritaul. These meetings, have ben very helpful and unlifting. May Brother Tomlinson continue in his good work for the gospel of the kingdom of God, is our prayer.

D. C. ROBISON.

DEAR BROTHER BROWN:

WE ARE readers of The Restitution and enjoy so much the many good articles. Since we do not seem to be gifted with the ability to write discourses on God's word, yet like many others, we have the ability to write kind words of appreciation of what is done if we would but take the time.

While we enjoy the works of all the writers and have taken special interest in "Good Company," I myself enjoy the writings so much of Auntie Wince, for since a small child at my "mother's knee" her teachings have been imbued into my mind. What a blessed privilege it is to be so gifted as she is, yet I know it has been largely through her own self-sacrificing ways that she has attained such ability.

We are taking this occasion to ask for a discussion of some points not understood. Would like for someone to discuss Romans 2:12-16; also Romans 14:17

A SISTER.

Obituary

Death in Adam; Life in Christ

LEWIS B. COCHENOUR was born January 4, 1846, near McCuthhenville, Wyandotte County, Ohio. He came to Kosciusko County, Indiana, with his parents in 1861. Here he was married to Miss Emma Chaplin in 1869, and to them were born five children, two of whom have preceded him in death.

He was baptized by Elder Carter and united with the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. He had much to do in the establishment of the Eagle Creek Church, by giving the ground where it stands, sawing the lumber for the building, and having control of its construction, and has been one of its leading officers ever since. In his church work he renedered valuable service in the singing and was always ready to teach and instruct those about him. He made a careful study of the Scriptures and was well informed in the doctrines of the gospel.

A slight stroke of paralysis overtook him about eighteen months ago, which was later followed by an attack of the flu, which left him so weakened that he had no vitality to resist disease. He quietly and peacefully died at 12:45, Sunday morning, May 1, 1921, at the age of 75 years, 3 months, and 27 days. He leaves his faithful companion, three children, Mrs. Lestlie McDonald, of Wankakee, Ill., Frank and Miss Nora at home, one brother and one sister, to remember his life of kind service and love. He also leaves five grandchildren, three great-grand children and many other relatives. He will be missed by many friends and neighbors who knew him from far and near.

Funeral services were held at the Eagle Creek Church Tuesday May 3, at 2 o'clock P. M. Here were gathered in the little church in the "Wildwood," a beautiful grove he had donated, the friends and neighbors and brethren to lay a tribute of respect to his memory. Many floral tributes showed the esteem in which he was held. We spoke from 1 Corinthians 15 on the theme of the resurrection, which was of great importance to the thought of Brother Cochenour while living, to this eager and attentive audience. We then laid him to rest in the adjacent cemetery to sleep in Jesus till the morning of the resurrection.

"Come out from among them"

A DEAR sister says: "I am isolated. There are none of our faith here: I long to raise my voice with others in songs of praise, and the worship of God. My children beg to go to the Sunday School across the way. Is there any serious reason why we should not meet and worship with them? True, their faith and creed are not in harmony with the word; but they teach good morals and right living as earnestly as we."

These and similar questions have long disturbed the minds of God's people. In seeking for a correct answer, we should ever bear in mind that we are described in the word as a "sanctified, or set apart people;" "a royal priesthood;" "a peculiar people;" "a sect everywhere spoken against." These things could never be said of us if we should mingle and worship with and sanction by our voice and presence, the false doctrines and pagan fables which they teach.

Yes, there are many reasons why we should not take part in their worship. The chief of which is, God has said to us, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate O my people." Surely, we should not hesitate to obey a command, couched in language so tender and pleading.

The doctrines and creeds of the sects around us consist of errors and fables, based upon heathen mythology, and are without any foundation in the word of God, and I am fully persuaded, equally as false and foolish, in the sight of God, as the idol worship of the Hindo, or heathen Chinee. We as children of the light, who know and love the word of God, and his purpose as revealed therein, can have nothing in common with them. If we meet with them, sing with them, pray with them, kneel down and rise up with them at the command of their blind leader, shake his hand and compliment him upon his sermon of fables, all of which we are expected to do if we meet with them—do we not become one of them?

Is it wrong to meet with and take part in the worship of the alien? Dear ones, if you were isolated and alone in China, would it be wrong for you to bow down with them, before their man-made gods, fashioned out of wood and stone? Would it be wrong for you to send your little ones, where they would be taught idol worship? Most assuredly it would. To worship man-made creeds and pagan fales is likewise idolatry. Shall we bow down with them who do these things? To do so is surely displeasing in the sight of God. Better by far be content to call our little ones around us, in the privacy of our homes, and there worship God in truth and sincerity.

But it is urged: "I don't take any part in the services; I just kneel when they kneel, and rise with them when they rise, and when the collection box comes round, of course it would look mean not to give something, so I just drop in a nickel. It would be a poor sermon that I could not get a nickel's worth from."

Dear sister, that nickel belongs to God. He has only loaned it to you. Do you think he would have you use it to support the preaching, in his name, of false doctrines, and God-dishonoring fables? Would he have you apply, even one little nickel, on the salary of a man whose business it is to preach error, and lead men and women astray with false doctrines in the name of God? If you can spare a nickel, don't you think he would very much prefer that you send it to The Restitution, or some destitute brother or sister? If we contribute ever so little towards the support of church or preacher, we become, in God's eyes, just as much a partner in their sin, as if we had contributed thousands. There is no middle ground. We must "Come out from among them, and be separate." This is what makes of us "a sect everywhere spoken against."

But I hear it said: "Our Lord and his disciples went into the synagogues and places of public worship where error was taught and truth was unknown." Very true; but they always went there to publicly denounce error and proclaim the truth and for persistently doing so they suffered persecution and death. I am fully persuaded that we also may go today with God's full approval to any orthodox church or heathen temple, if our sole object is to proclaim there the word of God.

No, dear isolated ones, let us not crave the flesh pots of Egypt, but rather let us meet God alone at regular intervals in our home, with our loved ones around us. Let us strive to make such occasions pleasant for the little folks, with plenty of music and little prizes for lessons well learned or questions correctly answered. It is much easier to keep a strong enemy out of our house than to put him out after he has entered. So it is easier to keep false doctrines out of our little one's minds than to root them up and cast them out after being planted there by false teachers at alien Sunday Schools.

GOLDEN TEXT: John 17:3

HOLD TO THE RIGHT

Keep to theright as the law directs;
Keep from the world thy friends defects;
Keep all thy thoughts on purest themes;
Keep from thine eyes the motes and beams.
Keep true thy word—thy honor bright;
Keep firm thy faith in God and right.
Keep free from sin and stain;
Keep free from the ways that give the pain.
Keep free thy tongue from words of ill;
Keep right the aim and the good will.
Keep all thy acts from passion free;
Keep strong in hope, no envy see.
Keep watchful care o'er tongue and hand;
Keep firm thy foot, by justice stand.
Keep true thy word, a secred thing;
Keep from the snare the tempter brings.
Keep faith with each you call a friend;
Keep from all hate and malice free.
Keep firm thy courage, bold and strong;
Keep on the right and down the wrong.
Keep well thy words of wisdom's school;
Keep warm by night, by day keep cool.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

RECENTLY WE have read a series of articles on subjects religious by Charles Nelson Trudell; author of "Everyday Miracles, or Taking God Into Your Business." We here will reproduce what he says concerning

GOING TO HEAVEN

"Every little boy and girl is probobaly told at some time that if they are good they will go to heaven when they die.

"I don't recall that the prospect ever made a pronounced hit with me. In the first place, like the old fashioned life insurance policy, you had to die to beat it; and, secondly, heaven as pictured to me seemed singularly deficient in such real delights as scouting, lollipops and swimming.

"The good old earth, with its green grass, its trees to climb, and its wintry hillsides to coast on, seemed to me vastly preferable to golden streets and the monotony of eternally twanging on a harp.

"And I think if the truth were known most grown people are very much of the same opinion. A lot of "bunk" has been written and preached and talked about. "The Sweet by-and-by," and the "Beautiful land," but I never encountered any deep or widespread anxiety on the part of sane or normal minded people to get there.

"Most of us are inclined to agree with Hamlet that it is better to suffer the ills we know than to fly to others that we know not of.

"How that generally accepted idea of heaven as an abode of bliss for departed spirits to be gained only through the gates of death ever got such a firm hold on human belief, I am at a loss to know. It is one of the elements of most pagan mythologies; but although I am fairly conversant with the Bible I have yet to find one statement in the sacred writings which supports it, unless the plain and literal meaning of the words is twisted and distorted to suit a theological purpose.

"On the contrary, there are numerous passages which indicate a directly opposite conclusion. Even the vision of St. John the Divine, from which most of the conventional ideas of "Heaven" are derived, and which is obviously symbolic in its language, describes a "new" or changed earth rather than some remote realms to which we pass through death."

This is straight talk, and from a man of the prominence of Truedell should have a certain amount of weight with the general reading public. But the average man is a queer animal: he passes through the roads that have the least resistance, content to accept the popular theories rather than take the time and patience required in searching paths for himself, not knowing, not realizing, not caring for the beauties that he misses and that are at his very feet did he but take the exertion of leaning over and picking them up

Some day things will be different, but then, I am afraid, it will be too late, for when that day comes it will be because Christ has come.

HEBREWS 10:25

"NOT FORSAKING the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more as ye see the day approaching."

To meet at stated intervals for the purpose of worshipping God and to build each other up is no more a duty than it is a privilege, and it is no more a privilege than it is a duty: it embraces both, and they each increase as the nearness of the second coming of Christ draweth near. This command of the Master, given through Paul for us to "assemble" is for our edification and profit. The exhorting signifies teaching each other, upholding each other through the power of brotherly love. Soon the Master shall be here; let us obey his commands and thus be ready to meet him.

DEAR BROTHER DONALDSON:

Have been thinking a great deal lately about

THE SUCCESS FAMILY

and am going to give you my idea concerning it.

The father of success is WORK.

The mother of success is AMBITION.

The oldest son is COMMON SENSE.

Some of the other boys are HONESTY, PERSEVERANCE, THOROUGHNESS, FORESIGHT, ENTHUSIASISM, COOPERATION.

The oldest daughter is CHARACTER.

Some of the other girls are CHEERFULNESS, LOYALTY, COURTESY, CARE, ECONOMY, SINCERETY, HARMONY, TRUTH.

The baby is OPPORTUNITY.

Never slight the baby. Get well acquainted with the father and you will be able to get along pretty well with the rest of the family.

I feel you must be on intimate terms with the father for The Young People's Page surely is a success.

JOHN HOWARD.

Thank you John. You have the privilege of calling again. A. D. D.

AN ECHO OF "A LETTER ANSWERED"

IN OUR issue of March 15th, we had an article entitled "A Letter Answered," in which by request we tried to give our idea of the meaning of 1 Tim. 2:9 and 1 Pe. 3:3. Now comes a letter from Rochester N. Y., asking us to furnish the name and address of the writer of the original letter which somehow we have mislaid. If our correspondent of the west will kindly send up her name and address we will forward her the Rochester letter, which, after reading she desires to communicate with this good sister of Rochester, she can do so.

THE GREATEST OF THESE

Faith said, "Tis brighter further on."
Hope said, " I see the coming dawn."
Love said, the greatest of the three, "The brightness has been found, the morn is here, they are found in me."

When Jesus Christ, the personification of God's love, shall come, there will be no further use for faith and hope; for we shall see Jesus as he is. Our faith then shall be a certainty; our hope shall be realized. Then we shall be partakers with Jesus of the promises of God.

JESUS SAID

"Do ye now believe? Behold the hour cometh, yea is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone, because the Father is with me. These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world" (John 16:31-33).

DO RIGHT

THE ESTABLISHMENT with which we are engaged employs about three thousand people. So you readily will understand that something constantly is happening, and no matter what does happen, little or no excitement is caused. On Friday morning while Mr. Seigel was removing his overcoat and hat preparing for business he fell and death came immediately. On Saturday an old trusted employee was detected stealing merchandise (which he admitted he had been doing for two and half years) and was discharged. At home he had an invalid wife and child. Of the two situations I feel that I would much rather experience Mr. Seigle's than the other man's There is but one way for us to live and that is acknowledging Jesus as the Christ the Son of God; to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly before our God. When we do this we will not take to ourselves things belonging to other people. And should death come unexpectedly we will have no fear; for he who is prepared to live is also prepared to die.

TRY RELIGION!

HORACE GREELEY once received a letter from a woman stating that her church was in distressing financial straits, says a writer in the "Sunday School Times." They had tried every device they could think of—fairs, strawberry festivals, oyster suppers, a donkey party, turkey banquets, Japanese weddings, poverty sociables, mock marriages, grab-bags, box sociables and necktie sociables. "Would Mr. Greeley be so kind as to suggest some new device to keep the struggling church from disbanding?" The editor replied, "Try religion."

Help the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

There comes a time in every life, yes in every day, when we must decide which of two courses we will take. Jesus himself declared that we "can not serve two masters." When we find it difficult to choose between two lines of conduct we may be sure that God will help us, as he did the people of Israel, if we ask him. If there is doubt we should always give God and the rght the benefit of the doubt.—Our Boys and Girls.

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JUNE 7th, 1921 NUMBER 21

Thine Alone

O God, let reverence and love be mine,
And let my heart to thee incline,
That I may know thy will each hour,
Each moment and each day,
That all my life shall be as clay
Within thy hands to mold.
Help me that all my thoughts and deeds
Shall be in helping other's needs
And other's woes, until
Through me thou shalt in them abide,
Through me thy name be glorified,
Thy matchless love be told.

Help me to turn my listening ear
Thy faintest whisperings to hear,
As well thy trumpet voice;
So that in every thing I do
Thy purpose may be kept in mind
Thy will alone my choice.
Then as the years shall come and go,
Through summer's sun and winter's snow,
My life for thee shall be,
And when the path through valleys deep
Shall lead to that last dreamless sleep
I shall sweetly rest in thee.

The God-Given Charm

By S. ROXANA WINCE

Wouldst thou have empire by sign or spell,
Over the mighty in air that dwell?
Wave but this rod and a viewless band
Slaves to thy will shall around thee stand.

And would not fear at my coming then
Hush every voice in the homes of men?
Would not bright eyes at my presence quail?
Young cheeks with a nameless thrill turn pale?
No gift be mine that aside would turn
The human love for whose founts I yearn."

Mrs. HEMANS.

THE SERVANT of Christ turns with horror from the cup brewed by the witch in her midnight orgies. He needs no necromancer's "sign," "spell," or "god" to have empire o'er the mighty, or over men as well. for God has put a "charm" in his hands which unto them that are called, is the power of God and the wisdom of God. There is no other charm like it, no other charm that can turn the foulest of men into beings as pure as the angels of heaven; no other rod that we can wave in behalf of any worthy cause and have all good and true servants of the Lord Jesus Christ flock to our aid as they will when we hold up this —"preaching the cross of Christ," "the gospel of salvation," or glad tidings of a coming kingdom that is to endure as long as the sun and moon endure.

So when just the other day, our beloved Brother Griffiths said to me, "I am again applying to you for your co-operative help in behalf of the The Restitution" (the Board of Directors of which he is a member, having authorized him to raise $1000 for a working capital and to help in defraying the excessive cost of production during the past year); I looked up to the Lord from whence my help cometh, and with a persistency that I could not escape, those lines of Mrs. Heman's and the God-given gospel "charm" as contrasted with the necromancer's unlawful "spell" kept following me round, and I felt that if I was to made of any help to you in this matter, I must use this "power of God" the gospel wand or spell.

Brother Griffiths says: "Our job department has been the only means of keeping alive our beloved paper, so we have much to thank our readers for in th past. However, we cannot do business without a little capital, and that we need very urgently. We have raised $402.00 in the Cleveland church, and with your kindly help feel sure we can raise the balance." With God's blessing we surely can. $600.00 is a very small sum in his sight, and a God who can keep a star of 300,000,000 square miles in diameter (such as Betelguese, the star in the right shoulder of Orion is), moving for endless ages through depths of space of which we can have no conception, is certainly able to give us whatever sum we ask for. Scientists have but recently measured this star, and I have been wanting to tell you about it ever since, that you might have a better conception of the greatness and the power of him who you serve.

This mighty God this Creator of suns, such as Betelguese, gave you the gospel. You love it. It is "the power of God" whereby you are saved a power that will hold you fast for endless years, for

Dear dying Lamb, thy precious blood
Will never lose its power,
'Till all the ransomed hosts of God
Are saved, to sin no more.

And loving the gospel as you do, and realizing that having that gospel, it is not only your privilege but your bounden duty to pass it on. You will certainly give.

God is testing you here; will you stand the test ? Will you give as he has blessed you ? You don't want the light that is shed by this precious paper to die out. It is God's paper—remember that. You have pledged yourselves to support it. And you can easily do this by raising a working fund.

Brother Griffiths has over $100.00 of orders in hand, and as much more coming in shortly, so you can see we need capital to do the work. It cannot be done without capital.

It is sound business policy to raise this money that these orders may be filled, and O the joy of doing it when we know that in this way we are spreading the knowledge that will save men and women for eternity! And what you do, do quickly, for the Lord is coming!

I beg of you not to make any excuse. Give, trustng in God. He will supply all your needs If you give bountifully, you will reap bountifully. No one ever failed of a blessing who gave to the cause of God in the right spirit. This is the uniform testimony of all true-hearted givers. It has been my blessed experience for years. I give and do without things, and the things I need God sends, and lots of love besides.

He is a faithful God. He keeps his promises. He says he will provide, and he does it. He cares for the widow who gives her mite and for the poor washerwoman, and the orphaned sewing girls who put their tithe into his treasury. No one need feel afraid to give.

"As every one hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another as good stewards of the manifold grace of God."

"The end of all things is at hand; fear God and obey him" (Mal. 3.10, 11).

The Rich Man and Lazarus

IN THE interpretation of this parable we shall make the same announcement as in former parables, viz., all the parables were spoken to Israel, and must therefore be applied to them. In this parable we have two principal characters introduced; the Rich man and Lazarus. Many of our writers identify these as the Jew and the Gentile: we take exception to this because it is in opposition to several parts of the parable. The rich man states that he has five brethren whom he wishes to be saved from that place of torment. No Jew would regard a Gentile as his brother. They were not regarded as beneficaries of the promises made to Abraham. Jehovah had made a different arrangement for their salvation in his purpose.

Until we began a close study of the parables we held the above explanation. The two characters spoken of, to our view, are identified in the ruling class in the kingdom of Israel. They were clothed in purple and fine linen and fared sumptuously every day. This will include both political and ecclesastical rulers. They were arbitrary and ruled with a rod of iron, even to demanding the life of their subjects, as did Ahab the king of Naboth whose vineyard he wanted as a place of pleasure which was near the royal palace.. When he could not procure it by fair means he resorted to murder. When the prophet recited the parable of the lamb to king David, and how it had been taken, the king said, "Surely that man shall die." These two incidents show the power that the ruling class exercised over the ruled class. This class had no right that the king was required to respect This class represents the beggar, named Lazarus. They lay at the rich man's gate, and were dependent on the rich for their food, and were regarded as full of sores. They were an underling class and despised by the rich.

To make a personal application, we understand that the pharisees represent the first class. See verses 14 to 19 of this chapter. They were the dominating, hypocritical, ruling class of that day. "The pharisees also who were coveteous heard these things: and they derired him." In the above we see the estimate that the pharisees placed on Jesus and his followers. They were beggars and sinners, and full of sores.

The purpose that Jesus had in declaring this parable was to teach these pharisees that the time would come when their order or arrangement would be changed. That is, the beggar would become the ruling class and they or their class become the ruled class.

We shall now proceed to interpret the parable in harmony with the above. "It came to pass that the rich man died and was buried; and in hell (hades) he lifted up his eyes, being in torment." The Rheim tsranslation gives it, "He was buried in hell" (hades). In their minds Jesus and his followers were a poor, despised and beggarly class. In declaring ths parable Jesus understood this, and so framed his parable. In the parable the rich man was in torment and Lazarus, honored as his son, enjoying the blessings belonging in the Abrahamic covenant. This part of the parable will have its fulfilment after the resurrection when the Lazarus class are in possession of the kingdom of God and the pharisee class will be thrust out.

In support of this position we call attention to a statement found in Luke 13:27, 28. Jesus said: "I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God and yourselves thrust out." The saying of Jesus, "The first shall be last, and the last shall be first" is beautifully fulfilled in the changed conditions as taught in this parable. The rich man received the good things until his temple and city were destroyed and he was sold into slavery and scattered among the nations. In this condition we observe him in hades and in torment.

To realize the severity of this punishment please read Deut. 28. In the latter part of this chapter we read: "The Lord shall give thee there a trembling heart and failing eyes and sorrow of mind. Thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shalt fear day and night, and shall have none assurance of thy life." How severe and literal were these punishments. We can see them still afflicting the class which the rich man reperesents.

The rich man in his torment prayed that Abraham send Lazarus to his father's house: for I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them lest they also come into this place of torment, Abraham said, "They have Moses and the prophets, let them hear them. The rich man said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent." He received the final answer, "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." The pharisees were so influenced by their traditions that they rejected the teachings of the prophets and Jesus. Therefore they would not believe one though he rose from the dead. How literally was this fulfilled in the preaching of the apostles whom Jesus sent out to preach the gospel to every creature. They preached Jesus as the resurrected one, and they rejected him and his gospel. This parable is a scathing rebuke to the obstinate and hypocritical pharisaic class We have avoided the discussion of this parable as evidence of the future state of the dead. Being a parable and addressed to the pharisees it can have no such interpretation.

D. C. ROBISON.

"Jacob's Trouble"

ALAS! FOR that day is great, and that none is like it; it is time of Jacob's trouble, but he shall be saved out of it (Jer. 30:7).

A SERIES of articles by Sterling P. Groves have been running in The Restitution, considering the Jewish question. This question is in our opinion pre-eminently the most momentous of all questions whether social, political, or religious. Paul in Rom. 15:20; 2 Cor. 10:16 desired to preach only upon ground not previously occupied by another. Hence the writer does not desire to trespass in fields gone over by Brother Groves. In speaking or writing upon subjects relating to the truth, the writer finds it difficult to be absolutely original. We can only present the matter as our mind conceives it, realizing that often in doing so we find that our mind is running parallel to another.

The greatest paradox today is, a people not recognized by any nation as a distinct and separate nation, is in fact just that, viz., distinct and separate from every other nation. and for two thousand years has been scattered, peeled, hated and persecuted in every land, holding themselves aloof from the religious beliefs and customs of other nations, and yet as much a part of these nations as the most patriotic, whether it be German, French, British or American. Paul in Rom. 11:15 makes a startling statement, he says: "For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?" All other nations have either gone down into oblivion or will, in the near future, do so, for this is according to the word of God their final destiny.

Who can read Jer. 23:7, 8 without being impressed with the thought, that God for this nation has a wonderful future? Listen to this: "Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land assuredly with my whole heart, and with my whole soul" (Jer. 33:41). Moses in the spirit of prophecy (see Deut. 28:12, 13), declares that this nation will become the "head and not the tail" of all nations. Then Zech 8:22, 23 will be fulfilled.

All this is precisely what Henry Ford has been saying in the "Dearborn Independent," a weekly magazine owned, published, and controlled by him. These articles were written to stir up anti-Jewish sentiment in the United States. How far they have been successful can readily be seen by the forces gathering for a legal battle to determine whether an ordinance forbidding the sale of "scandalous or obscene literature" can stop the sale of the "Dearborn Independent" or the selling of "Facts," a publication printed in response to the "Dearborn Independent." Already police have been given orders to arrest people selling these publications.

Briefly, it appears the Jews are accused of employing methods and agencies the most vile and despicable, to reduce the Gentiles to the level of brute beasts. When the Gentiles are reduced to this condition, they are to be ruled over by a Jewish king set up by the Jews themselves, they being "God's chosen people," all nations thus becoming vassals to them the Jews. David says in Psa. 76: 10; "surely the wrath of man shall praise thee; the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain." Beloved. I am laughing and chuckling to myself as I see the hand of our heavenly Father in all this. How tremendously God is working among us! It is startling. Are we upon the stream of time now in Rev. 16:13-16?

What is the basis of all these anti-Jewish articles? It appears that somehow, Henry Ford came into possession of twenty-four mysterious secret documents known as the Protocols of the learned Elders of Zion, these having been previously published and circulated in Great Britain and Russia as far back as 1906. They are supposed to be, in their present form, the notes of lectures delivered to an inner circle in France and Switzerland in 1896. In an article for The Resttution it is imposible to give details. If my readers will consult the issues of "The Pathfinder" for the months of January and February, Nos. 1413 and 1414, the whole matter is gone into and explained, and as one writer has stated. "nothing like them in completeness of detail, in breadth of plan and depth of grasp of the hidden springs of human action, has ever been known. They are verily terrible in their mastery of the secrets of life, equally terrible in their consciousness of that mastery."

Lying before me is a copy of "The Crusader's Almanac for 1921"; on page 37 is an article on "Zionism." It is a bitter wail from the Roman Catholic church against the "domineering and aggressive policy" of the Zionist Movement in Palestine. It appears that a gentleman by the name of "The Right Rev. Father Ferdinand Doitallavi, O. P. N. Custos of the Holy Land," has been elected as an officer of the crown of Italy for his meritorious efforts as custos of the Holy Land." It appears that the Catholic Church and the Arabs are questioning the right of the Jews to reign and control Palestine. Is it not strange that the pope is not better informed? He cannot read his Bible and be blind to the fact that God intends as ever promised, that his chosen people, not the pope, shall occupy and rule in Palestine. If he would study Deut. 32:22-43 surely he must then recognize what God intends to do with the nations, including himself and his people Israel.

Read God's promises contained in Hannah's prayer (1 Sam. 2:1-10). I have often wondered why every man's hand should be against the Jew in the day of Jacob's trouble: but I no longer wonder, since reading these twenty four protocols. Back in the days of the Exodus as Israel was leaving Egypt, God commanded them to "spoil the Egyptians" (Exod. 3:22; 12:30-36). After their flight, Pharoah and his servants turned against Israel. Note previously Israel found favor. Pharoah pursued them to his destruction. History will again repeat itself. A vast army will move upon the city of Jerusalem to destroy it and to take a spoil. Israel previously, as they are now doing, spoiled them (Ezek. 38:9-12; Ezek. 39:10; Jer. 30:16).

What will bring all this about? The same thing that brought on "The world war," viz., Envy. Envy slew Jesus (John 11:40, 48; Matt. 27:18). It put Joseph in Egypt (Acts 7:9). It often jeopardized the life of Paul (Acts 17:5); and it will culminate in the envy of God's people (Isa. 26:11).

The Jews are a power in the land today; they for their own interest are skillfully manipulating every activity of human endeavor. They are excelling and forcing themselves to the front. God is on their side. Jesus said: "But if I cast out devils by the spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you. Or else how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man, and then he will spoil his house. He that is not with me, is against me, and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad" (Matt. 12:28-30).

The work of binding the strong man (sin) has begun. Notice Jesus said in Matt. 13:30, "Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them." For all I know, God is using the Jews as outlined by Henry Ford to gather the tares together in bundles. This may be in many forms, societies, both fraternal and political, and even religious. Selfishness prevails everywhere. God will keep as he has in the past, his people Israel together. "In union there is strength," especially is this so if in union with God and his purposes. "For if God be for us, who can be against us?"

Beloved, I am happy and singing for joy because today this Scripture is being fulfilled: "Thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion; for the time to favor her, yea, the set time is come. For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favor the dust thereof. So the heathen (the Gentiles) shall fear the name of the Lord, and all the kings of the earth thy glory. When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory" (Psa. 102:13-16).

Obituary

Death in Adam; Life in Christ

IT IS our sad duty to record the sudden death of the wife of our dear Brother J. H. Anderson, of Virginia. Lula A. Wall Anderson was born in Cherokee, N. C., October 20, 1885. and died in Shenandoah Co., Va., May 23, 1921. at the age of 35 years, 7 months, and 3 days.

She was united in marriage with Brother Anderson in Piedmont, S. C. Oct. 5, 1902. She was the mother of seven children, all living. There remains to mourn her loss her husband and children, one sister, two brothers and a large number of friends. After marriage she accepted the gospel and was baptized by Brother Anderson's father, Elder E. M. Anderson. She saw four of her oldest children baptized by her husband.

The funeral services were conducted in the home by Brother John Anderson, one of the largest ever held in this county. Many of her friends could not accept her views of the Bible, yet her Christian character appealed to all. She sleeps at Maurestown, Va., to await the call of the trumpet. It can truly be said of her—

> Asleep in Jesus! peaceful rest,
> Whose waking is supremely blest;
> Nor fear nor woe shall dim the hour
> That manifests the Savior's power.

D. C. ROBISON, by request.

PUNCTUALITY

GOD DOES everything on time. Seasons come and go on time; the earth swings in its orbit of millions of miles to a minute. Suns and systems sweep their unmeasured circles without the loss of a second. Jesus came exactly the time appointed. Pentecost was not a minute late, and Christ will appear at the exact moment scheduled.

John Wesley, under the divine momentum of this prnciple, exhorts "Be punctual, do everything exactly at the time." A habit of breaking this principle unfits for any place in God's kingdom. The minister who begins service ten minutes late is a thief. He robbed his people of that much time. If there were three hundred people waiting he robbed them of 3000 minutes—five working days, besides setting an example still more damaging and injured their confidence in his faithfulness in meeting engagements.

Editorial

Much to our regret and loss Brother and Sister Cantwell Drabenstott have returned to Indiana.

Recent visitors have been Alfred Smith and his sister Mary, of Monroeville, Ohio; and Brother and Sister Heacock and daughter, of Canton, Ohio.

After a very edifying confession of faith the following friends were inducted into Christ by baptism May 15th: Wm. J. Halls, formerly Methodist; Perce Thompson, formerly Baptist; Mrs. Pearl Thompson, Brother Thompson's wife, formerly Lutheran.

We are happy to announce that Sister Alice Linsenmier, the mother of Sister Florence Linsenmier, has come into our fellowship after proper deliberation Sister Linsenmier is the daughter of Sister Anna Nutt. Thank God for his truth which binds our hearts in love.

May 26th, at the sound of the wedding march, skillfully played by Sister Frances Russell, Sister Marvel Gibbs and Brother Alfred Titman appeared before the marriage altar, and before a goodly number of witnesses, mutually pledged themselves to the vows of matrimony. Brother and Sister Titman have the good wishes and prayers of the brethren for happiness in their new life.

Let us press on toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, knowing there awaits us a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge shall give me at that day. And not to me only, but unto all them which love his appearing. Then he will care for his own: this mortal shall put on immortality. Then we shall have the divine nature and power to do miracles. Then we will have perpetual youth and beauty: no more growing old and helpless and passing as a faded flower, but one long calm of peace and love. So great are the promises and power of God we can scarcely comprehend them in our finite minds. Wherefore let us keep ourselves unspotted from the world, being diligent in the service of doing good and serving God that we may be ready at his appearing.

"Your letters are a comfort to me."

"It sure does cheer us lonely ones to know that the dear ones of like precious faith love us dearly, and write to us. May God bless you in your good work. Go on cheering the lonely ones; it will not be long."

ONCE MORE

AMONG THE chief things for which the National Berean Society stands is UNITY. And to promulgate this it has urged attendance to its annual conferences, of delegates from all the states where Berean work is carried on. To make this possible and fair the Society has assisted in equalizing railroad fare of those from long distances, or paying transportation one way for a distant delegate. Evidently from this fact a report has been circulated that Berean officers have their fares paid to the different meetings. As has been stated heretofore, this it not true. No Berean officer as a Berean officer has ever had his or her expenses, in full or part, paid to any place whatever. The officers have paid their own way to these meetings and sometimes at a very great personal sacrifice. No remuneration of any kind is received by them for the time and labor expended, so if you meet one of those nefarious rumors please deal with it as it deserves.

By order of the Executive Board of the Bereans.

Remarks

MARCH HAS been a busy month: on the second I went to Palmer to officiate at a wedding, and stayed over one day, and spoke in the evening with a hundred per cent attendance, then hurried home to prepare for a trip to Buckhart, Mo., to engage in a sixteen day debate; but by request gave the brethren in Omaha a meeting the 6th and started the following day to Kansas City, where I expected to remain all night, but I found I could get out in a little over an hour, so continued my journey and arrived at Mountain Grove, Mo., at 10:40 at night.

I had to put up till morning, and take the Ford truck to Buckhart, 25 miles, that I described to you on a former visit, and it had lost none of its former activities; the trip was about the same as the former one. I sat on the front seat with the driver, and as the bottom was mostly out, I could see all the machinery, and know pretty well what a Ford looks like in action. When we finally arrived at Buckhart no one was there to meet me. I was a day ahead of time, which accounted for it. How to get to Brother Herren's with my luggage was the problem. I finally saw a man drive up to the store, so I started negotiations, and after consulting his wife and then me, for a couple of rounds we struck a bargain at 25 cents a mile. Well, we finally arrived at Brother Herrens, and after a hearty lunch, the chief topic was, where was my opponent?

He was not on hand, so we decided to hold meetings till he arrived, which he did Saturday. The Methodist people had the house for Saturday and Sunday so we could not begin till the 14th.

A year and a half ago, when I was there before, I baptized a family of Latter Day Saints, and it hurt them so they talked debate from that time on, and thought they could recover their lost ground. They finally got A. M. Baker, a champion debater, who in his early mnistry debated Brother Foore. I soon discovered he was there to win that debate if possible, by any means that could be employed, fair or foul, and in this case mostly foul; but his lack of argument and his tactics lost him ground every day, till the last two nights when I got him in some tight and ludicrous places. The crowd could restrain their enthusiasm no longer, and clapped their hands, and stamped their feet. The show of defeat upon their faces was almost pitiful.

In his affirmative, that the kingdom was already set up, he took the position that when the little stone of Dan. 2 begins its work, the image must be on its feet and all those empires in existence. So he said, the clay, the iron, brass, silver and gold were broken together. I told them that when he had succeeded in showing how four universal empires could occupy the same territory and rule the same people at the same time, we would consider his position; but until he did, it was not worth considering. I was never able to force him to even try to do it. His time was taken up in trying to evade this point and cover it up, but I kept pulling the cover off, and bared the skeleton to the full view of the audience; then he would go into a rage. He said the Latter Day Saint's church as organized by Joe Smith was the kingdom of God, and the little stone that was to break in pieces these present day kingdoms, and said Germany and Russia were about broken up and thrones were tottering. I told him to point out what part the Latter Day Saints had played in breaking up these governments, and we would consider that point. He then said as a forced measure of course, God was working through the nations. Well, we said, that is a fatal admisson: it leaves out the Latter Day Saints church just as I thought it would. He never recovered from that.

When we came to the church question I proved the name "Church of God" to be a Bible name, and Jesus was the head, and the beginning was when he rose from the dead (Col. 1:18). God not only put Jesus at the head of his church, but appointed certain offices in the church, and men were chosen for those places according to their fitness. I showed that the first were apostles, and they were the witnesses of Jesus, and wrote the word, had a special work to do, and a mission that was fulfilled and passed out; because the work was done and no such necessity existed now. They confirmed the word and proved God was with them, by the signs and mighty wonders they did; then as necessity arose, other officers were chosen, and the manner of their choosing put on record, and what kind of men they ought to be. These apostles belonged to the church of God, and performed miracles, as he had to admit, therefore the church of God had apostles and miracles; a thing they supposed we never claimed; besides they were genuine. So our claim was established and never broken.

Then came his turn. Now if I had fully proved the church of God was the name and the doctrines and practices were scriptural, what was the use for him to try to prove his position, as God never had two churches; but he was determined to make the attempt. I told him to prove to us where there ever existed a church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints prior to 1830. This I said you must do before we will consider its being reorganized. You cannot reorganize a thing that never existed. He was not prepared to meet that kind of an argument, and saw at once he was destined to defeat on his pet theory. He never could tell us where such a church existed. I told him his church was 1779 years late upon the scene; he then said it was established during the ministry of Christ. I asked him to read it to us; this he failed to do. Paul in Col. 1:18 told when it began. He said the church must be identical with the church as organized and as it existed in the days of Jesus. I said if it actually existed then, it had a Christ visibly at the head. Now where is your Christ to make it identical? This again put him to silence. And when he came to the miracles as they were in the days of the apostles, he was up against more assumption. He said I was like the pharisees, seeking for signs. I reminded him of his mistake. I told him I had never asked for a sign; one reason was because I knew he could not give any; another was, I had only asked him why he did not go out and obey orders, as Jesus had positively told him what to do: freely they had received, now freely give, and no one had heard of them doing this, and they have had 90 years to do it. And if they have 90 more they will still be found wanting

I asked him how he knew their apostles were chosen of God, we just had their word for it. I told him to read 2 Cor. 12:12. There Paul showed what the signs of an apostle were; and when their apostles could give the signs, we would accept them. Again, I told him you have 70 too many offices in your church: the 70 Jesus chose were sent to the Jews only, so you are sending them to the wrong people: but he could find no place where they were ever mentioned as officers in the church, not even referred to after Jesus rose from the dead. This again was a stumbling block to him. He said he was called upon to administer to a young lady who had been bitten on the arm by a snake, and he healed her. I have been informed that the kind of snake he mentioned will not bite, and is not poison if it does; but the give away was that Jesus said the bite of serpents would not hurt them. Well, the further he went the more ridiculous it was. I told him Jesus was to set up his kingdom at Jerusalem, not Independence, Mo. This he studiously avoided mentioning. After laboring for 16 sessions to prove a fake doctrine, and church, he showed he positively knew he had failed. I think it will be a long time before they want any more debates with our people.

We closed with quite a few people interested in the truth and urged me to come back, which I promised to do when possible. So it looks favorable for the truth; the result is with God. One local minister got up and said he had learned something he never knew before, but what it was he did not vouchsafe to tell us; I hope it was something that would do him good even to everlasting life. During the day Brother Herren and I had many good talks over the weak points in my opponent's position, and were bound closer to the truth than ever, because it stayed by us. I was truly glad to meet the brethren here once more. Old Brother and Sister Herren were too feeble to attend every meeting, but did fine for people of their years. The time came once more to say good by and board the vehicle manufactured by the man of anti-Semitic fame, and pull for Mountain Grove, where we took the train for Springfield, Mo. Being on our route, we were requested to stop off as we have one brother and sister here. I am here now and will tell you about it next month, the Lord willing.

GOLDEN TEXT: Psalm 125:1

ON ZION MOUNT

On Zion mount will soon appear
Lo a ransomed shining band,
Sparkling crowns of glory wearing,
Pure of heart and clean of hand
They are blessed
Who will upon mount Zion stand.

Waves of glory streaming o'er them,
Hark they chant the gospel lay,
While their Leader on before them
Guides them through eternal day,
They are blessed,
For their tears will be wiped away.

Then they range the fields of glory,
Then their sorrows will all be o'er,
Then they'll tell the wondrous story
Saved from death to die no more.
They are blessed
Who will reach that blissful shore.

Friendship, peace, and joy forever,
Reign throughout that happy land,
Sin nor death shall reign there never,
There will be an unbroken band.
They are blessed
Who will upon mount Zion stand.

Selected by Sister EDNA OSTEEN.

PHILIPPIANS 1:12

"BUT I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel."

At the time the apostle Paul wrote the above, he had been a prisoner for two years in a Roman prison, and in that day the prisons, whether in Rome or elsewhere were not as good as our prisons are today. His mind was, on those two years, spent behind prison bars, together will all the indignities that went with them, and he said: "All these things that happened unto me have fallen out rather to the furtherance of he gospel."

The secret of the apostle Paul's life is that he organized it around a great purpose; and that purpose was Jesus Christ. He acknowledged God as the Creator, the sustainer and upbuilder. He knew that God was love and through his love for mankind he gave his Son to be the Savior of mankind. Acknowledging this he placed his hope in God's plan and accepted the embodiment of God's love—which is Jesus the Christ— as his "wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption." He made Christ the main issue of his life, the only purpose worth while the only purpose that counted. It was the apostle Paul who said, "We preach Christ crucified," and he stated his high purpose when he uttered, "I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified." He again announces his full surrender to the Master in the words: "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world." And here let it be known that from a worldly standpoint Paul had much to glory in. He enumerated many of his worldly accomplishments stating, "Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more." And yet what value does he place upon it all? This is his own answer: "But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord; for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ."

The apostle Paul was an efficient man because his entire life was dominated by this great spiritual purpose. An efficient man is one who overcomes all obstacles, no matter how great, and accomplishes his purpose, and this "the apostle to the Gentiles" did. He "forgot those things which were behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, he pressed toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

And this is the great secret of life after all. Existence means little until dominated and strengthened by some great purpose; this accomplished life becomes worth while. From this moment let us make Christ the center around which our entire life shall evolve. Mere pleasures of the world never will bring permanent happiness. We enjoy a holiday for the days of work before and after. There must be a major purpose controlling our lives to bring us real happiness. We are living in an age of uncertainty and unrest, and never before has there been a greater need for spiritually minded people than there is today.

The purpose in writing this is to make you think, to have you make Christ the dominating purpose of your life; to make Christ the possession of every man, every woman, every boy, every girl that reads this article, so we can bring others to God.

A SHUT IN

SISTER EDNA OSTEEN who thinks enough of The Restitution's readers to send in the poem that is at the top of today's page, quotes, in her letter, part of the 125th Psalm, as follows:

"They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth forever. As the waters are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even for ever."

Sister Osten, who is an invalid also wrote: "At this writing I am feeling much better being able to be up most of the time." She closes her letter with. Your sister looking for the Master to come soon."

What a glorious hope, and what a perfect trust! The Lord will come soon and while we wait the Lord is round about us, caring for us and watching ever us. Ye who believe in prayer, kindly remember or sister in your supplications.

A WORD TO THE FAULTFINDER

IT IS not what you know, or what you could do, but what you do that counts. No one has any serious use for the mere talkers or wishers. To think well is a step in the right direction; to DO well is much better. Thinking amounts to nothing—unless supplemented with action.

At times doing well is a thankless occupation; the hypocritical are so keen picking flaws that they fail to recognize accomplishments.

With microscopic exactness they discover the specks on an otherwise immaculately white sheet; then they proceed to tear up the sheet.

It always was and now is much easier to undo than to DO.

The worst in us is destructive, the best constructive. No matter how limited we are in our attainments we each can be constructive to the limit of our ability, and the little that each of us does figures high in the aggregate.

In the matter of church of Bible school work we will be wise not to criticise or pass judgment on what someone else is trying to do in an effort to upbuild and strengthen, seeking rather to accomplish something for the benefit of all.

DO YOU OR DON'T YOU

Up to this writing, there has not been much interest manifested regarding our suggestion to inaugurate a department of

and as such a department to us simply means added work to an already busy life we shall not undertake it unless there is a demand for it. If you want it, say so; if you don't want it, we will know by your silence.

We're willing! But

Be Kind to the Aged

IT SEEMS to me that the saddest of all human experience is old age. It seems but yesterday to grandpa and grandma, when they were full of life and rugged strength, and in full enjoyment of all their faculties, and at the head of every undertaking of the family, and it seemed to them as if it must always remain so; but at fifty years there comes whispers of a change: their eyes get dim at times, and hearing dull, the step is less elastic than of yore, and when grandpa undertakes to lift a stone that twenty years ago he could lift with ease, he finds with something like a shock that he cannot move it.

At sixty grandpa and grandma are expected to step aside and let the children run the farm or business, and manage the affairs of the family.

At seventy and onward grandpa and grandma are feeble and tottering, almost blind and deaf; they realize but a part of what is going on around them. They are not consulted any more, but the family life with its joys, sorrows, and ambitions, go on without them or their help; and they now begin to feel that dreadful fear that at last they have reached that point in life where they are only in the way, and a burden on the hands of those they love. No pen can picture, no word express the anguish of the dear ones who reach this milestone. They realize that they are dull and old-fashioned; that somehow the world has forged ahead and left them behind. When company comes they feel awkward and out of place; they become super-sensitive, and ever looking for yet dreading to see some expression or evidence that they are a burden, and in the way.

This being so, let us who are yet young, and in the enjoyment of the pleasure of health and youth pity and comfort the aged; tell them often that we love them, and would hardly know how to live without them. It is not sufficient to tell them this at long intervals, or on special occasions; speak kind and loving words often. Let each day and hour witness little acts of love and attention to grandpa and grandma.

God will surely reward those who do this in the ages to come, nor do we have to wait that long for our reward. When grandma's willing hands try to do something to help or please us, and we speak in return words of love and appreciation, surely her look of love and pleasure is ample reward. Little words of love and acts of kindness cost us nothing, and dear old grandma prizes them above pearls or rubies. Why should we withhold them? Why leave unspoken our words of love and appreciation, until she lies cold and unconscious in death, when she so hungers for them now? God knows that we love and honor him, and are truly thankful for those blessings which he from day to day confers upon us, yet he delights to have us tell him so often. If for us to repeat the old, old story of love and faith often, gives God pleasure, who is so strong, how much more will it please dear old grandpa and grandma who are so weak, tottering and feeble. Then dear ones, let us give it to them often and without measure.

One eloquent way to make grandma feel contented and happy is to allow her to help with some of the light home duties, if she offers to do so. And do not forget to praise her work, and express to her the truth that nobody else could quite fill her place in your home and heart. Repeat these and similar expresions often. Depend upon it, such words will never grow stale to her, for as she grows older and more feeble in mind and body she will treasure them more and more. Let us not, by look, word, or deed cause grandpa or grandma to feel that the time has come when they cannot help any more, but must stand to one side, and keep out of the way, but rather go to them often for counsel and advice, and whenever possible do them the honor to follow their advice.

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JUNE 14th, 1921. NUMBER 22

An Old Lyric

God made the earth surpassing fair,
And fit it for man's abode:
His eye surveyed it everywhere
And called it very good (Gen. 1:26-31).

But he who had dominion fell
From his exalted state (John 8:12-44):
He sinned, woe came, death, the grave (Rom. 5:12).
The ruin, oh how great (Isa. 14:16-23).

The thorn sprang up and noxious weeds,
Tempest and earthquakes too (Gen. 3:18, 19).
Made fearful work, all in deed
Was desolate to men (Gen. 6:5-8).

Yet praise to God, in mercy he Hath formed a blessed plan
By which the earth is still to be
A dwelling place for man (Matt. 5:5, 25 31-41).

For man redeemed all things made new
Like Eden fair and bright,
As when it rose to angel's will
And filled them with delight.

The desert like the rose shall bloom,
The wilderness rejoice (Psa. 2:1-5),
And earth made free from sin's dark gloom
Resound with cheerful voice (Rev. 5 9.10).

Anglo-Israelism

Discussion Between

Wm. Rennie and H. S. Thomas

ANGLO-ISRAELISM DEFENDED

I WOULD REPLY verbatim to what S. H. Thomas has written on this subject, but it is so utterly contradictory and incomprehensible from the standpoint of reason, common sense, and the Scriptures that I will, with your permission, simply submit the Anglo-Israel belief, advancing such Bible proof as time and space will permit, trusting it may assist Brother Thomas out of his apparent difficulty and misunderstanding of the subject.

In the first place, the believers in the Anglo-Israel theory do not have the idea that the ten tribes of Israel have been lost since the dispersion. They believe that the one time "lost sheep of the house of Israel" have been found in the Anglo-Saxon race, therefore they are no longer in the condition of "lost."

While it is true as he states, "The twelve tribes of Israel stand today in the presence of the whole world a living, unanswerable evidence of the Bible," it is as two separate entities: Judah, suffering the merited punishment called down at their behest upon their own heads, "His blood be upon us and our children": Israel, since their redemption in Christ Jesus have been under the new covenant enjoying an era of promised blessings in progressive fulfilment.

The first advent of the Christ was the time appointed for the gathering together the "dry bones" of the house of Israel out from among the nations, into one place called the "valley" (Ezek. 37:1), the place appointed for them (2 Sam. 10:7), in which they were to "renew their strength" (Isa. 40:31). In fulfilment of the prophecy of Zacharias. "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people. . . . To perform the mercy promised to our fathers and to remember his holy covenant, the oath which he sware to our father Abraham" (Luke 1:68, 72, 73). See Gen. 17:1 to 8; 22:15 to 18.

How this was accomplished let the Scriptures be their own expositor: "Behold, I will send for many fishers saith the Lord; and they shall fish for them. And after will I send for many hunters and they shall hunt them from every mountain and from every hill and out of the holes of the rocks" (Jer: 16:16). A work that could not possibly be effected until after their redemption. Nor could it in justice to them be delayed a single day after the redemption work was completed.

Ore[illegible] Bible C[illegible]
C[illegible]

The most prominent fisher whom the Lord sent in due time for this grave and eminently important work, was his own dear Son, who at once prepares for the faithful performance of the work assigned to him. Seeing Peter and Andrew who were fishers, just the kind of men wanted, he called them saying, "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men" (Matt. 4:19), explaining to them, "I am not sent but to the lost sheep of Israel" (Matt. 15:24), and that he had "come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10).

Having completed the calling his twelve disciples, he sends them forth into like service with himself, and to the same people, "commanding them saying, go not into the way of the Gentiles, nor into the city of the Samaritans enter ye not; but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matt. 10:5, 6). Comforting them with these words, "Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel till the Son of Man be come" (Matt. 10:23).

The Father sends the Son. the Son sends his apostles, the fishers of the new Covenant, whom the Lord sent. That the apostles faithfully carried out the commands of their Master, Peter addresses the first epistle to "the sojourners of the dispersion of Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithinia" (1 Pet. 1:1), the territory in and around which the apostles labored.

I do not know of any other cardinal doctrine of the Bible that has been more plainly set forth, more positively expressed, determining the fact, the indisputable fact, that the work and mission of the Christ and his apostles was pre-eminently the redemption and salvation of the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

Had the hunters (the seekers) of lost Israel of recent years been as familiar with the Scriptures and the history of Israel as were the fishers, they would have done at the first that which they did do at last, sought for lost Israel in that nation of people in whom the promises made to Israel pertaining to the present age, were being fulfilled. For "hath he spoken and shall he not make good" (Num. 23:19). The lost sheep of the house of Israel would have been found long years ago; for in this way was the Christ declared to be the Messiah.

When this plan was at last adopted, lo and behold, as if in answer to the call, "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee life" (Eph. 5:14). Lost Israel is found in the Anglo-Saxon race, "standing upon their feet an exceeding great army" (Ezek. 37:10). "A chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people" (2 Pet. 2:9); "A nation and a company of nations and a great people" (Gen. 48:19) "possessing the gate of their enemies" (Gen. 22:17). "The Lord's battle axe and weapons of war" (Jer. 51:20). "His witnesses" (Isa. 44:8). "His servants" (Isa. 43:10), etc., etc.

Anglo-Israel teaching overthrows the arguments of the atheist, and leaves the infidel confounded. Confronted by this great truth and its teachings, he is unable to answer the concrete reasoning which syllogistically stated is as follows:

1. God Almighty gave "to Abraham and his seed forever" certain special and peculiar blessings, exclusively.

2. Those very same blessings the Anglo-Saxon race throughout the world enjoy today, exclusively.

3. Therefore, the Anglo-Saxon race, since God cannot lie, must be of the seed of Abraham. And as it is conceded that they are not of the house of Judah, the Jew, they must be Israel.

A nation encircling the earth with her possessions, the recognized mistress of the sea, fulfilling to the letter every parable of the Christ concerning the kingdom of heaven. The greatest empire the world has ever seen. Five times greater than ancient Babylon; fifty-two times greater than the Germany that was; fifty-three times greater than the France that now is; occupying one fourth of the land space of the globe, and representing over one fourth of the populaiton of the world, in whom all the promises of the Old and New Testaments pertaining to the present age are being fulfilled.

Is this not the fifth kingdom that was to be "set up in the days of these kings" (Dan. 2:44)? If not, why not? The seas and oceans of the globe have been circumnavigated time and again; every continent and island of the seas have been traversed and made known. Where is the place and time for any other to arise and displace this Saxon (sons of Isaac) race?

The theory of a parenthetical age is twin sister to that of immortal soulism; it is not in the Bible.

Yours for the truth,

WILLIAM RENNIE.

—o—

ANGLO-ISRAELISM REFUTED

THE FOREGOING by Mr. William Rennie is offered to Restitution readers as an exposition of the new hobby known as Anglo-Israelism. I had occasion to touch on that subject in The Restitution some time ago, and had the misfortune to speak somewhat disparagingly of the doctrine, which prompted Mr. Rennie to stand up in defence of what appears to be a pet theory; and his letter calls for a reply. He very kindly expresses a desire to assist Brother Thomas to a better understanding of the subject. I have diligently studied his letter, to learn if possible just what he is driving at, but as yet without complete success. He seems to have an idea that the ten tribes of Israel were lost for a long time but have recently been discovered to still exist, as the subjects of the kingdom of Great Britain and her dependencies and provinces, and that all the glorious promises concerning the blessings of Abraham and his seed and the covenants of promise, are now being fulfilled in the prosperity and blessings, the strength, glory, and mighty power, of Great Britain and the Anglo Saxon race. The letter is a conglomeration of assumptions and assertions, with misapplied Scripture quotations, reaching its climax of unreasoning folly in the assertion, that Dan. 2:44 has reached its fulfilment in the rise of the British empire.

It seems to me incredible that a Bible student would venture to confound the glorious age to come referred to in Dan. 2:44, with a wicked, corrupt, and ungodly nation, such as is Great Britain today. A careful examination of Mr. Renner's Bible references, fail to reveal a single Scripture that even remotely hints that Israel and Great Britain are one and the same.

There is absolutely no evidence in existence, either within or without the Scriptures, to substantiate this error to the satisfaction of any except riders of the hobby; but on the contrary there exists an abundance of indisputable evidence, both within the word and without, that such is not a fact. Consider for example, such Scriptures as God's warning message to Israel, before entering into the promised land: "If thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law, that is written in this book: . . . it shall come to pass that as the Lord rejoiced over you, to do you good, and to multiply you, so the Lord will rejoice over you, to destroy you, and to bring you to nought. And ye shall be plucked off from the land, whither thou goest to possess it, and the Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other; . . . . And among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy feet find rest: but the Lord shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind: and thy life shall hang in doubt before thee: and thou shalt fear, day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life" (Dut. 29:58-66).

In simple, unmistakable language like this, God made known to the whole house of Israel, what would surely happen to them if disobedient, by a vivid pen picture of their deplorable condition in exile, sifted as corn among the nations, where they must remain until the promised Messiah shall come to deliver them, and gather them back to their own land. History and the word of God agree, that straighway after entering into the promised land, they sinned against God, and it was done unto them as he had said; they were scattered among the nations, and for two thousand years have found no ease, nor rest for the sole of their feet, as God has said. The Lord has given them a trembling heart, and sorrow of mind; their life still hangs in doubt and danger in every land; they still fear both day and night, and have none assurance of their life. These Scriptures make no mention of Great Britain in connection with Israel, but tell us plainly where Israel is today, and their condition; they are scattered among the nations, and dispersed among the heathen. And our daily papers inform us that they have "none assurance of their life." With such a wonderful example of fulfilled and fulfilling prophecy in our hands, exact even to the minutest detail, is it not astonishing that there are those who profess to be Bible students who contend that the people of Great Britain and her provinces, are the ten tribes of Israel?

But let us appeal once more to the word of God: "For thus saith the Lord, Sing with gladness for Jacob (two tribes) . . . and say, O Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel (the ten tribes). Behold I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth (not from England and her provinces), and with them the blind, and the lame, and the woman with child, and her that travaileth with child together. A great company shall return thither; they shall come with weeping, and with suplication will I lead them; . . . . for I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first born. Hear the word of the Lord. O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off; He that scattered Israel (not he that consolidated Israel into the mighty kingdom of Great Britain) will gather him (if the people of Great Britain be Israel, he is already gathered), and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock" (Jer. 30:7-10).

Dear ones of the one true faith, let us pause here while we ask Mr. Rennie some questions in the interests of truth:

1st. If the mighty empire of Great Britain be Israel, why should she pray, "O Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel?" What evil could possibly threaten so mighty a people?

2nd. If the mighty empire of Great Britain be Israel, why are they called, "a remnant?"

3rd. Why should "the blind, and the lame, the woman with child, and her that travaileth with child," undertake such a journey? why not remain in their comfortable and luxurious British homes, where they could be properly cared for?

4th. Why should they come "with weeping, and supplication," if it be a fact that they are the mighty and prosperous empire of Great Britain?

5th. Why should they be gathered at all, if God has so abundantly blessed them in the land of their exile?

6th. Mr. Rennie, do you candidly believe that the people of the mighty empire of Great Britain will ever be gathered to Palestine, in the same manner and under the same conditions, as these Scriptures declare, that Israel will be gathered? Of course you do not! Therefore you must abandon your hobby, or reject the word of the living God.

But in conclusion, lest there still remain some who doubt, we will now trace from history, the ancestry of both Israel and the Anglo-Saxon race, and hope in that way to prove conclusively that they now are and ever have been, two distinct and separate races, from the flood. The three sons of Noah, Shem, Ham and Japhet, with their descendants, settled in different localities, and from them descended the different races or nations of the earth. Japhet, the eldest son of Noah, had seven sons, namely, Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Mesheck, and Tiras. Gomer, the oldest, settled north-west of the Black Sea, and from him descended the Russians, Germans, Gauls, and Anglo-Saxons or Britons. The Anglo-Saxons were a race of expert and daring sailors, and were called "Sea kings"; therefore, the British are descended from Gomer, the elder son of Japhet, who was the eldest son of Noah.

Shem, the second son of Noah, had five sons, namely, Elam, Ashur, Arphaxad, Lud, and Aram. Arphaxad settled on the river Euphrates, and from him descended the Chaldeans, who were the ancestors of Abraham, and of Israel, he having been born at Ur of the Chaldeans; Israel therefore was descended from Arphaxad, the third son of Shem, who was the second son of Noah.

Surely with this evidence before us, no intelligent reader will continue to contend that Israel and Great Britain are one and the same people. Dear ones in the Lord, I desire to earnestly caution you concerning the menace of false doctrines, which are abroad in these last days, such as "Josephism," "Anglo-Israelism," "Future Probation for the dead," the existence of an immortal fiend or devil, whom God has created and turned loose in the world to prey upon his creatures. The riding of such hobbies is neither becoming nor profitable, for God's chosen people, and I greatly fear some of them at least, may endanger their hope of life in the glorious ages to come. O why should we do it? Such vain questions are foreign to the truth, and without profit. Why waste precous time and talents in studying out new inventions, which bring with them only contentions and controversy? Let us keep in the middle of the road; turn not in at bypaths, dimly lighted. There the enemy lies in wait.

S. H. THOMAS.

"For Jesus Sake"

By S. ROXANA WINCE

I AM going to ask you, dear members of the household of God, to raise that working fund, so much needed by The Restitution in these cruical hours, by setting a new motive before you.

It is that you give for Jesus' sake. I need make no other plea. You love him; you want the days to come when all that he died for shall come to pass; when he shall see of the travail of his soul, and be satisfied, all kingdoms having become his. All nations bowing down before him; hell's hosts all overthrown and Shilo's peace bearing universal sway.

It was for Jesus' sake that The Resttution was first started; for his dear sake it has been kept alive all these years, and for that same dear sake we want it to live and be a witness for him until he appears in his glory.

He will not appear until the allotted number of rulers is made up, and when will that be, if the blessed heralds of The Restitution age are allowed to die? Do you see, dear ones? If you truly believe that twelve tribed Israel is to be restored to their own land and that the Lord God is to give unto Jesus the throne of his father David, and that he will rule over the house of Jacob for ever, each one of the twelve apostles having rule over a tribe, the saints to be co-partners with them and with Jesus in bringing the whole world into perfect obedience to the law of right, you certainly will see how necessary it is that we with God's help raise this asked for working fund, and so place The Restitution on a solid foundation, and so hurry the time along when all that we rapturously sing of and hope and pray for shall come to pass.

It does not look to the unbeliever as if we—a despised little band of soul-sleepers—could have anything to do with hurrying that time along, but we have. We, each individual of us, has his or her part to bear in bringing about the mighty change that is to turn a warring, sin-cursed earth into a world of peace, a paradise restored.

O I know you will give, dear ones, when you think of these things. You cannot, you dare not withhold. The money is just as surely ours as if we already had it in our hands. Such is the confidence that I repose in you and such is the confidence that I repose in God.

Zionism a Fulfilment of Prophecy

AFTER CHRIST'S resurrection and just before his ascension, we read in Acts 1:6, "When they therefore were come together, they asked him, saying, Lord wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power."

Tere is no queston here as to the restoration of the kingdom to Israel, but "wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom?" And if the idea held by the disciples concerning the restoration of the kingdom were an error, would not Christ have told them so?

There is in the Bible much testimony going to show God's purpose concerning Israel, Paul's "brethren according to the flesh"; and if we recognize spiritual Israel, the fact does not outlaw fleshly Israel with whom God has a covenant to restore them to favor, and by them to bless all the nations of the earth (Rom. 11:26).

"And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them: for I am the Lord their God" (Lev. 26:44). "For thus haht the Lord said, The whole land shall be desolate; yet will I not make a full end" (Jer. 4:27). "Go ye up upon her walls, and destroy; but make not a full end" (Jer. 5:10). "For I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee: though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scatered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee" (Jer. 30:11).

"And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him (Moses) in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: . . . . and behold the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed" (Exod. 3:3)

"Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock" (Jer. 30:10).

"And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God" (Amos 9:15). This promise must be future in its fulfilment, when they will no more be pulled up out of their land.

"And one of them named Caiaphas, being high priest that same year, said unto them, ye know nothing at all, nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not. And this spake he not of himself: but being high priest that year he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation" (John 11:19-51).

Now how shall we account for the fact that some people deny that the Scriptures teach the future restoration of the Jews to Palestine? It is a mystery.. The evidence of the Scriptures is superabundant; and also the process of restoration has commenced in our day and generation.

The dry bones of Ezekiel 37 are becoming quite lively. Chapters 36 to 39 describe the movement among the dry bones which are declared to be the whole house of Israel (Ezek. 37:11). What power but God controls the minds of European statesmen to favor the return of the Jews to Palestine? God's hand is in the movement for the restoration of the land to the Jews in fulfilment of his covenant with Abraham.

GEO. FRANCIS.

Obituary

Death in Adam; Life in Christ

AFTER SOME delay and with a sense of deep sorrow and sympathy for those who are left to mourn, we wish to report the death of a "mother of Israel," Sarah Ann Stroud Muncrief, at the ripe old age of 82 years two months and twenty-one days. Dec. 28, 1920.

Sister Muncrief left an example worthy in many respects of imitation. She was a keeper at home, not given to change, who watched over the spiritual welfare of her house hold. She was the leader of the song service at her home for many years and one of the last pieces she sang was, "The Christian Watchman." Her last reading was from the pen of Aunt Bess in The Restitution, Aug. 3rd. 1920 entitled, "Concerning the Faith." She is survived by eight children, thirty grandchildren, and twenty-one great-grandchildren; fifty-nine in all which corresponds with the number of years of wedded life which was a little over fifty-nine years. She is survived also by her aged husband, Dr. James L. Muncrief. She sleeps in peace awaiting the call to join [illegible] at the return of Christ.

" When ye see these things come to pass, look up, for your redemption draweth night."

A gift of $600,000 has just been made to the Palestine Restoration Fund by Mrs. Fels, widow of Joseph Fels, of Philadelphia.

Bids are being asked for telephone booths for the various post offices of Palestine by the Postmaster General, reports the Palestine Weekly. It is expected that telephone booths will be placed at the disposal of the public at Acre, Bethlehem, Beersheba, and seventeen other towns in Palestine.

The work of restoration on the Damascus Gate, one of the principal entrances to the old city of Jerusalem, which has been financed by the Pro-Jerusalem Society, has now been completed. The stone pinnacles which were missing have been replaced. The restoration of the Roman masonry in the Citadel walls is nearing completion.

The Zionist organization has completed a contract with Lloyd's Steamship Co. to have a special boat fitted for the regular transportation of Palestine pioneers. The boat will accommodate 600 passengers, and will navigate between Trieste and Jaffa. It will have kosher food and most probably also a Jewish staff on board. The first boat to run from Trieste to Jaffa was scheduled to leave May 17,1921, and has a large number of pioneers booked for passage.

Communication

"They Spake Often One to Another"

MY DEAR BROTHER:

I HAVE duly received my copies of The Restitution, which have been read with much pleasure, so also the tracts you so kindly enclosed; and since the words of one of the tracts have impressed me considerably, am now sending a few suggestions which may or may not be helpful.

PARADISE LOST

This tract has been read and reread by me, and it has stirred me in a certain line of thought, and if you will please note carefully what this letter is, an answer may finally be found respecting this word concerning which you open the tract by writing: "This word paradise philogically is a word which is difficult to trace. It cannot be traced to its root." This statement comes just in full accord with the very thing I want to suggest to you.

DI

In the science of the construction of the hundreds of words of various shades and meanings, there certainly is some difficulty in tracing and obtaining their correct meaning; but we may not be sure of the definitions often given in the dictionary, for that is only another word and so much more obscurity instead of light and satisfaction.

You will notice I have set forth the root of this word paradise, and when I shall have shown you its simple and complete system of construction it may become easy to trace. The idea suggested by the words "bliss, peace, prosperity, things that are beautiful, especially, however, representing a garden or orchard, or that which is enclosed or protected," do not find their way into the above root meaning, for these are not identified with that.

PARA-DI

These two words set forth in full view the very thoughts we find in this world contained in the following statements: "We do not die; we cannot die, because we are immortal, we cannot see death, there is no death; we only imagine that we die." Thus we easily find the root of the word, thus dealing with the problem of every day life, and it grows as the world grows, so it is necessary for us to "prove all things, hold fast that which is good," and thus grow "strong in the Lord and the power of his might" and be able to answer every good and reasonable question in the light of his glorious word, which "will not return unto him void" Isa. 55:8-11).

PARADICE

The manner in which we pronounce this word is possibly one reason why we have not seen its root in the past, and if we would set a few sections of the word alongside of some other words it would reveal considerable unto us. Notice this:

DISE, DIES, DICE, DYES, DIS, DI.

Thus we see how much variation is made in only a small portion of the word under discussion, and how easy it is to lose track of the real root itself by getting it mixed in our mind. Again, PARADISE, PARADICE, PARADYES, PARADIES, PARADI. Thus we find the root expresses itself in the singular and not plural form, and this may be the chief place for sidetracking in tracing for its meaning.

PARADIS

The lengths and breadths of this word are to be seen in this world because we who are born again know how people "Di." We can truly say: "They di, he dies, hedied," and you will note that the word carries the plural of the DI and reads "paradis." The letter "e" becomes silent. Now my brother when this part of the great program and this world's great drama have been fully worked out, then this word will meet its true fulfilment, whereas now it is on the adverse side of the problem. Then we shall have "restitution." Then this world will be free from the dead and dying, the use of cemeteries, tombs, the cessation of the undertaker, the old hearse, the grim funeral procession, the tearful and sorrowful hearts, the broken and divided family circles; yes, the grave, the corpse, the casket. "Unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:18-19). The word dust has a large meaning, in the "dis" or root meaning of the future paradise as we frequently mention it, yet the lost paradise is that one which now says "we do not die; we are souls which cannot be touched with 'dis,' we were mode so strong that we do not die, and will not die, and cannot die." But we surely do all finally turn to dust again; but what a blessing it would be to be beyond the power of death in the world to come.

Hoping these few suggestions will reach you in due course, and that I shall enjoy the privilege of hearing from you when convenient, and that we may both be blessed the more in a better understanding of every word, and thus work in harmony and unison with them, and so help us Lord.

Yours sincerely for the truth,

T. B. HEWITT.

The Falling Stars

IN REVEALING his purpose to mankind God has, in many instances deemed it best to employ symbols to convey ideas. Thus in his word we find whirlwinds represent war; the sea, multitudes of people; Persia is represented by a ram, and Greece by a goat, etc. Heavens are used for high places, or positions of great honor, or authority among men. The sun, moon, and stars, represent worldly rulers, such as kings, princes, and noblemen. Therefore when we read in the word that just before the coming of the Lord, "The stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken" (Matt. 29:29; Rev. 6:18), we may know of a certainty that stars are used as symbols. Astronomy teaches that few, if any, of the stars are as small as the earth; and it would be absurd to contend that such stars will ever fall to the earth. Correctly interpreted, these symbolic stars that fall to the earth (or level of the common people) in the last days are earthly kings, princes, and rulers; and the powers of heaven that are to be shaken, are the present political heavens of the Gentile dispensation.

The question may here be asked, have the heavens be shaken recently, and have any stars fallen to the earth (or level of common people) in consequence of such shaking? Surely the heavens began to shake and thrones to totter in 1914, and the shaking has continued and gathered force to this writing. But have any stars fallen to the earth in consequence of the terrible shaking? The first to fall incandescent from the European heavens, was the Czar of Russia, who came down with a crash that was heard around the world, and was soon followed by Constantine of Greece. Ferdinand of Bulgaria was next to fall; then Charles of Austria-Hungary, and with a shock that moved the world, Wilhelm of Germany lay prostrate, an object of scorn and loathing to all mankind. Then followed a veritable shower of falling stars, of lesser magnitude. The Crown Prince Ludwig of Bavaria, William of Wurtemburg, and Duke Ernest of Brunswick. Then came Frederick August of Saxony, The Grand Duke Frederick of Baden, The Grand Duke Ernest Ludwig of Hesse, and Gothe, Duke Charles Edward of Saxe-Coburg, Prince Leopold of Lippe, Duke Edward of Anhalt, Prince Heinrich of Reuss, Duke Ernest of Saxe-Grand Duke Frederick Franz of Mecklenburg, Grand Duke Frederick August of Oldenburg, Oldenburg, Duke Bernard, of Saxe-Meiningen, Grand Duke Wilhelm Ernest, of Weimar, Prince Frederick of Waldeck ; and the end is not yet.

Truly the powers of the heavens are being shaken, and the stars are falling like meteors to the earth. Our Lord himself said it would be so, and adds this solemn warning : "And then (next or soon) shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in the heavens. And then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory" (Matt. 24:29, 30). Who is it that will mourn ? Our Lord says it is all the tribes (nations or peoples) of the earth. Those who are studying the science of war, and learning the noble, honorable, and manly art of killing their fellow men ; those who believe not the gospel, and refuse or neglect to obey the commands ; in short all those who for any reason whatever, have failed to enter into covenant relations with God in his own appointed way. Those who are striving for wealth or positions of honor or authority, and are looking forward to a long life of ease and prosperity for themselves and their children. Who say in their heart : "Away with the Lord ; we want him not. Our cup is full of honey, and the milk of human gladness flows down our beard. Haste not thy coming, O Lord ! we do not need thee, and are content to worship thee at a distance. Our plans for the future are complete without thee, and glow with promise and brightness, without thy aid. Thy coming would disturb and perhaps destroy them."

Such are the secret thoughts and heart desires of the tribes, or peoples of the earth, who shall mourn when they see the Lord. It is they who shall tremble at his presence, and cry for the rocks to fall on them, and mountains to cover them when he comes, for they will be conscious of their nakedness.

But there are a people who do not belong to the tribes of the earth who will not mourn when the Lord is seen coming in the clouds, but will shout and sing with joy unspeakable. Even the earth cannot hold them, for their graves shall be opened, and their dead shall come forth, as did Lazarus, and together with those who are alive, will arise to meet the Lord. They seek not caves and ashamed, for the cloak of his righteousness and—ashamed, forthe cloak of his righteousness covers them as a garment.

Who are these favored ones ? These are they of all nations and tribes who have believed and loved the gospel message, and through baptism, have entered into covenant relations with God. For such, the things that are about to happen on the earth have no terrors, but on the contrary, the earnest prayer of their heart is, "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly." Daily they search the Scriptures hoping to find some evidence of his soon coming, hitherto unseen ; eargerly they watch the movements of the nations, and joyfully note the fulfilment of prophecy, and carefully count the events yet to happen, before the Lord may come ; and as one by one they reach their fulfilment, these people sing and rejoice. Reader, do you belong to this little company of eargerly watching, and waiting ones ? If not, O hasten and join them. The door is yet ajar ; you may yet get in. But the falling stars, and many other unmistakable signs foretold by the prophets, proclaim the time at hand when the Master of the house will rise up and close the door.

The Last Message

THE DEADLINE

THE TIME is coming when everyone will have to take sides. Even those who thus far have never stood for anything in particular, will have to stand for something in particular. The days of flabby straddling, pretending that there are no differences or divisions, belong to the old era. The new era will be ushered in with a new consciousness of allegiance. In the last analysis there are only two families on earth and every subdivision that has been made relates to one family or the other. The man who is afraid to line up is not a free man. The times are coming when it will not be within his own choice. He will be forced by the very pressure of circumstances to take his stand by the principles to which he belongs (The Dearborn Independent).

THE ABOVE shows that men of the world see supreme tests facing humanity, as the old world is dying, and the new world order is being born. That straddlers and so called neutrals and policy actuated-men, [illegible], and lukewarm religious professors, will soon have to get off the fence, and line up for God, or for the devil : for truth or for error : for Christ or for anti-Christ : as sons of God, or as children of the devil : to be stamped with the seal of God, or to receive the mark of the beast : on the right hand or the left hand of the deadline.

The first angel's message of Rev. 14, announcing the hour of judgment come, with a call to worship the true God, relates to the judgment that began on the papal horn of the beast of Dan. 7:7-28, when the kings took away the temporal power of the papacy, which ended in 1870.

The second angel's message as to the political fall of Babylon (because she was the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird, with the call for God's people to "come out of her," lest they be left to receive of the seven last plagues, to be poured out in her) started under such men men as Barton Stone, Thos. Campbell, Walter Scott, John Thomas, George Storrs, etc. This call out of all sects, for union in Christ and on the Bible for a creed, with the New Testament for a discipline, and the Holy Spirit as the unifier, began from 1800 onward (Rev. 14:8 ; 18: 1-6; 15:1).

And now comes the last message of the third angel before Christ appears on a white cloud to reap the earth, and before the great winepress of Armageddon is trodden (Rev. 14:9-20). It will be a life and death test that will sift out all the lukewarm, "makes no difference" world-loving, man-pleasing professors of religion. God's people must be warned that if they obey and worship the beast league that they will be left to suffer under the seven plagues, the wrath of God poured out from the cup of his indignation, without mixture or mercy. The beast enacts laws with a death penalty for disloyalty, and a boycott, so that no man can buy or sell unless he has the brand, or mark, of this world wide league, in his right hand or forehead Rev. 13:15-18). Read Art. 16 of League Covenant).

Now that Harding is seated, our place in the world league will be settled, and as soon as we become involved in war, the boycott, and penalty for conscientious objectors will be announced from Geneva, then from Washington, and next from every state governor. The first test will be on our money god, by cutting us off from all profits in buying and selling ; and since the world's hope of peace is in a world league, all religious objectors, who encourage division over religious questions, will be regarded as worthy of death as traitors.

A beast is not the symbol of a religious system, but of a political power, or world government (Dan. 7:17-28; 8:20, 21). A horn on the beast is a king, or succession of men who rule the kingdom. The harlot riding the beast is the priesthood, jesuits, and common members of the papacy, by craft and diplomacy getting into control of a world government, or world league, until they control "all kindred, nations and tongues," and thus dominate a world federation, so that all that dwell on the earth shall worship the beast, or federation, except the few who are written in the book of life in heaven (Rev. 13:8). "The waters which thou sawest, where the harlot sitteth, are peoples and multitudes, and nations, and tongues" (Rev. 17:15).

Daniel explains that the ram represented the kingdom of the Medes and Persians, and the rough goat the kingdom of Grecia, and the great horn, the first king : and the fourth beast with ten horns that devoured and brake in pieces, and trod down the whole earth," was the fourth kingdom on earth (Dan. 7 and 8). The prophet saw the end of these beasts in the burning flames of war, after which the kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven was given to God's saints (Dan. 7:11, 23-28). Hence the ten-horned beast of Dan. 7 is the Roman empire, which by war and diplomacy, at various times since B. C. 63, when Pompey took Jerusalem, has conquered and leagued together the richest and most populous nations of earth.

But in the last revelation of Jesus to the church new features of this old world federation are shown, as it arises from the abyss of revolutions, and from the sea of warring nations, into world power, just before the last plagues are poured out upon the earth (Rev. 17:1).

In Rev. 13, this beast appears first under ten crowned horns, or under the control of ten European monarchies, after a death wound has been healed in one of its past heads. The harlot does not ride the beast while the ten horns are ruling, as in the present league, where the eleven crowned heads of Britain, Italy, Spain, Belgium, Roumania, Sweden, Norway, Servia, Siam, Greece, and of Papan rule. The latter will yet join the Bolshevik league, with China and all Asia, under German managament, as shown by Ezek. 38, and Rev. 16:12-19. Yet under this monarchial form, the world boycott and death penalty for disloyalty are to be enforced throughout the world (Rev. 13:16 18).

When the labor party throughout the world overthrows all monarchs and kingly rule, then will arise the scarlet beast of Bolshivism and of socialism, on which, by popular vote, and by a majority in the league council, the papacy for a short hour of judgment rides into world power. It is on a beast or league, "that was, and is not, yet is" that ascends up from the chaos of revolution, and soon goes into perdition, or anarchy, that the harlot church boasts : "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow" (Rev. 17:8). It is a revived Roman empire or world league, under ten horns or kings, that in the past had no kingdom, and who have no crowns, yet "reign as kings one hour with the league," that the mother of abominations rides. By secret diplomacy, by crafy political pull, and by solidarity under one head, her scheming money grabbers get into control in army, navy, press, congress, and wherever there is government money to be expended, until she boldly mounts the throne of world empire, through the world league control. Then when she tries by force to destroy free speech, free press, free assembly and religious liberty, the very powers and peoples she dominates shall hate her and desolate her and destroy her, in bloodshed and by violence (Rev. 17:16; 18:21).

Since profiteering and money are the basis of the whole present order, political and religious, in the fall of Babylon, so likewise comes the fall of the money power, so that merchants of the world wail because people help themselves to whatever they want, instead of buying Babylon's merchandise, and in one hour, gold and siver, and all other items of merchandizing graft, come to nought (Rev. 18:8-20). "For the great day of his wrath is come, and who will be able to stand" (Rev. 6:17). The eleventh hour truly has struck. "Children it is the last hour" (1 John 1:18, Diaglott).

"Constrained by love, endued with power: Oh children, it is the last, last hour!"

None will stand the soon coming test only those who are "rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith," and "strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man, and are armed with the whole armor of God" (Eph. 6).

"But if the watchman see the sword coming, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned if the sword come and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand" (Ezek. 33:1-7).

Marriage

"Marriage is Honorable in All"

AT THE residence of Brother and Sister Dimmick, Laird, Colo., May 22, 1921, Brother Almus Dimmick namesake of the writer, and Brother Clarence Dimmick, to Sister Hattie Hanshaw and Sister Edith Wayne. A double wedding was decided on, so after the morning service at the hall and just before dinner at 12:15 the words were spoken that made the two couple man and wife.

These two young men have grown up under the teaching of the writer and were baptized three years ago, and the standing they have in the community testifies to the lives they have lived. I baptized the two young ladies last August, and they completely came out of the world and are splendid characters, as they start life together in the faith. Having already built up a commendable character they should see a very happy life and finally enjoy the kingdom together. May God's blessing attend them through life and also unite them and make them part of the future bride.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Make Straight the Way

JOHN 1:23

Jesus called the rugged fishers,
By the sea of Gal'lee:
If thou wouldst be my disciples,
Leave thy nets and follow me.

So his gentle voice is calling,
Weary sinner, calling thee:
Leave the world and sin behind you,
Take thy cross and follow me.

WE PLOUGH the fields and scatter the good seed on the land, but it is fed and watered by God's almighty hand. The ploughing requires an eye intent on the furrow to be made, and is marred the instant one turns about. So will they come short of salvation who prosecute the work of God with a distracted attention, a divided heart. It is not an actual return to the world, but a reluctance to break with it.

"And he (Jesus) said unto another (disciple), Follow me, but he said: Lord suffer me first to go and bury my father. Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead; but go thou and preach the kingdom of God. And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go and bid them farewell which are at home at my house. And Jesus said unto him, No man having put his hand to the plough and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God" (Luke 9:59-62). Remember Lot's wife" (17:32). "But his wife looked back from behind him and she became a pillar of salt" (Gen. 26:19).

Follow closely in my footprints,
To the right or left ne'er stray,
Strait the gate, the way is narrow
But it leads to endless day.

In that glorious kingdom coming,
Eden home is waiting thee,
Give thy weary wanderings over,
Take thy cross and follow me.

May God help us to prove faithful to the end.

Don't criticize! It takes less brains to criticize than to do anything else.

The Dance Evil

I AM fully persuaded that the dance question is a matter that is agitating the mind of our young people everywhere, and also one that is seldom mentioned in our church literature. This is not exactly as it shuold be. It seems to me that it is the duty of our elders and writers to point out often, and with no uncertain sound, any and all dangers and temptations that beset the pathway of our young people. If the amusements and associations of the dance hall are harmless, and in harmony with the will of God as revealed in his word, our young people should be allowed to frequent such places and freely enjoy themselves. If there be no harm in them, our church leaders and elders, our parents and grandparents also, should feel free to go to the dance hall, and in a comfortable seat where they would not be in the way, enjoy the scene and music, without shame or doubt.

If, however, the practice be wrong and evil; if it be a fact as statictices clearly prove, that the dance hall and the craze for dancing contracted there, have been the means of ruin for hundreds of thousands of our pure young girls, not only for this present life, but also for the endless age to come; if it be a fact that a girl under the subtle influence of the dance craze, will freely and unreservedly give herself into the embrace of a comparative stranger, whom she would hardly recognize on the street, and with her head on his breast and ear close to his lips, listen to cunning words of flattery, or perhaps impure suggestions; if under the same evil influence she will speedily learn to unblushingly wear a gown in the dance hall, in which she would be ashamed to be seen on the street; if it be a fact, as reliable statistics prove, that over seventy-five per cent of the fallen women of our great country, were but a few short months or years ago, innocent and happy girls, the joy and pride of fond parents, but were ruined by the evil and impure influences of the dance hall—then it surely becomes the solemn duty of each and everyone, who bears the name of Christ, to honor that great name by refusing absolutely to have anything whatever to do with such a monstrous evil

It has been said that the Scriptures do not forbid dancing. True the word contains no express command concerning modern balls and dances, for the simple reason that the modern, suggestive, and impure forms of the dance craze, so common and popular in these last evil days, were entirely unknown when the Bible was written. The dance of those days was performed by the sexes separate, each dancer going through the exercise alone; therefore no mention is found of the modern, suggestive, and demoralizing exhibitions.

But while not mentioned in the word, all who have witnessed the antics of a modern dance hall must admit that its influnce upon the young and innocent is evil, rather than good, that the introduction of our boys and girls for the first time into a dance hall, with its sensual music, its low cut extravagant gowns, and shameless exposure of person, the familiar positions, and suggestive movements of the dancers, would be vastly different in effect, from an introduction of those same boys and girls into a church of God where the gospel of the kingdom is being preached, and hymns sung in praise of God. Why? Because one is evil; the other is good. The devil presides in one; the God of heaven reigns supreme in the other. A night in the first, and they emerge with garments spotted and soiled with the filth of the world, dirty, filthy, hateful stains, which only the blood of Christ is able to cleanse. A few hours in the church, and they come out pure and white, and a crown of added knowledge on their brow. Surely none will deny that the modern dance is evil. No good fruit was ever gathered from its branches. Let us turn then to the word for its condemnation.

Paul tells that "evil communications corrupt good manners." He cautions the Philippians to "beware of evildoers." Not mingle with them in their evil work. Our Lord said, "A corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit." Surely all must know that a dance hall is a corrupt tree. The Lord says, "I will punish the world for their evil." It matters not whether it be the dance evil, or the drink evil, but for all evil of whatever kind, the Lord of heaven threatens punishment. We have taken upon us, and into our keeping, the precious name of Jesus. Together with him we are called the sons and daughters of God. We are expected and commanded to live that we shall by our acts glorify God, and bring honor to his great name and the name of Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son. Shall we then dare, to drag that great name through the filthy mud and mire of a common dance hall? God in heaven forbid! To be recognized by God as his sons and daughters is an unspeakable privilege. And oh how careful we should be that we cause no dishonor, by any act of ours, to rest upon the name of the Lord.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JUNE 21st, 1921. ● NUMBER 23

Remember Me

Some may work and some may weep,
  While others rest and calmly sleep;
It is not given for all to know,
  Their duty as through life they go.

Then study first to do your best,
  And trust the Lord to guide the rest;
Thus, if you do the best you can,
  You'll please the Lord and also man.

The guide is given in God's word,
  It's rules we've often read and heard;
So if we follow in that way,
  All will be bright and clear as day.

Thus may God's will on earth be done,
  Until the race of life is run;
And this my prayer shall ever be,
  That God will then remember me.

The Image of the Beast

IT IS the two horned beast that causes the image to be made to the leopard beast "That had the wound by a sword, and did live (verse 14). Now let us drop the symbols, and take the literal, and say: It is the United States that makes the image to the Roman empire, in its Christian phase; because that is the time in which it received the deadly wound by a sword.

The image is a religious image, because its worship is demanded (verse 15). In the 4th century the Roman empire perfected the work of her creed makers and demanded obedience to the creed.

In the 20th century the United States creed makers adopt the same creed as did the Romans of the 4th century, and demand obedience to it. This constitutes "the image of the beast."

The faith of the orthodox creed makers of today is identical with the faith of the Catholic creed makers of the 4th century.

All that is needed to complete this image is the adoption of the orthodox faith into the law of the United States.

THE CREED MAKERS OF THE 4th CENTURY

I will here say that the doctrine of the trinity is the mark of the empire, and the capstone of the image. The reader can now weigh the evidence, as we note the history.

"The faction of the Donatists was not the only one that troubled the church during this century. In the year 317, a contest arose in Egypt upon a subject of much higher importance, and its consequences were of a yet more pernicious nature. The subject of this warm controversy, which kindled such deplorable divisions throughout the Christian world, was the doctrine of three persons in the Godhead; a doctrine which in the three preceding centuries, had hapily escaped the vain curiosity of human researches, and been left undefined and undetermined by any particualr set of ideas" (Mosheim, P. 101).

"Constantine in the year 325 convoked a great council at Nice in Bithynia, hoping that the deputies of the church universal would put a stop to this controversy. In this general assembly, after many debates, and violent efforts of the two parties, the doctrine of Arius was condemned; Christ was declared consubstantial, or of the same essence with the Father; the vanquished presbyters were banished among the Illyrians, and their followers were compelled to give their assent to the creed, or confession of faith, which was composed on this occasion" (Mosheim, p. 102). In 330 the emperor recalled Arius from banishment, being persuaded that his banishment was unjust.

"After the death of Constantine the great, one of his sons, Constantius, who, in the division of the empire, became ruler of the east, was warmly attached to the Arian party, whose principles were also zealously adopted by the empress, and, indeed by the whole court. On the other hand, Constantine and Constance, emperors of the west, maintained the decrees of the council of Nice in all the provinces over which their judisdiction extended. Hence arose endless animosities and seditions, treacherous plots, and open acts of injustice and violence between the contending parties. Council was assembled against council; and their parring and contradictory decrees spread perplexity and confusion through the Christian world" (Mosheim, p. 103). And this state of affairs continued at intervals, from first to last, for about one hundred years.

Arius claimed that the Son being begotten by the Father, there must be a time before his begettal, when he was not.

The death of Constantius, in the year 362, changed considerably the face of religious affairs, and diminshed greatly the strength and influence of the Arian party. Julian, who by his principles. was naturally prevented from taking a part in the controversy, bestowed his protection on neither side, but treated them both with an impartiality which was the result of a perfect indifference. Jovian his successor, declared himself in favor of the Nicene doctrine; and immediately the whole west, with a considerable part of the eastern provinces, changed sides and conformed to the decrees of the council of Nice, and abjured the Arian system.

The scene changed again in the year 364, when Valentinian, and his brother Valens, were raised to the empire. Valentinian adhered to the decrees of the Nicene council; and hence the Arian sect, a few churches excepted, sufferd extirpation in the west.

Valens on the other hand favored the Arians; and his zeal for their cause exposed their adversaries, the Niceans in the eastern provinces, to many severe trials.

These troubles ended with the reign of this emperor, who fell in a battle with the Goths in 378, and was succeeded by Gratian, a friend of the Niceians, and the restorer of their tranquility. His zeal for their interests was surpassed by his successor.

Theodocius the Great, who raised the secular arm against the Arians, with a terrible decree of violences; drove them from their churches; enacted laws whose severity exposed them to the greatest calamities; and rendered throughout his dominions, the decrees of the council triumphant over all opposition; so that the public profession of the Arian doctrine was confined to the Burgundmians, Goths and Vandals (Mosheim p. 104).

"The council of Constantinople assembeld by Theodocius in 381 at which 150 bishops were present, gave the finishing touch to what the council of Nice had left imperfect, and fixed in a full and determined manner the doctrine of three persons in one God, which is still received among the generality of Christians. This venerable assembly did not stop here; they branded with infamy all the errors, and set a mark of execration upon all the heresies that were hitherto known" (Mosheim, p. 105).

Gibbon's testimony agrees with that of Mosheim; both speak of a "mark" and "brand of infamy" which is the counterpart to the mark of the beast in Rev. 13:16, 17.

"Theodocius suggested the most effectual methods of persecution. In the space of fifteen years he promulgated fifteen severe edicts against the heretics; more especially against those who rejected the doctrine of the trinity; and to deprive them of every hope of escape, he sternly enacted that if any laws or rescripts should be alleged in their favor, the judges should consider them as the illegal productions of fraud or forgery. . . . . The anathemas of the church were forfeited by a sort of council excommunication; which separated them from their fellow citizens, by a peculiar brand of infamy" (Gibbon, chap/27, p. 92, vol. 3).

In the Orthodox Edicts of Theodocius we find the following creed:

"According to the discipline of the apostles, and the doctrine of the gospel, let us believe the sole deity of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost; under an equal majesty, and a pious trinity. We authorize the followers of this doctrine to assume the title of Catholic Christians; and we judge, that all others are extravagant madmen, we brand them with the infamous name of heretics; and declare that their conventicles shall no longer usurp the respectable appellation of churches. Beside the condemnation of divine justice, they must expect to suffer the severe penalties which our authority, guided by heavenly wisdom, thinks proper to inflict upon them." Here we have the religious creed of the Roman empire in its Christian phase: the doctrine of the trinity being the mark or brand that divides between the Catholic Christian, and the infomous heretic. This being the mark of the empire, and the beast being a symbol of the empire, it is the work of "the beast."

When any set of men adopt the idea that they are "guided by divine wisdom," they then become dangerous to those that oppose them.

To understand the signs of these last days up to the end, it is absolutely necessary to understand the symbolism of the two horned symbol of Rev. 13:11. And here, alas! most of the expositors fall down badly. Probably nine out of ten writers say, it is a symbol of the papacy.

One prophetic fact should be enough to prove the error of this position. This symbol has two lamb like horns, indicating its humane and peaceable disposition; while the papacy symbol is the extreme opposite in disposition; the first work of the papacy is to pluck up three of the ten horns by the roots (Dan. 7:8).

The papacy claims jurisdiction over the human race; therefore they oppose every power that does not bow to their authority.

They oppose Free Masonry.
They oppose our free schools.
They oppose liberty of conscience.
They oppose all modernity.
They are the opposite of lamb like.

Laborers in the Vineyard

THIS PARABLE was spoken to the apostles and has its interpretation in what precedes it in the 19th chapter. The statement made by Jesus seemed to have awakened in them a desire to know what they would receive. They had fulfilled one condition implied in the answer given to the young man, viz. "Sell that which thou hast, and give unto the poor, and follow thou me." This would assure him eternal life. The question asked by Peter was of a selfish nature. It belonged to the promptings of the flesh: "What shall we receive?" The spirit that prompted this enquiry seemed to be "a strike for higher wages." They are those who are represented as murmurers in the parable. The young man had failed, and Jesus said, "A rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom." They were not excluded on account of their riches, but must make a just use of them. The figure of the needle's eye is said to refer to a small gate at the side of the large gate to walled cities. There were times when the large gate was used to its full capacity when the needle's eye would admit beasts of burdo it when they had been relieved of their load and they entered on their knees. This implied to the apostles, simplicity, meekness, and confidence in the giver of all good and perfect gifts.

Jesus had just settled the subject of divorcement with the pharisees by saying: "Moses, because of the hardness of your herats, suffered you to put away your wives; but from the beginning it was not so." Then Jesus announces the true law of marriage. His disciples say unto him, "If the case of man be so with his wife, it is not good to marry." To this Jesus answered, "All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given." He adds; "There are some eunuchs which were so born from their mother's womb; there were some eunuchs which were made eunuchs of man, and there be eunuchs that have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of God's sake." This was spoken to the apostles in view of the necessity of followers giving up a wife for his name's sake or for the kingdom of heaven's sake.

This does not mean to abandon a wife but to make of yourself a eunuch for the kingdom of heaven's sake. Jesus was of this class. After answering his apostles questions he blessed little children and said of such is the kingdom of heaven. This was a revelation to the disciples. Jesus used a child as an object that it might have a greater influence. His answer to the young man was that an obedience to the law requirements was not sufficient to give to him eternal life, but an additional one. "Sell thy possession and distribute to the poor, and follow thou me." Some very remarkable statements to those whose eyes had been enlightened by the law. As we have hitherto stated, Jesus required a life of simplicity, meekness, and confidence in the Father and Jesus the Christ whom he had sent.

With these thoughts in our mind's we are now able to read and more fully understand the parable which was spoken to emphasize the teaching which is the base of the parable. It is evident from the Scripture we have given that the disciples were slow in discerning between the teaching of the law and that of the gospel. At another time it was spoken, "The letter killeth, but the spirit maketh alive." They were partly influenced by traditional teaching. This parable was spoken to remove those false impressions. If they were to become rulers in the age to come they must possess the spirit of the Master's teaching. To become the light of the world they must acquire meekness, simplicity, and confidence. The parable presents an householder who owned a vineyard and hired laborers. Some began with the early hour of the day and labored during the day; others labored but an hour. Each agreed to the wages offered, but when the evening came the lord of the vinyard directed his stewards to settle with them, those hired last were paid first, and when the first came they supposed that they would receive more. When they received only a penny they murmured against the good man of the house, saying these last have wrought but one hour; we have borne the burden and the heat of the day, and thou hast made them equal to us. Please note that the answer was spoken to those who murmured. Although they had received what was theirs according to the agreement, they were dissatisfied. The lord of the vinyard answered, "Didst thou not agree to labor for a penny a day? take what is thine and go thy way. It is not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? Is thine eye evil because I am good?" The last sentence is, we think, the key to the meaning of the parable.

It was to teach the disciples that their request to know what they would receive was the spirit of murmuring. They should have had simple confidence in the Master that he was just and that they would receive a just recompense of reward. To compel Jesus to specify what it would be was evil. They had been called as hired laborers, but the choosing would depend on their obedience and their childlike simplicity and meekness. Moses, because of the hardness of the heart suffered Israel to put away their wives by divorcement. In the beginning it was not so, as God made them male and female. The disciples were laboring under the law of the spirit of life, and not the law of types and shadows. The theological schools interpret this parable as teaching that all will receive the same reward whether they labor but one hour or give their whole life in the service of Jehovah. There is an old saying that, "Between the stirrup and the ground, salvation may be found." A saint cannot become an apostate in one moment, neither can a reprobate become a saint in the same time. Our future reward will be declared in the tribunal where Jesus will measure it according to labor bestowed.

The following Scriptures are in evidence, "The Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his work" (Matt. 16:27). "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be" (Rev. 22:12). Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap.. If he soweth to the flesh he will reap corruption: if to the spirit, life everlasting. The distribution of these rewards will be given when judgment will be rendered. The parable has no application to this judgment, but a warning against murmuring and fault finding. As followers of Jesus we are the called out ones; as subjects of the judgment we become the chosen of the just judge. "Many are called, but few are chosen" are words of the blessed Lord. As called out ones we must work out our own salvation on the basis that it is God who worketh in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure. This must be done with fear and trembling.

Baptism

IT MAY be asked what is the object of baptism? What is it for?" Peter answers, "For the remission of sins" (Acts 2:39). "But," says one, "I do not like the idea of going down into water and being dipped. It looks foolish now days, and people will laugh at us. Is there no other way of having our sins remitted? I have money and will gladly donate a large sum to the church, or make some other sacrifice. Will not that do?" Our Lord says, No; it will not do, "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3:5). My friend, it will not do to tamper with God's command, or seek to find some other way than the one he points out. "To obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams" (1 Sam. 15:22). Peter says plainly that "baptism doth now also save us" (1 Pet. 3:21). The word is plain on this question. In apostolic practice, repentance, and belief of the gospel message came first; then straightway, the same hour, even the middle of the night they went and were baptized. Not a moment was lost; delay was considered dangerous in the apostolic days. It is equally so today.

And now dear reader, the time has come to say farewell. I sincerely thank you for the patient manner in which you have followed me, in our study of these subjects in which so few are interested. May I not hope that seeds have been sown in your heart that will quickly germinate, and spring up into a full knowledge of the truth, as revealed in the word, and obedience thereto by baptism, thus becoming an heir to the glories of the ages to come. O if I could but know you, only you, of all the readers of this little book, have been led by it into a knowledge of the gospel of the kingdom, and obedience from the heart to its requirements, I would rejoice and feel amply repaid for all my labors. God grant we may meet in the glorious ages to come. Farewell.

Obituary

Death in Adam; Life in Christ

MRS. ELLEN McIRWIN who formerly lived in Portland, Ore., died at her home at Felida, Washington, May 10, 1921. She was a pioneer resident of Clark County Wash. She was born in Vancouver, Wash., Mar. 7, 1857, and lived in Clark County all but the six years of her life passed in Portland.

Portland friends and many neighbors attended the funeral services which were held at the cuhrch of God in Felida and interment was in Salmon Creek Cemetery near Vancouver.

Sister McIrwin is survived by her husband, Jared W. McIrwin, her father, Christian Ponby (whose age is 95.He is living on the donation land claim which he took up in Felida in 1852), and nine children: Mrs. Val J. Fike, of Portland; Mrs. A. J. Swagger, of Felida; Mrs. J. B. Gerow, of Chinook, Wash.; and Edward L. of Felida, Jared C. Alexander, O. Morton, B. Elmore, and Harry B. of Astoria, Ore. The principle themes of her conversation was the resurrection and the coming of Jesus. The first time I met Sister McIrwin 15 years this June, she told me of her hope, and the last request of the doctor was "put me to sleep till Jesus comes."

Help the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

WORTH REMEMBERING

THAT THE tongue is not steel, yet it cuts.

That cheerfulness is the weather of the heart.

That sleep is the best stimulant; a nervine safe for all to take.

That cold air is not necessarily pure nor warm air necessarily impure.

That a cheerful face is nearly as good for an invalid as healthful weather.

That there are men whose friends are more to be pitied than their enemies.

That advice is like castor oil- easy enough to give, but hard to take.

"They Spake Often One to Another"

DEAR BROTHER:

IN MY wife's obituary in The Restitution June 7, 1921, there is a mistake which I wish you to correct. The funeral was conducted by Brother John Andrews, not John Anderson, as printed in The Restitution.

Your brother,

J. H. ANDERSON.

BROTHER BROWN:

I RECEIVED a letter from Brother John Weeks of Cooledge, Texas, stating his health is very bad, and that he is unable to do any work; besides he is getting quite aged to work any way. He says he will have to suffer if not helped in some manner, and I feel it is the duty of the church to help as much as possible in such cases. I have known Brother Weeks for a number of years and always found him faithful, and when I was in his vicinity and unwell a few days he and his companion took the best care of me, and ministered unto my welfare to the best of their ability. Now he is left alone, old, poor, and broken down, and those who are blessed with means should come to his aid. I hope you will make this request known in The Restitution as early as possible, and greatly oblige yours in the one hope.

J. J. HECKMAN.

IT WAS decided at the Kennard Sunday School a couple of weeks ago to have a picnic. Accordingly word went forth for all who could come to the Castetter Park at Blair, Neb., on Sunday, June 5.

The day was sunny and cool. By eleven o'clock a large crowd had collected, some from Avery, Omaha, Bennington, and Brother John Mehrens and family from Little Sioux, Iowa, had crossed the river on the ferry to be with us.

Brother Hammond of Avery gave us a talk in the morning, a short sketch on the lineage of man. After which the well filled baskets were opened and emptied.

A collection was taken up to buy ice cream. Enough was received to pay for 10 gallons, an amount easily disposed of.

A short time was spent in visiting then Brother Mehrens gave us a fine talk which was greatly enjoyed. He took for his text: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment with every secret thing whether it be good or evil." (Eccl. 12:13, 14). Making his talk an exhortation to reverence God and keep the two greatest commandments.

Brother Hammond then gave us a short talk, which was also profitable for us to hear. Some having a long way to go soon departed having enjoyed the day to the fullest extent, and hoping for a few more such meetings during the summer. The Avery brethren invited all to come there some time in the near future.

Remarks

HOW TIME flies! It seems like I hardly get through writing one report, till it is time for another. While I was at Buckhart, Mo., engaged in the debate as reported in my last, Brother Dale of Springfield, learned I was there, and wrote me to stop off at Springfield on my return. He said he met me at the conference at Omaha during the world's fair, but I could not recall the meeting. I wrote him I would stop off, which I did. He had found a Sister Schafer there, and after a night's rest he took me to her home, and while I had only intended to spend a day there, they prevailed on me to give them a few meetings. It had been so long since they had enjoyed a meeting, I was constrained to yield to their appeal. So in the evening we began at Sister Schafer's home.

There was a Holiness Church next door, which they thought we could surely get, but it proved to be too holy, so we continued until Sunday evening there. On Sunday Brother Dale brought a lady who lived near him who seemed greatly interested in what she heard. She belonged to the Methodist Church, and she knew we could get it without fail, and she would ask about it. So we appointed meeting for the next evening at Brother Dale's, to give her a chance to report. She sent word during the day, that they said there was no fuel. I suppose they thought we were not able to buy any, and so it ended there. I wonder how they expect to get by with these flimsy excuses in the day of judgment!

Well, this lady and her entire family attended every meeting after that, and became very much interested. We continued the meetings at Brother Dale's for more than a week, with a very good attendance and splendid attention. Several of the Christadelphians attended every meeting and enjoyed it fine. It seems strange that a people who have the truth as straight as they have, should make a test of fellowship on a point as unscriptural as mortal emergence.

We closed the meeting Monday night and by request gave Tuesday evening to a hearing for that question. While it was their question and by their request, yet they wanted me to open up, and give my side of it first, whch I did in a forty-five minutes talk. I started by saying it was a universal law that like begts like: everything comes into the world like the seed that produced it. This we find taught in Gen. 1, and verified before our eyes in all the world of nature. Second, I called attention to the fact that Jesus said my words are spirit and life. We take the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God. Then James 1:18 says he begat us with the word of truth. In 1 Cor. 4:15 we are told by Paul that we are begotten by the gospel. 1 Pet. 1.23: "Being begotten again of incorruptible seed by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." Now if the word is spirit and we are begotten by the word, we are begotten by the spirit, and at birth we must be born of the spirit. There is no way of escaping the conclusion only to ignore an unchangeable law which is dangerous

Next, we showed that resurrection is called a birth: in Col. 1:18 Jesus is said to be the first born from the dead. Rev. 1:5 states the same fact. Then as we are begotten by the word which is spirit, and at resurrection, born of the spiirit. To prove this beyond all question. I referred them to 1 Cor. 15:44: "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." These points puzzled my opponents, and it was amusing to see them try to get around these facts. I further told them to tell us how we could die in Christ and come up in Adam. Here they were floored, and the main spokesman got up and said: "I agree with my opponent, that we die in Christ and come up in Adam." I said, you had better wait till I take such a position: that is your position, and I oppose it. Then he would repeat, "I agree, we go down in Christ and come up in Adam." This was a trick to get out of the inevitable; and when Brother Dale said they had resorted to subterfuge, he called it off. I never could understand how people could say we want the truth and then resort to every unfair means to support an error. I exploded their position that sowing means to cast out of the grave. Jesus said a sower went forth to sow, and some seeds fell into good ground. He did not cast out of the ground, but into the ground. They did not know how to answer, but said when Jesus came forth he told Mary not to touch him, for he had not yet ascended to the Father, saying it was against the law to touch a dead body. But as it happened Jesus was not dead, and did not even see corruption, I asked them to explain how it was that the angel at the grave told the women who were there, to go quickly and tell his disciples, and as they ran they met Jesus, and held him by the feet, and he did not forbid them; and it must have been but a few minutes after they left the sepulchre. They said, "Where is that Scripture?" I said, Matt. 28:9, and every one was trying to find it first; but no explanation was forthcoming. After Jesus said, "I have finished the work thou gavest me to do," and asked to be glorified, and his Father told him he had glorified him.Did he have to come forth mortal and be judged and raised to immortlity? But no answer. Then they said that Paul told Timothy he would judge the quick and dead at his appearing and kingdom (2 Tim. 4:1). I told them I would not quote that any more in support of that theory, for Paul said when Christ comes he will judge the living and dead, two classes, while they say he only raises the living: all raised from the dead, then judged. No more was said about that text.

I told them the fact we were trying to live as Christians every day, proved we were making a record, that made us worthy or not, as the record showed. Jesus said: "They that are counted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead." So he judges the livng and the dead. The worthy changed, the worthy raised; the unworthy left, or there is no sense in the language. The world, Jesus said, was condemned already; and if so, no use to reckon with them. So it is the body of Chrst on trial, and when they die the testimony is all in, and the judge has passed sentence. We will know the decision when they come forth and find some missing. When we put on Chrst we have severed our relationship with Adam; and how could we come forth still mortal and related to him, inasmuch as resurrection is called a birth. This doctrine has no support in Scripture nor reason. The next day I talked three hours with one of their most promising men, and I have hope of him yet seeing the truth. He is intelligent and well spoken of by every one. In fact I liked all those that attended the meeting regularly. They seemed to be very nice people; in fact too nice to call me brother, yet some yielded that point before the meeting closed. The time came to bid them good by, and I must say I did it with considerable reluctance. Brother Dale is a well posted man, above the average and believes in the practical as well as doctrinal truth. While his wife is not a member, I am certain she will be. I certainly enjoyed my stay with them. Sister Schafer is well versed in the Scripture and is much in earnest, and made one feel at home. Some thought of being baptized, but for reasons better known to themselves pat it off.

After promising to come again, I took the train at 8:55 P. M. for Arkansas City, Kan., where I arrived at 9:57 the following morning, going direct to Sister Reed's home. In the afternoon went over to Brother Chaplin's, where I spent a pleasant afternoon. Brother Chaplin is a cousin of Auntie Winee, which is a recommendation of itself, and I can say to her she has a very worthy relative in Brother Chaplin, well posted and earnest. Sister Chaplin is a daughter of Sister Reed. They attended conference at Omaha last fall and were loved by all, and it was a shock to us when we received the word of his death. It is a consolation to know the parting is not long. Sister Chaplin invited Sister Randolph over to supper, and a pleasant evening was spent. Being out all the night before, they excused me early for a much needed rest, as I had gone through a 16 days debate, and a two week's meeting without a let up. The next day it was decided I should go to Caldwell, and come back there, so I came and started here Friday night. The brethren had decided to move east of the regular place of meeting. A few came out, and one or two seemed quite interested; but it seems they had lately joined a new cult, a couple of men had preceded me advocating some new thing, but what it was I could not learn, so we moved the meeting back to the old locality. I have enjoyed some pleasant hours with Brother and Sister John R. Fisk Jr., Sister Fisk is a daughter of Brother and Sister Chaplin. Brother Fisk is far more than ordinarily posted not only in the Bible but in almost every line, and should be instructing the people in the ways of truth and righteousness. When we moved the meeting we had a better attendance and interest. We closed May 1st with quite a large congregation. I had a pleasant visit with Brother and Sister Wogoman, and spent one night and day with Brother E. M. Fiske. Sister Fannie LeCrone came up Friday from Helena, Okla., and stayed over Sunday. We were as glad of her coming as Paul was of the coming of Titus.

Sister LeCrone is not idle; she is doing a great deal of work, and with her pen is encouraging many a weary soul. I really believe this system of writing is doing more good than we think. Don't think of it as a fad, for the fad will wear out, and the novelty cease, and after a while letters become less frequent, and finally cease. No, it is not a fad; these letters are in most cases the response of one true soul to another. It was God's way of having the New Testament written. The apostles wrote to the brethren; they encouraged every earnest effort, eliminated false doctrine, and exhorted to pure living, and those letters still exist and are still doing duty. Your letters may fade, possibly find their way into the waste basket, but their kind words received into honest hearts will never fade, and finally make you living epistles, read and known of all men. So when you receive a letter from one of those appointed to write to you, it has been done for your good, so don't slight those who have your interest at heart, but answer it the best you can. Let us be doing, for the time is short. Will begin a new meeting tonight, and the Lord willing will tell you about it in my next report. Brethren, flee the shadows of the world, and come out in the bright sunlight of God's truth, and you will be safe when Christ comes for you.

ALMUS ADAMS.

THE MOST unfortunate letter in the alphabet is the letter E, because it is always out of cash, forever in debt, never out of danger, and in hell all the time.

That's all true. Still, it is never in war, always in peace, and always in something to eat. It is the beginning of existence, the commencement of ease and the end of trouble. Without it there would be no life, no heaven. It is the center of honesty and is always love. It is the beginning of encouragement and endeaver and the end of failure!

GOLDEN TEXT: James 1:17

DO THY BEST

WRITTEN FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S PAGE

I am not gifted, Lord, as others are,
To sing thy praise in story and in song;
I cannot go to lands both near and far,
And preach thy wondrous truths the whole day long.
"Life giveth not to every man the same,
Do what thou canst, my child, in my great name."

From work thou givest me, O Lord, I shrink,
My talents few, my failures thou canst see,
Thy work is so divine I dare not think
That I can do it well enough for thee.
What saith my Lord? "Fear not, but do thy best,
And every humble effort shall be blest."

Dear Master, then in love and faith I ask
That in that great and ever longed for day,
I shall have so performed each little task
That I may hear my Lord and Savior say,
"Well done, good servant, thou hast done the best
That in thee lay. Lo, I have done the rest."

STRENGTH, AND BEING STRONG

WE ONCE heard of a preacher, who, in illustrating the meaning of "habit" to a congregation of young boys and girls took a strong, able bodied boy to the platform, and crossing his arms at the wrists tied them together with one thickness of thread. This done the preacher asked the boy to separate his arms, breaking the thread. This of course was easily done. Then the wrists were tied together with some three thicknesses of thread, which the boy broke, but not with the same ease. This was kept up till at last there were so many wrappings of thread about the boys wrists he could not break them, not even with the preacher's assistance.

This demonstrated the power of habit. If we did a wrong act, or sinful thing but once or twice, we easily could give it up or overcome it. But if we persist in doing the sinful thing, the habit grows so strong that one could not break it, even though we, at times, asked others to assist us in doing so. Were we to use the above illustration we feel that as a proper text we would take Prov.

5:22 "He shall be broken with the cords of his sin." But the text we have chosen for our today's "talk" is from another part of Proverbs and will be found in chapter 24:5: "A wise man is strong; yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength." We are told not to add to nor take from God's word; but I feel we will be permitted to change the above reading just a little so as to make the meaning a little clearer to the boys and girls who I hope will read this article: "A wise boy or girl is strong; yea, a boy or girl of knowledge increaseth strength."

It is said that "knowledge is power." If you know how to do certain things you are stronger in that direction than are others who have not your knowledge. Of course there are a great many kinds of knowledge and wisdom. You get some in your day school; you get others through daily experiences, and still others of a spiritual character. knowledge that not only makes us wiser but better. The book of Proverbs has a great deal to say regarding knowledge and wisdom and understanding. It declares that "wisdom is the principal thing, therefore get wisdom: and with all getting get understanding."

By this you will see the knowledge and wisdom we refer to is not the kind we get from our day school books, nor yet from our daily experiences. It is something we get when we become wise in the knowledge of God and his word; when we come to know Jesus Christ. This is the kind of wisdom or knowledge that makes us strong to do that which is right and good. In the New Testament we are urged to "be strong in the Lord, and in the strength of his might."

It is fine to have strong bodies, still some people who have strong bodies only use them for evil purposes. Fine as it is to have strong bodies, it is much to be preferred to have strong characters. If we have both, so much the better. The apostle Paul said, "Bodily exercise profiteth little; but godliness with contentment is great gain." Strong characters enable us to do the things which Christ would have us do. That is what we want you to do. If boys and girls will keep increasing in the wisdom, knowledge and understanding of Jesus they steadily will become stronger in the only kind of strength that counts. "A wise boy or girl is strong; yea, a boy or girl of knowledge (of God) increaseth strength." Let us be strong.

A LETTER

In which was enclosed the poem "Do Thy Best," printed at the head of today's page.

DEAR BROTHER DONALDSON:

THE ENCLOSED is for the Young People's Page, if you think it worthy. Along with it goes that which is worth much more; my hopes and prayers for this dear page of ours.

Brother Donaldson, you don't know how much this part of the paper means to me, and I feel sure, to all the young people who read it. To me, as to dear Auntie Wince, it comes first when I read The Restitution. My only wish is that we young folks would openly manifest our interest in it by taking a greater part in making it successful. I know that no matter how inspiring and uplifting its articles may be, if they are not contributed by the young people themselves they lack a certain beneficial influence that original work almost always has. This is not by any means saying that selected articles are not beneficial, but I guess you know what I mean. It is so helpful to know that other young folks are trying to let their light shine, that we overlook the fact that it sometimes shines rather feebly at first, and think only of trying to help them make it stronger and brighter.

May God bless you in your noble work, and also all the young folks who are working in his service.

Your loving sister in Christ,

DOROTHY W. LYON.

---o---

The above is cheerfully published, not because of the complimentary things it says, nor yet necessarily to urge others to write for this page, although that always is encouraged and all acceptable articles gratefully acknowledged: but to encourage you to get out of self and be a co-worker for and with God of doing that which you can do best. And remember that no one at the start makes a full success of his work; it is only by constant endeavor that we win. "Practice makes perfect," is an old proverb; but is more true than old, old as it may be. Outside of poetry our page has very few "selected" articles; nearly everything is original. But nearly everything is from the one hand, and this often gets tiresome, not so much to the writer as to the reader.

---o---

It has been said that the greatness of the Methodist church is through the frequent change of its pastors, thus constantly giving the old congregation new ideas. Let our page, let The Restitution as a whole, be more successful through frequent change in the writers. In other words, let so many write that each individual will only have to write occasionally, thus constantly giving us new style, new thought, new ideas; but always the same old gospel truth.

CONCERNING BIBLE QUESTIONS

We do not know, nor have we any means of finding out the number of young people (any way from nine to ninety years of age) who read this page. So we can not give the proportion who have sent us letters concerning the suggested department of "Bible Questions and Answers." We can and will say this; that of the few letters received, all have been favorable. Still we do not feel that enough have expressed themselves to be representative. This is the last we will write on the subject. If you want the questions kindly state so.

General Conference Call

COMMITTEE MEETING REPORT

THE COMMITTEE which was appointed at Oregon, Nov. 12, to consider plans and methods for the establishment of a General Conference, and a Central Working Body for the Church of God, convened at the home of Brother and Sister G. E. Marsh, Marshalltown, Iowa, April 26 to 28, 1921.

Nothing had been done previous to this date by said committee in the way of forming any definite plans for the accomplishment of the work placed upon them. Rather, the committee at first reported the Oregon Meeting to the brotherhood at large, to the end that one and all might first have understanding of the efforts that were being put forth. The committee deemed it advisable to await the judgment of the brotherhood, before taking any definite steps in this matter.

Said report was mailed on Feb. 18, 1921, with an urgent request that each and every one affiliated with the Church of God would give frank and full reply to the secretary of the committee, expressing individual judgment as to the propriety and advisability of the undertaking.

The committee waited for two months for these replies. Not nearly all of the people responded, but of those who did respond more than nine out of every ten were in hearty approval of the plan to provide a General Headquarters and a Central Working Body for the people of the Church of God.

One unlooked for feature was that a few who were of adverse opinion, instead of favoring the committee with a statement of their judgment, saw fit to announce same otherwise. In this manner the committee was deprived to some extent of the benefit of the sober judgment of all.

At the committee meeting each member of the committee reported the sentiment of the people as found in their respective fields of labor. Their report was that there was almost unanimous sentiment in favor of the effort. Others who had been solicited for report as to general sentiment, reported likewise.

In view of the replies that had been received, both by correspondence and by voice, the committee felt that they were expected to take steps as per the request of the Oregon meeting.

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JUNE 28th, 1924. ● NUMBER 24

What Became of a Lie

First, somebody told it.
Then the room wouldn't hold it.
So the busy tongues rolled it
Till they got it outside.
When the crowds came across it,
And never once lost it,
But tossed it and tossed it,
Till it grew long and wide.

This lie brought forth others,
Dark sisters and brothers,
And fathers and mothers -
A terrible crew;
And while headlong they hurried,
The people they flurried,
And troubled and worried,
As lies always do.

And so, evil-bodied,
This monster lay goaded
Till at last it exploded
In smoke and and in shame:
When from mud and from mire
The pieces flew higher,
And hit the sad liar
And killed his good name! Selected by

Facts About Matt. 24

Article One

TO THE studious Bible student there is ever a change in the truths of this grand book. Our minds are opened to a clearer conception of God's purpose regarding the earth and man, or we acquire vain conceptions by meditating on its truths in a speculative mood. Through clear conceptions we are led into deeper truths that readily sound the key note that vibrates beautiful harmony. The poet who deals in rhyme and not in rhythm fails to awaken the emotions of its pure music. Blank verse is not set to rhyme, but its rhythm does awaken in the mind of those who love music the perfect key note. This is noticable in the poem where the poet introduces the smoothe and abrupt stress. We are reminded of this as we follow the stream whose water runs over a pebbly bottom and falls into the deeper waters. The shallow waters sing to us as they rush over the uneven bottom. This is rhythm and our emotions dance to nature's music.

The soul is dead that slumbers and cannot be awakened to these heavenly sounds. The hunter's emotions are set to vibrate by the tone given by the hounds. It is the same atmosphere catching the different key notes of harmony. Some one has said "that when the earth is again made beautiful that the winds will render harmonious what is now jarring sounds. It will yield heavenly music on the harp of a thousand strings, for those who have given up every earthly pleasure that they may be counted worthy of the resurrection from among the dead." So may it be. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly.

The above has been written to show that we have set in harmony the true spirit, that an apostate church has so impiously set in discordant notes. As we take up our analysis of this chapter, we must remind the reader that the subject matter was addressed to his apostles who were of the Jewish race. The disciples of Jesus were selected from the lost sheep of the house of Israel. In our study of this Scripture we must remember that this prophecy was delivered to that people. For the convenience of the reader we will divide the chapter into three sections:

First: from verses 1 to 28 inclusive Jesus is telling his disciples what will come to pass, closing the Jewish polity, which occurred at the fall of Jerusalem and the destruction of their temple.

Second: from verses 29 to 41 inclusive belongs to the sign period, ending with the restoration of Israel to Jehovah's favor and blessing.

Third: in verses 42 to 51 inclusive he admonishes them to a prayerful watchfulness. This requires that we apply these sayings to Israel's regathering and not to the coming of the Lord to raise the dead and quicken the living.

The intelligent student of the Bible, whether Jew or Gentile, will have an awakening from their slumber. Yet the manifestation of the sons of God has taken place before the sounding of the trumpet to call the sons of Jacob from their great tribulation (Jer. 30:7). There can be no speculating when we apply these Scriptures where they belong. The sign period begins with the 29th verse and ends with the 39th. The sign spoken of in the 30th verse will appear to Israel while Jerusalem is surrounded by the armies of all the nations. It will result in the victory over the Gog power (Zech. 13; 14). A third of Israel will be the remnant saved and refined as silver is refined and will be tried as gold is tried (Zech. 13:9). If we were to express our individual views as to what will constitute this sign of the Son of Man, we would say that it is the appearance of Jesus and his resurrected saints at this very critical period (Zech. 14:4; Psa. 24). The pride of the Israelitish hosts will then have been broken and they will say: "Lo this is our God; we have waited for him and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation" (Isa. 25:9). This will be the most tragical period in the history of Abraham's seed. It will constitute the great trobulation spoken of by Daniel the prophet (Dan. 12:1). This will be their second and greatest tribulation. Then he will send his messengers with a loud sounding trumpet and they will assemble his chosen from the four winds, from one extremtiy of heaven to the other (Diaglott).

Note, please, that there is no thought of a resurrection in these verses or this chapter, when a resurrection is spoken of it is national. It is concerning the whole house of Israel (Ezek. 37). The prophet is taught in a vision by seeing the valley of dry bones. After the sign period spoken of in this chapter, we are taught how Israel will be dealt with. It will be an individual gathering. Two men are in the field; one will be taken, and the other left. This choosing is made while the remnant is calling the dispersed to share with them the glories of the kingdom. The indolent will be left and the willing and prudent will be chosen. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; one will be taken, and the other left. One is so absorbed in the things of this life that she has forgotten the admonitions that the Lord had given. One was encumbered with many cares; the other sat at Jesus' feet and was admonished. These are men and women in the flesh and are called to a better life as citizens in the kingdom of God. See Isa. 66; Ezek 20.

D. C. ROBISON.

The Image of the Beast

IN "THE Gatherng Call" of Riverside, Cal., several good articles have been published on these symbols, with which we agree in the main, and which we recommend to truth seekers for perusal.

The third angel's message is a warning against both the beast and the image, and since the beast is not the harlot church, but a federation of nations controlled by the harlot, therefore the image of the beast is not an image of the harlot, but is another federation of nations, like the ten horned beast, that arose out of the sea of warring armies in Europe; but both will be controlled by the harlot church.

But the image league has only two horns like a lamb, and it arises like a plant that slowly grows up out of the earth (Rev. 13:11-18). Also this lamb like beast, or government (Dan. 7:23) exercises all the power of the first beast in his presence, or forms its federation just after the one in Europe is formed.

The lamb is the symbol of Christianity, and horns represent either political or religious leaders, or rulers in church and in state (Dan. 7:8, 24-28; 8:21).

Every feature of the two horned beast fits to the American continent and to the United States as the head of "The Pan American Uuion," of which Washington is now the capital, as also the capital of "The Pan American Federation of Labor."

Corresponding to the two horns, we have two continents; two professed Christian religions, Catholic and Protestant; two houses of congress; a two fold government, federal and sate government, yet all to co-operate in one "all American union," of twenty-one American republics, twenty of which are ruled by Roman Catholics, mainly of Spanish extraction, descendants of the Spanish inquisition.

This is the miracle working nation that has harnessed the lightning, and that will yet do more wonderful miracles by bringing fire down from heaven (Rev. 13:13).

The two horned beast urges all who dwell on earth to make an image to the revived ten horned beast, and it has power to give life to the beast league, and to get a boycott clause into the league covenant, so that no man might buy or sell without license from the beast or federation, and it also adds a death penalty for traitors, or for those who are disloyal to the beast (Rev. 13).

It is not necessary to take space to publish the evidence that this nation was the originator of the world league idea, and of the league covenant, and that we put the life into the league, yet remained out of it, because we must have a separate "Pan American Union," which will be an image of the other feredation.

But the lamb like beast is to yet speak as a dragon, when the beast nature, dominating the league, from an avaricious, malicious, and murderous spirit, always fostered by the papacy, gets control of both of these world federations.

Free speech, free press, free assembly, and schools, will then be stamped out, and banished from the earth, under death penalty, to be decided and executed by a supreme court of the world, dominated by Rome and her Jesuits.

But the two horned beast is also called "the false prophet" (Rev. 19:20), and both leagues are to come to their end in a "lake of fire and brimstone" which indicates liquid fire and gases drop from airships as the main agents of destruction in the future world revolutions. See the last vial of wrath poured out into the air (Rev. 16:17-21).

All know that the great cry of world peace, without the personal return of Christ, through a world league of heathen, Mohammedans, and counterfeit Christianity has been heralded most loudly from this country. It is mainly in encouraging this false hope that we will fulfil the false prophet role and character.

In 1889, Jas. G. Blaine, then Secretary of State secured an act of Congress, authorizing him to call a conference of the Central and North American republics, to meet at Washington. As a result there was organized "The International Bureau of American Republics," now known as the "Pan American Union." Conferences have been held since, in 1901, 1906, and in 1910, but the one planned for 1914 was prevented by the war, but in 1915 they met at Washington, where much was done toward unification of all the American republics. The twenty-one American republics in this league are as follows: The United States, Mexico, Argentine, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Columbia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Salvador, Uruguay and Venezula.

Some of these are now in the European league, but we look for them to withdraw after Harding presents his Pan American plan to the other league and we also expect to see later on Japan and China and all Asia in the Bolshevist league.

Thee Pan American Bulletin says, "Another significant fact showing the prominence given the United States in this movement, is, that in Washington is located the magnificant building recently erected at a cost of over a million dollars, which is the permanent home of the Union. As the permanent home of the Union, it practically makes Washington the international capital of the twenty-one nations. There is no other building in Washington that affords such accommodation for assemblies and important functions."

One of the striking significant features is the vestibule of the flags, where hang the twenty-one silken standards of the twenty-one republics.

"Probably the most significant feature of all is the council room of the governing board. Its furniture is an oval mahogany table, twenty feet long by nine feet wide, surrounded by twenty-one massive chairs. On the back of each chair, in bold relief, is the coat of arms of the nation represented by the chair. A cable, symbolic of unity, runs around the backs of the twenty-one chairs. This cable is composed of four strands: red white blue, and yellow."

Twenty of these nations are Roman Catholic, and the United States is now dominated by Catholic officials, hence the significence of the yellow strand binding all into one union, as the papal flag, and St. Peter's chair, are yellow, or gold colored; but to children of God, this color brings to mind the golden wine cup of the harlot, full of abominations and pagan superstitions with which she has made the world drunken; or the yellow streaks of cowardice and treachery of Rome's mobs and assassins.

As soon as the beast league, and the image league, are fully organized, as they will be soon, the third angel's message against the worship of the beast and of his image will be loudly proclaimed; but lukewarm, compromising, "Christendom" will not recognize its importance or meaning.

Censorship of the press and of speech will be proclaimed as necessary from the standpoint of military necessity, so that it will be disloyal to expose graft in the army, navy or government business, or to stir up religious antagonism that would tend to weaken this pope controlled federation. No man can serve two masters, Christ and antichrist, and soldiers of Christ cannot be loyal to laws that this harlot-controlled league will enact and execute. The deadline will be drawn, and no compromise will be possibe. Disobey the beast and be executed; obey the beast and come under the wrath of God without mercy. While some who refuse to obey the beast in their manner of worship, will willingly suffer death, others, while in prison awaiting execution, will be translated to meet the Lord in the air, at the time when the angel with power over fire and gas, is gathering the grapes or wicked into the great winepress in Esdraelon and Jehoshaphat valleys, to Armageddon (Rev. 14:19; 16:16).

None will stand this test and have victory over the beast and his image, only those who are filled with the spirit of Chrst, and whose names are written in heaven. "And all that dwell on earth shall worship him whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. 13:8).

For a world league of pagans, Mohammedans, Catholics and Protestants, to work in harmony for world peace, all doctrinal differences in religion must be dropped, and the world federation of churches, with its liberal spirit, recognizing the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man as embracing all races, will co-operate with the world league in enacting laws for the suppression of all religious discussions that tend to disunion or antagonism between members of this incarnation of the kingdom of God on earth; the world Savior from desolating war.

Morality and patriotism will be proclaimed as the only test of fellowship, and the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures will be regarded as being of no higher grade of inspiration than other bibles of the world. Any religion, therefore, that requires a separation from the world, and a coming out of Babylon, will then be forbidden, as dividing our forces, and as inciting rebellion to constituted authority.

Christian awake! Put on the whole armor of God, or you will fall in the evil day now bursting on the world. "Sanctfy a fast. Call a solemn assembly." Repent and humble yourself before God, and plead for God's favor without which all will fall in with the beast and harlot confederacy. Read Isa. 8, and Eph. 6.

A Walk to Calvary

Come, take a walk to Calvary, Calvary,
And see the man who died for thee.—Old Hymn

IN AGAIN appealing to you, dear brothers and sisters, to unite in raising that working fund for The Restitution, I might take you back to the days of Solomon and remind you of the many thousand sheep and oxen that were offered to the Lord at the dedication of the temple.

I might tell you how glad and merry of heart the people were for the goodness that the Lord had shown to David and to Solomon and to Israel, his people, when these offerings had been made, the feast kept, and they were starting for their homes; but I think it better to "keep your eyes fixed upon Jesus," and upon all that he has done and has given for you.

But go first to that upper room where he ate the last supper with his disciples, pointed out his betrayer, instituted the communion service, washed his disciples' feet, uttered his last discourse given in the 14th, 15th and 16th chapters of John's gospel, and memorable prayer found in the 17th. Then, after noting how repeatedly he admonishes his followers "to love one another as he has loved them," and warning them of the persecutions they will meet, the closing hymn is sung and he goes "as was his wont" to the mount of Olives.

Remember the meanwhile, that the broken bread of his body was given for you, that the cup of the New Testament in his blood was shed for you, that his disciples feet were washed to teach you that no service that you can do for each other's comfort and happiness is too menial to do; his servants being not greater than their Lord.

Remember too, that the discourse beginning "Let not your hearts be troubled," was spoken to you, that the prayer made in the upper room was made for you; for he prayed not for his disciples alone, but for them also which should believe on him through their word.

But come now to the garden of Gethsemane, lying at the foot of the mount of Olives.

Jesus has drawn apart from his disciples to appeal to God. Three times he does this with grief "exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." "Father," he says, "if thou be willing, remove this cup from me; nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done." the third time being in such agony as he prayed that his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling to the ground. O do you understand that agony was endured for your sake? That knowing all that was coming upon him, and hearing the Roman band and the rabble servants of the upper priests approachng, that he went out of the garden voluntarily and for your sake, owned that he was Jesus of Nazareth and gave himself into the hands of his foes, not one of them daring to lay hands upon him, but instead, going backward and falling on the ground in fear, lest the supernatural power, so often used by him in healing the sick and raising the dead, be now used against them.

But when no harm came to the traitor, Judas, reassured, they led him away to the high priests and from thence to Pilate, to Herod Antipas, and back again to Pilate, to be struck spit upon, mocked, and scourged. Scourged? Do you know what that means? It is too horrible to tell. Jesus "was bound in a stooping posture, his hands behind his back, to a post, or block near the tribunal, and was beaten with knots of rope or plaited leather thongs, armed at the ends witn acorn-shaped drops of lead, or small sharp pointed bones."

"The back of the person scourged was cut in all directions," and sometimes "the very veins and the inner muscles and sinews were laid bare."

The scourging of Jesus was the severest, for the Roman soldiers hated the Jewish nation; and that scourging was borne for you, for you!

He endures as seeing him that is invisible. As a lamb dumb before her shearees, so he opened not his mouth: opened it only when the question of his Sonship and Kingship was involved; then though he knew it was death to do so, he owned that he was the Son of God and the king of the Jews.

But we are tarrying over long here. The scourging which always preceded crucifixion, except in the case of Romans, is over, and we are now to take that walk to Calvary.

It is the time of the full moon in April. Illegal as the trial of Jesus has been he, innocent of any crime, must die the shameful death of the cross--a punishment inflicted only on the worst criminals, or highway robbers, rebels and slaves.

The strong, upright post has already been carried to the place of execution; the cross pieces were to be borne by the victim, put together like the letter "V." These were afterwards nailed to the uprights so they slanted forward and let the sufferer lean on stretched out hands and thus relieve the pressure of his body downward. A stout wooden pin in the middle of the upright part supplied a seat of fitting agony, for the weight of the body would otherwise have torn it from the cross" (Geike).

The pieces of the cross were laid on the shoulders of Jesus, faint and suffering as he is, and we start for Calvary, a place outside the walls, north west of Jerusalem. Soldiers guard the procession, but a great crowd accompanied it, both friends and foes alike pressing close to the soldiers. The road on each side was crowded with men and women who had come out to have a last look at Jesus, the women loudly lamenting. He pitied them, and stopped a moment on his way to bid them not mourn for him, but for themselves and for their children; for he knew all that was before them.

But Jesus can climb but slowly the hilly streets burdened with these heavy beams, and the impatient soldiers sieze Simon, a Jew from Cyrene of Libya, now part of Tunis, North Africa, and make him carry them.

And now we are at the place. The beams are nailed to the post, the rough pin seat is driven in. Jesus is stripped of his clothing, all except his loin cloth, and is laid on the cross, his arms stretched along the cross beams and a monstrous nail is driven through the palm of each hand. The legs are drawn up until the soles of the feet press against the post and then one of those huge nails is driven through each foot, or one foot is placed over the other and a single nail is made to hold them both.

How could he endure it? Any one who had an accidental pitchfork thrust in the palm of his hand, as I have, can have some faint conception of what he suffered; and yet not a sigh, not a mumur, not an anathema escaped him! He would not even deaden the terrible agony by drinking the vinegar and myrrh, and prayed his Father to forgive his enemies who knew not that they were "crucifying the Lord of glory." Oh such love! such wondrous love! Such deathless love!.

It would be hard for us to die for our dearest friends, and yet we could do that; but to die to save our cruelest foes from death how could we? Die, giving up everything (for Jesus became poor for our sakes, he, contrary to common opinion being a rich man); die, rejected by our kindred, deserted by our pupils, forsaken even by our Father in heaven. But Jesus did. An angel had been setn to strengthen him in the garden, but no angel comes now to strengthen him in his last moments of indescribable torture when with breaking heart he cries out, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

The mocking words, "Ah thou that destroyeth the temple and buildest it in three days save thyself and come down from the cross"; "Let Christ the king of Israel descend from the cross, that we may see and believe," had been passed by unnoticed; but the repentant thief has been comforted and pardoned; the beloved mother's future provided for, and then crying out, "It is finished"; "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit" he gives a piercing shriek--the heart broken and he is dead!

There you see him, the man who died for you: can you refuse to give to his cause now? I am glad we have taken the walk, for it is only when Calvary becomes a reality to us that we will give as we ought to give for Jesus' sake. Then and then only will there be meaning in our prayers, true faith in God, and true conception of the worth of a human soul.

Raise that working fund, dear ones, and raise it quickly. I have told you what Jesus gave for you, give gladly to him.

Thou gavest thy life for me,
What have I done for thee?

Defeatism

THERE HAS recently terminated in France the trial of a former statesman, which the whole world has watched with intense interest. And one of the principal charges against him was that he had preached defeat to an endangered people, his own countrymen, at a time when they needed all their strength. Citizenship often sinks so low that such a message does not want for hearers, and the ambitions of many are so poor that they can carry them out just as well in servitude and vassalage as in any other conditions. Victory would mean unheard of costs and sacrifices, and perhaps there was nothing in the world which was worth all that. Defeat is cheap, and if one's ideals are low he can still have what may be quite a happy time if he surrenders without a struggle. So for a time men were cajoled into not listening to those stern honest voices which spoke to them of danger and costs, but of victory too. There was a great deal of this and it became a sort of doctrine, fairly distinct, until at last men gave a name to it. They call it "defeatism."

It seemed for a while a quiet enough doctrine, until it was exposed, and then men realized what an insidious thing it was. It was a philosophy of national life with which the worst enemy could trade and do business.

And many live in such a doctrine in their personal lives, and even spread its poison into all the the scenes where they dwell. It may be held quietly and respectably and nobody may name it to them, but defeatism is their creed. Down in their hearts they look for the success of the wrong. They doubt if in the end anything can prevent the failure of the right. At the best they look for nothing more hopefully than that they may retard the descent nothing more. If they examined their own hearts there are many Christians who would find that their belief has dwindled to something which comes to about this.

It is good for us to get it into words if this is becoming the real inward attitude of our lives. Some have passed their lives with the feeling that all was against them. Life has appeared heavily overbalanced on the side of failure. Temptation has looked to them all out of proportion to the power available. Victory they did not dream was for such as they. They are like those early Christians who had not so much as heard that there was a Holy Spirit. A drawn battle, a compromise, or terms of surrender not too tragic or humiliating—that was the best to which they looked forward. The discovery that he was on this side, preaching defeatism to himself—and so inevitably to others—has startled many a life back into a warm and realizing sense of how far he has wandered away from the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

A depressed and lonely Christian worker who had gone on in a treadmill round of fairly successful work felt that none the less the gospel must mean something vastly more than this. Something threw him out of his usual routine and into a great gathering of other Christian men from all parts who had entered into new adventures with their Savior and his service, and had much to tell. All of a sudden, he said, everything was changed. "A sense of victory was in the air,' and from those days he went back to his old task transformed, and knowing that he was welcome to power such as he had never known before. And there ensued an utterly new period of joy and usefulness.

The New Testament goes wrong with us when we fail to catch this glow. There we find that a great new confidence has been breathed into sinful, defeated folks like ourselves. A great motive has appeared: a new and strange resource has been opened. Men's hearts are enlarged and set at liberty. Defeat is not the order of the day. Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. People who expect no more than merely to drag along are lifted into confidence. Everything is worth while; work has become an opportunity at every step, and even pain is cast into the account as a possible resource. There is no more meaninglessness. These are the signs by which men know the atmosphere of the gospel.

Leaving aside the texts for a moment, let us just ask the general question of ourselves whether our prevailing tone in life may not be a tone of defeatism. Faithful and sober in conduct we may be, but none the less we know that we do not carry the tone of the New Testament. We may say all the proper words, but they do not ring with the right accent of confidence, conviction, and deliverance. And say what you will, even the uninstructed hearer knows enough about Christianity to know that somehow that ought to be its tone. The world is mystified by thousands of Christians who never let out anything that looks like a shout of victory. There is no eagerness. There is nothing they care to commend to others, nothing they are eager to tell. Nothing springs, all is dragged and forced out of them, and they themselves wonder as much as any that this is what their Christian life has come to be. It may have a hundred worthy traits and marks, but the atmosphere of victory is gone.

But it is good to think of some lives that have never lost it and still communicate it to the rest of us. We hardly realize what it was we always took from them. They never put it in words to us, but they always gave us a sense of prevailing after all. They always believed that things could be done where others always took the position that it was no use. There are Christians who never believe anything can be done, and are over fertile in reasons why. But there are others who in spirit have never been false to the great possibilities. They ring true to the great truth of victory.

When one comes to think it over, this is the high praise he must give to Browning—that he is never found giving the lie to any great Christian truth. He handled matters in a way of his own and got at them as he could, but throughout he rang true to that abiding sense of victory.

> Never dreamed, though right were worsted,
>   Wrong would triumph.
> Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,
>   Sleep to wake.

It was treason to doubt or belittle the great, steadfast purpose which was always operative behind him and, though often down, he let it breathe itself again into his heart.

But let us not think of this victory under too dramatic forms. Often we fail to recognize it because it is such a modest thing. It was a modest thing even in Paul's time, but it was passing quietly from one heart to another, and it took a little set of people to whom the world never paid much attention, and lifted them almost in spite of themselves away from the dull defeatism of which those failing times were so full, and made of them a new people and the beginning of a mighty host. There was nothing very dramatic about them, only it came to be noticed that the world was not getting them, was not downing them as it was everybody else. Here were people whom the bad times did not overcome. Victory is sometimes a very modest thing. In one of the battles of the Boer War a certain regiment was ordered to lie down in the veldt. There they lay an interminable time, waiting for the command to rise and advance. But it did not come. Impatient to know what was happening and chafing at the long delay, at last the command came to rise. The battle was all over and won—in silence.

Once again our Christianity needs that old tone that used to distinguish it from all else. But there are ministries going on whose tone is a tone of tacit defeatism. The atmosphere is wrong. A sense of honor will not let us keep this atmosphere any longer once we know what it is. We shrink from ever letting that be the impression we make upon others, even while we are working in Christ's name. We will admit our failures, but we will not be hypnotized by them nor treat them as if they were all, and life meant this. Remembering that Christ always aligns himself with victory we can modestly sing:

> Of wounds and sore defeat
>   I made my battle-stay:
> Winged sandals for my feet
>   I wove of my delay:
> Of weariness and fear
>   I made my shouting spear:
> Of loss and doubt and dread
>   And swift oncoming doom
> I made a helmet for my head
>   And a floating plume. —Selected by The Editor.

One look into the pleading eyes of that dying sufferer, will be enough to make us willing to suffer, and to sacrifice all of present ease and comfort, that his cause may triumph at last.

Cleveland Miscellanies

June 19th the following followed the Lord Jesus Christ in baptism: Daniel C. Gilchrist, formerly Presbyterian; Isabelle Gilchrist, his wife, formerly Presbyterian; and Jean Gilchrist, their daughter formerly neutral.

At the home of Sister Tubbs, June 28th, her daughter, Sister Mildred Tubbs, was given in marriage to Brother Nickoloff. We heartily congratulate Brother and Sister Nickoloff as they begin their married career, and pray that God's favor may attend them through life's journey.

Sister S. Roxana Wince writes: "Please say through The Restitution that Sister M. S. Nichols, who spent the winter with me, leaving the 18th of April for her home in Minneapolis, Minn., was stricken with apoplexy Saturday, May 28th, and her death is expected at any moment. I am very sad."

Sister Marvel Titman reports the following meeting at the home of Brother and Sister Smith, Monroeville, Ohio:

"Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together." In observance of this admonition of the apostle Paul, on Sunday June 19th, an automobile party, consisting of Brother and Sister Bert Meermans, Brother and Sister Quay Brandt, Frances Russell, Harry Titman, Myrna Lang, Francis Sykora and Lawrence Gibbs, met at the home of Brother and Sister Smith, of Monroeville, Ohio, together with their daughter Mary, and sons Alfred and Newman and his wife. After a lesson conducted by Viola Meermans on the parable of the rich man and Lazarus the Lord's supper was observed. In this connection it is worthy of note that every Sunday morning Brother and Sister Smith and Family meet in a like manner in remembrance of Christ on the first day of the week. Our hearts go out to Brother and Sister Smith, not only for their hospitality, but also for the added lesson that God observes, no matter how few in number, the efforts we make to remember him on the Lord's Day.

We need to go often to the cross and "get behind Christ and stay there," if we want to be faithful in our duty to our fellow-men, in giving to them the gospel of saving grace.

Somewhere there is a sin back of every sorrow.

General Conference Call

(Concluded)

All members of the committee were present, with the exception of Brother J. W. Williams, who was unavoidably detained at home. (For this meeting the committe used no funds that had been contributed by others). Inasmuch as opposition to, and misunderstanding of some of Brother Williams' published articles had developed, Brother Williams, in the interest of unity, and in harmony with his oft repeated expression, tendered his resignation, as chairman of the committee. With a similar view to unity, the committee accepted the said resignation, and chose Brother Jas. A. Patrick, of Eden Valley, Minn., as chairman of the committee.

After carefully considering many of the questions that naturally arise in the work of this kind, the committee decided to suggest to the brotherhood that we organize our efforts, with a view to carrying out aims and purposes as set forth in the following five articles of policy.

POLICY

(1) That the evangelistic work of the church be extended so it may better serve all needs of our people, and reach new fields of missionary labor.

(2) That publishing facilities may be provided under special editorial supervision, for the issuance of booklets and systemized lesson leaflets, either for sale or free distribution—this not with the view to supplant any other established work.

(3) That facilities be provided to aid in the education of those desiring to prepare themselves for the ministry, Bible teaching, or other religious work.

(4) Our whole policy shall be conducted with a view to maintain the unity of Christian spirit. With such unity we purpose to unite in a common effort to affirm by print and voice the following biblical truths, and such as are in harmony therewith, all of which are commonly accepted by the people of the Church of God.

a The oneness and omnipotence of God.
b The inspiration of Scriptures.
c The death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus as a means for the remission of sins and salvation.
d Immortality only through Christ.
e The resurrection of the dead.
f The second coming of Christ, followed by the establishment of the kingdom of God.

g Belief, repentance and baptism for the remission of sins.
h A godly life.

The General Assembly shall not encourage anyone in advocating a doctrine not commonly accepted and which tends to cause division.

5 That a board of benevolence be organized to minister to individual needs as they may arise.

With a view to carrying out the foregoing aims, your committee recommends that a General Assembly of the church of God be convened and that said Assembly shall choose five of its number to constitute its Executive Board, the same to be aided by an Advisory Board made up by the addition of the presidents of such several State conferences as choose to co-operate in a general conference work. Also that said five persons constituting the Executive Board, shall become legal trustees and body corporate for the purpose of carrying forward the decisions of said assembly.

A Constitution was drafted, to be submitted to the brotherhood at large for their consideration. Said constitution will be circulated, D. V. early in June.

Having received invitation from the Iowa State Conference to call a General Conference to convene upon their grounds at Waterloo, Ia., said invitation was accepted.

The committee, as authorized by Oregon meeting, hereby calls a General Conference to convene Aug. 28 Sept 3, 1921, at Waterloo, Ia.

A program for business, Bible studies, and addresses on scriptural themes of present day interest, will be issued in the near future.

We ask that one and all, who can make it convenient, will endeavor to attend said conference, and with kindness and gentleness aid in arriving at proper decisions on all questions that are bound to come up before said meeting.

Report of committee meeting is being mailed direct to each family whose addresses we have in an effort to give the largest possible measure of information and publicity to the efforts that are being put forth.

Kindly remember that there is neither desire nor effort to force a General Organization upon the people. All that has been done up to date is wholly suggestive, and nothing can be definite until such time as the brethren, in conference assembled, may take definite action.

We appreciate the excellent financial response which makes it possible to continue the effort. The same also emphasizes the wish of many for the accomplishment of that which has been suggested.

We pray that the Father will guide one and all into his honor and glory.

Submitted in Christian love in behalf of the committee.

F. L. AUSTIN.

The Two Adams

The first man, Adam, was made a living soul: the last Adam was made a quickening spirit. The first man is of the earth, the second man is the Lord from heaven (1 Cor. 15:45-49).

THE BIBLE speaks of two Adams. The first is he who lived in the garden of Eden, whose creation Moses describes in the book of Genesis. The second is the man Christ Jesus, of whose birth at Bethlehem we read in the gospels of Matthew and Luke. Between the creation of Adam and the birth of Jesus Christ was a period of four thousand years.

Paul, writing to the Romans (5:14), declares that "Adam is a figure of him that was to come." The word "figure" means a representation, a likeness, an image. Adam is a figure of Christ, that is, Christ must be like Adam, and Adam must be like Christ. They are the likeness of each other, as twin brothers, who, closely resembling each other in personal appearance, may be said to be of the same figure. And the apostle also speaks of "the first man Adam" and "the last Adam"; "the first man" and "the second man." There will never be a third Adam. Two, and only two; the first and the last. This expression, "last Adam," was not invented by Paul. Long before his time the Jews were accustomed to speak of their coming Messiah as the second man, or the last Adam.

Now in what sense were Christ and Adam alike? How was Adam a figure or likeness of Jesus Christ? First of all, inasmuch as both were real men, mortal men of flesh and blood; both were of a tripartite nature, i. e., body, soul and spirit (1 Thess. 4:23), both sorrowed, suffered, died, were buried. The second Adam was a man exactly after the pattern of him who four thousand years before was the figure. Of course, in many respects there is a vast unlikeness between the two Adams; for instance, the first was sinful, the second sinless; the first is still in his grave, the second has risen from his tomb; yet Adam and Christ are alike in this, that they represent—they are representatives of others. Indeed, the fate of the whole human race is bound up with the fate and destiny of these two men. Neither of these two Adams lived or died for himself. Adam of Eden, and Adam of Bethlehem are alike to this extent, that what they did on earth affected, and will effect to the end of time, indeed throughout eternity, all those of whom they respectively are the federal head and chief.

But as the substance is of more importance than the shadow, and he who is to come greater than he who is but the forerunner, so Christ is greater than Adam. Adam was but the type, Christ the anti-type; and the anti-type is always greater than the type. In a moment this will be seen when we call to mind the consequences these two men brought upon their followers. Adam entailed sin and death. Christ confers righteousness and life. Now sin is weakness, righteousness is strength; sin is temporary, righteousness is eternal. Yes, Christ the fountain head of righteousness and life, is far superior to Adam, the fountain head of sin and death.

Note. Christ is the last Adam. Then, of course, there cannot be any Adam to succeed him. And it is significant that he should be called Adam. Why this name? To show that, like Adam the first, he is a representative man, a head of man, a fountain head of humanity, a new father to the race. Note again, Christ is the second man. In the thought of God, in the plan of his government, in the working out of his purposes, there are just two men, no more. All others are but continuations, imitations, representatives of these. All people that on earth do dwell are divided into two great companies and at the head of these companies stand the great leaders—on the one side Adam the first, on the other Adam the second. And God regards these two men as if there were no other. This is quite understandable. Just as when England and France were at war and thousands of men fighting on either side it was simply announced, "Napoleon advanced, Wellington retreated," or "Napoleon is defeated, Wellington is conqueror." The names of thesee illustrious generals stood as representative of the large armies which followed them, and whose fate and well or ill bing was entirely in the hands of these two great leaders. In like manner, in God's sight, there are simply Adam I and Adam II and behind these two famous men stand—ranged in two companies—all the rest of mankind.

May we now take a step forward, and consider a further utterance of Paul's concerning the second Adam. He declares that "the last Adam became a life-giving spirit." Beyond all doubt our Lord as his birth was (resembling Adam in Eden) a living soul (Gen. 2:7). He was a true son of Adam (Luke 3:23-38). After a short earthly career of about thirty-three years he died, and his natural (animal) life ended. Instead of being a living soul he became a dead soul (Psa. 33:19), and in a tomb was buried out of sight. But very speedily was he restored to life, for (to quote the words used by Peter), "His soul was not left in the grave." On the third morning after the day of crucifixion he rose from among the dead. He was born again. And the consequence of this second birth was that, though the identity was unchanged, yet his physical organization had undergone some change. When the Son of Man rose from the dead he was a new man. It was at the moment of his resurrection that he became (unlike the first Adam) a life giving spirit. Our Lord by virtue of his resurrection became "the second Adam." He was no longer a "living soul." The natural or animal body had been transformed. He rose a spiritual body. The first Adam came forth from the dust a soul body; the second Adam came forth from the grave a spirit body. The difference is that that one body possesed a soul or blood life, the other a spirit life.

But not only was the risen Lord Jesus a spirit-one body possessed a soul or blood life, the other spirit" (see also John 5:21 and 26; 6:27 and 57). As Adam I, had power to beget natural children, who should be living souls, so Christ (Adam II), when at his resurrection he as a man took upon himself the power of an endless life, became the prince of life, and received authority to confer upon whom he will a life similar to his own. During his mortal life he was a childless man, he had no generation. But Isaiah declared that, though cut off out of the land of the living, yet "he shall prolong his days and shall see his seed." This is an undoubted reference to the personal resurrection of the rejected one, and the relationship to him of all those who shall be accounted as his sons and daughters, even those who by his power shall be raised to a newness of life—as spiritual bodies, immortal to die no more (Luke 20:36). He—the life giving spirit—will arouse from their death sleep and confer upon his followers as his royal and princely gift the honor of being changed into his image. No longer shall we be in the likeness of the dead Adam of Eden, we shall find ourselves akin and allied to the risen Adam of Bethlehem. We who are of the earth earthy, shall be transformed and transfigured. Possessing spirit bodies instead of soul bodies, being incorruptible instead of frail children of the dust, there will have been conferred upon us a nobler manhood than this world has ever seen—we shall be glorious, powerful, spirit penetrated, heavenly; we shall be "like him," for we shall see him as he is; we shall bear the image of the heavenly One.

Thus we see how Adam and Christ are alike, inasmuch as they are representative men. We also see how Adam by one act of disobedience brought a reign of sin and death on his race; but Christ, by his one life time of obedience, will bring in an everlasting reign of righteousness and life (Rom. 5: 12-21). And when Christ calls us from our graves, and restores to us our lost life, it will not be in the form of the old Adam soul life, but as new creatures in Christ Jesus shall we be sharing his resurrection life, and so become partakers of the divine nature. "As we have borne the image of the earthly (Adam), we shall also bear the image of the heavenly (Adam)."

By nature we all belong to the first Adam. We live his sinful life, and die his ignominious death. By grace we now belong to the second Adam, and hereafter live his perfect life and share his glory. Our present mortal life we owe to the first Adam. The eternal life we shall owe to the second Adam (John 10:28). Our connection with the first Adam has entailed upon us a weight of present sin and future woe. But if by faith we become connected with the second Adam, we may obtain forgiveness of sin and escape the final penalty. But our relationship to and identification with the second Adam (the Lord from heaven) must be as close and complete as it is to the first Adam (the dust formed man) if we would hereafter be raised to a higher plane of living, to the "full stature of perfect men," to becoming "partakers of the divine nature. Obituary

TRELLA ANNAS Wheeler, daughter of Alexander and Sister Florence Wheeler, was born Sept. 11th, 1913, at Bartley, Neb., and died at Hudson, Colo., May 30th, 1921, at the age of 7 years, 8 months and 19 days. She leaves to mourn her loss a father and mother, one sister Elvie, and one brother Ivan, two grandmothers and one grandpa, many other near relatives, and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held at the home in Hudson, Colo., Tuesday morning, May 31. She was then taken to Bartley, Neb., where services were conducted at the Christian Church Wednesday afternoon, June 1, by Elder McDonald. She was laid to rest in the Bartley Cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

She was an exceptional child and was loved by all for her sweet sunny smiles and beautiful songs which she played and sang. The parting words of our darling Trella to the world and her loved ones, spoken in her last moments were: "I thank the world for the time I have been here; I thank the people in the country and in the town; I thank you, mamma; I thank you papa for taking care of me. Now I've kissed all I love that is here."

Adam the first man, represents all those who have inherited from him a mortal physical life; Jesus, on the other hand, represents all those who from him receive the divine and imperishable life. As Adam is the father of the whole human family from the present terrestial point of view, so Jesus is the father of that select portion of the human race which, being hereafter animated by a superior life, will in the eternal ages possess and inhabit the new heavens and earth. All those who are in Christ will have eternal life simply and only because they are joined to the Christ who is the author or cause of this indestructible life.

"The last Adam beame a life giving spirit." It is to be attributed to the goodness and wisdom and glory and power of the risen Spirit man, the second Adam (i.e., our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ), that we shall herefater share in the gladness and health and liberty and life which will be the portion of all who are connected with him by a living, loving, lasting faith. A glorious truth is it for all redeemed ones that (1 Cor. 15:49) "As we have borne the likeness of the dust formed man, so we are to bear the likeness of the heavnly Man."—C. CRISP BROWN.

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"—Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JULY 5th, 1921 NUMBER 25

"A Creed? Absolutely No"!

THE GENERAL Assembly of the Church of God" has made its appearance in the household of faith. As there seems to be a sincere desire on the part of its promoters for frank expressions, whether of commendation or criticism, we hope this response will not be the cause of offence to any one. Our motive in writing this article is to serve the truth.

The Athenians "spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell or hear some new thing" (Acts 17:21). Their descendants still exist in goodly numbers. The novelty of new things dazzles the eyes of many. Such people are always fathering schemes and mothering experiments. They tire of personal plodding and individual faithfulness and aspire after "big business." They remind us of the man who had a mania for machinery: he persisted in buying machiney when he had no power to run it. Organization can be organized to death: organizations, assemblies, and other big things are all right if there be power to run them; if not, they are like houses without tenants; machinery without power. Big names for little things are ludicrous and discordant.

This is the day of small things so far as the truth is concerned, and we are admonished not to despise it (Zech. 4:10). We feel "lonesome" in this world of humming religious activity, and we think of the Seventh-Day Adventists, Roman Catholics, and other religious sects that have perfect organizations and wonderful success. Usually "new things" are old things in a new suit of clothes. The power of imitation is great. Poor people act like the rich; little things pretend they are great. Battle Creek "headquarters" made the Seventh-Day Adventists great; Rome is the head of the Roman Catholics. Is it possible that the Lord's freemen want a mouth of authority located in the United States or Canada "to speak very great things" like these anti-Christian sects? Whether realized or not, the establishment of a General Assembly in the church would give us a super-church within the church, and would be quite a stride towards Rome.

THE NECESSITY OF A CREED

Apart from the bad tendency of the proposition, the proposal is fundamentally weak and erroneous. The Seventh-Day Adventists and Catholics and all other sects, organizations, and clubs which have been successful, have had a common interest. Now a common interest depends upon a common belief. The Adventists and Catholics believe the same things, hence work together harmoniously to serve common interests. Just here where the proposed General Assembly should be strong, it is weak. Every science has its first principles. You may call these a creed, declaration of principles, articles of faith, "the one faith" (Eph. 4:5), "the foundations" (Psa. 11:3), "the first principles of the oracles of God" (Heb. 5:12), "the principles of the doctrine of Christ" (Heb. 6:1), "form of doctrine" (Rom. 6:17), "form of sound words" (2 Tim. 1:13), "a brief statement of biblical teachings" (Notes Relative to General Assembly of the Church of God, page 4), or any other terms your fancy may approve the same thing is meant. We were delighted when we read in the "General Conference Call" under "policy," the following paragraph:

A CREED AFFIRMED

> (1) Our whole policy shall be conducted with a view to maintain the unity of Christian spirit. With such unity we purpose to unite in a common effort to affirm by print and voice the following biblical truths, and such as are in harmony therewith, all of which are commonly accepted by the people of the Church of God.
> a The oneness and omnipotence of God.
> b The inspiration of Scriptures.
> c The death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus as a means for the remission of sins and salvation.
> d Immortality only through Christ.
> e The resurrection of the dead.
> f The second coming of Christ, followed by the establishment of the kingdom of God.

g. Belief, repentance and baptism for the remission of sins.

h. A godly life.

The General Assembly shall not encourage anyone in advocating a doctrine not commonly accepted and which tends to cause division.

DEFECTS AND OMISSIONS OF THE CREED

This creed is very brief and defective; the marks of an incompetent hand are upon it. Under "a," which only affirms the oneness and omnipotence of God, a Mohammedan may be admitted among us. *"The inspiration of Scriptures" is a vague affirmation. If only this was written as Paul penned it, "inspiration of God" (2 Tim. 3:16), we would have had a means of keeping out of our ranks infidels who believe the Bible was written by the inspiration of the devil. A man may believe in "immortality only through Christ" and be a Universalist at the same time. Then under "e" we are told that "the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus is a means for the remission of sins and salvation"; while again we are informed under "g" that "belief (creed), repentance, and baptism are for the remission of sins." If by these ambiguous statements is meant that death, burial, and resurrection on the part of Jesus, and "belief (creed), repentance, and baptism" on our part, are prerequisites to remission of sins, we have a scriptural idea; but if by those two separate independent propositions the intent is to teach two separate ways of being forgiven, an explanation is needed. We surmise that here is taught in a veiled way forgiveness of sins by the death of Jesus without anything to be done on our part. Larger Hope is probably hiding in the ambiguities of these redundant propositions. Altogether this creed is crude, odd, awkward, and defective. Its defects are very glaring. The Holy Spirit is not recognized in the instrument; the judgment, itself a "first principle" (Heb. 6:2), is not mentioned; and Jesus being the Son of the living God, revealed to be such by the Father in heaven, the great foundation stone on which the church is built—that is wholly omitted! Significant omissions. As the General Assembly is not "building on this rock" they are building on a bank of sand (Matt. 16:15-19).

With all the defects, evasions, and omissions of this creed we were nevertheless glad to see it. "We purpose to unite in a common effort to affirm by print and voice the follownig biblical truth," sounded good to us coming from people who have opposed creeds for years. "Biblical truths" are the kind we want, and to affirm these "by print and voice" in a common and harmonious effort, would be splendid. After all we are to find out what "biblical truths" are in a formulated creed. Judge of our disappointment when we read in "Notes Relative to General Assembly," June 1, page 4, this recantation and interpretation:

A CREED DENIED

A creed? Absolutely no! Rather a brief statement of biblical teachings, upon which we are all agreed. A suggestion that we unite forces and efforts to promulgate such teachings; that as a General Assembly, or Bible Institution, we do not use any of the common funds or forces, to herald teachings contradictory thereto.

No creed; no discouragement to grow in grace and knowledge; no ban upon earnest study and new discovery of truth.

Instead, a common understanding of what we shall undertake to proclaim, plainly stated, that one and all may know exactly what same is, and what they are cooperting to sustain and advance, said statement embracing biblical facts at present commonly accepted and taught by the people of the church of God.

Such is the meaning of paragraph 4, of the suggested "policy."

A mind that can think and write in such contradictory fashion as is here done, is to be pitied. Part of the time, plea for a creed is made; the rest of the time is occupied in denouncing a creed. For it we have: "A brief statement of biblical teachings" (a creed exactly); the promulgation of "such teachings"; "a common understanding of what we shall undertake to proclaim, plainly stated"; "one and all must know exactly what same is." If a preacher presumes to promulgate something different to the teachings "plainly stated" in this creed, his money is to be withheld: "As a General Assembly we are not to use any of the common funds or forces to herald teachings contradictory thereto"! Here we have a veritable creed safeguarded and enforced by a boycott penalty. If this be not a creed there is not one in the world.

Against a creed we have: "A creed? Absolutely no!"; "No creed; no discouragement to grow in grace and knowledge; no ban upon earnest study and new discovery of truth." In saying these bad things about a creed it did not occur to the writer that he was overthrowing, or trying to overthrow, the eight points of doctrine "plainly stated" in his own creed. Cannot he see that when he obligates preachers to preach the "oneness of God" he gives "discouragement to grow in grace and knowledge;" that he is guilty of putting a "ban upon earnest study"; and that he practically forbids all "new discovery of truth" upon that subject? And so on with all the eight points in his "biblical teachings." But enough. The faithful among God's called out ones demand, and shall never cease to require, as a basis of fellowship, a creed comprehending "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12). We do not demand more, but can accept nothing less.

"The Great Tribulation"

Is it Near?

For there shall be great tribulation such as was not seen since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be (Mat. 24:21).

Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it (Jer. 30:7).

For before these days there was no hire for man, nor any hire for beast; neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in because of the affliction: for I set all men every one against his neighbor (Zech. 8:10).

THE GREAT commission Jesus gave to his disciples before ascending into heaven, was "to teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit" (Matt. 28:19). No follower of Jesus realized this more than his faithful servant the apostle Paul who said: "Necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!" (1 Cor. 9:16). Yet this same apostle in writing to the Thessalonians said: "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say peace and safety: then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape." Jesus himself said: "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." What things? Well, among others are: "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven (governments) shall be shaken."

We wish to reiterate this thought, that preeminently as Christians we should under all circumstances preach first, last and all the time—the gospel, exhorting people to seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness" (Mett. 6:23). But, if our knowledge of the near approach of our returning Lord, must be based upon our observation of the fulfilments of the things named by him to take place prior to his return, it behooves us to be not only on the alert, but also to be close observers of the events now transpiring. We are admonished that "as the days of Noah and Lot were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." Read Matt. 24:36-39; Luke 17:26-32; 1 Pet. 3:19-21.

We read in Zeph. 3:8: "Therefore wait ye upon me, saith the Lord, until the day that I rise up to the prey: for my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy." What kind of fire is this? Is it literal fire? I guess not. God's word is plain as the sun at noon. Moses in speaking to Israel said; "But the Lord hath taken you, and brought you forth out of the iron furnace, even out of Egypt, to be unto him a people of inheritance as ye are this day" (Deut. 4:20). This is the type of the church. See 1 Cor. 10:11.

Again the prophet says: "Behold I have refined thee, but not with silver, I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction" (Isa. 48:10). Jesus will make it is very plain for us: "As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of the world. The Son of Man shall send forth his angels and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity, and shall cast them into a furnace of fire. There shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth" (Matt. 13:40-42).

Beloved, a man thrown into a furnace of fire ceases to wail when the fire gets him. He may wail before he goes in, but the class known as "the tares," wail after they are in the furnace. Read Ezek. 22:17-22. Notice closely the analogy between literal fire and the fire of God's jealousy. Read Rev. 16:17-21. Notice the seventh angel is pouring out his vial into the air (the seat of power). Now let us turn back to Zeph. 1; read the whole chapter. Notice verse 15, that the day of the Lord's wrath is a day of trouble and distress to be ushered in (verses 16-18) as "a day of the trumpet." Read carefully and thoughtfully, especially verse 18. Here you have it: "Devoured by the fire of his jealousy.

Well, but you cannot have fire without the elements to feed the fire. David gives us the key in Psa. 88:13-18, and Paul in 1 Cor. 3:11-15. It is works either good or bad. The good endures like gold or silver; they are described in Gal. 5:22-26; the bad in Gal. 5:19-21. These are wood, hay, and stubble. Brethren, what elements burn more fiercely than these? Some of the elements.

Just now manufacturers are seeking colored help to take the place of strikers. The labor unions are gnashing their teeth. Not long ago there was a meeting in the Madison Square Gardens, whose object was the federation of 400,000,000 negroes to abolish the government of blacks by whites throughout the world.

This question caused the great Civil War. Listen to this: "For three centuries we have suffered and cowered. No race ever gave passive resistance and submission to evil longer, more piteous trial. Today we raise the terrible weapon of self-defence. When the murderer comes, he shall no longer strike us in the back. When the armed lynchers gather we too must gather armed. When the mob moves we propose to meet it with bricks and clubs and guns. If the United States is to be a land of law, we would live humbly and peaceably in it; if it is to be a land of mobs and lynchers, we might as well die today as tomorrow."

Since the day Japan was victor over Russia, the colored people, both black and yellow, have become race conscious. They realize the white races are in control of the choice positions of the earth. The nations are talking about a "Naval Holiday." Don't laugh, brethren. Japan and the United States are trying each to out do the other in building a large navy, and [illegible] of our fleet is in the Pacific. California, Canada, and Australia are dreading an Asiatic invasion. Read [illegible].

Rapidly these elements are working. Already statesmen realize a war between the East and the West is inevitable. India, China and Japan have approximately a population of 800 million, nearly half the population of the entire earth. Who can [illegible] see Germany waiting with passion at her defeat, [illegible] of those [illegible] in her lot with Bolsheviks [illegible] and their three elements controlling Persia, India and Afghanistan, with Japan and China thrown in. In the face of these elements the white races, especially the United States and her allies must go down. When we remember that the white races double their number every eighty years, the black every forty, and the brown and yellow every sixty years, brethren, how long can the white race stand up against this?

Then there is the religious question with its Irish qustion, etc., all anticipated by Daniel 8:23-25. Surely we are living in the last days. The elements are rapidly being gathered. Just a spark will bring about the conflagration which will burn until Jesus shall step upon the scene and "turn to the peopte a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve him with one consent" (Zeph. 3:9).

Facts About Matt. 24

Article Two

IT IS a rare gift to be able to apply Scripture just where it rightly belongs. It is the key note that produces harmony. This key to our mind is the kingdom of God and its coordinate incidents. It is not enough for us to believe that this kingdom will be set up and fully established; but we must be able to see that at the appearance of Jesus the Christ he will first raise the dead saints and then change the living ones. Then he will assemble his own people and prepare them as fit subjects of the kingdom where they will inherit the love and full recognition of their heavenly Father.

To these [illegible] we must apply different Scriptures in proof. The chapter under consideration to our mind must primarily be applied to the regathering of Israel. The signs herein given are of His own people in the flesh. Secondarily, they are applicable to those who look for the [illegible]. Such passages as 1 Thess. 4:13-18 are applicable to [illegible] coming to raise the dead and change the living. Paul in 1 Cor. 15:51-57 gives us the same [illegible] one truth here is separated from the fact that the resurrection is brought to view. In Matt. 24 there is no reference to one, but the writer is dealing altogether with those in the flesh. The resurrected saints will have run their race and gained their reward. Israel will be assembled to begin her trial under the rulership of Jesus and the apostles (Matt. 19:28). Incidents distinctly different.

As we have asserted, the choice recorded in this chapter is men and women in the flesh. Two men then shall be in the field; one will be taken; and the other left. No thought here of a call to immortality. Matthew begins this chapter with the apostles calling his attention to the building of the temple, no doubt believing that when the kingdom would appear that it would be dedicated to the worship of the only true God. To instruct them for their future work the Master announced that "there shall not be left here a stone; all will be overthrown" (Diaglott). "Tell us," said his disciples, "when these things shall be, and what shall be the sign of thy presence, and of the consummation of the age?" The first fourteen verses recite the ethical conditions that will exist to try their faith, and closes with, "He who patiently endures to the end will be saved." He then instructs them concerning the destruction of the city and temple. They are then to flee from the city and the terrible horrors that will follow. He then instructs them concerning the sign period.

Speedily after the affliction of these days certain signs shall occur. Then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in heaven, and then all the tribes of the land will lament, and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of heaven with majesty and power. He will send his messengers with a loud sounding trumpet, and they will assemble his chosen from the four winds from one extremity of heaven to the otcher" (Matt. 24:29-32). We will ask our readers to study these verses very carefully, as the key to the situation is found here. These signs are applied to Israel while in great distress. "All the tribes of the land (not world) will lament." The condition of the figtree and all the trees is a sign that the king is near. The social and industrial conditions are then given. "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." But as the days of Noe were, before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be."

The nominal church people and the alien class do not observe these signs, neither does Israel; but those who have accepted the gospel do. Israel when in her sore affliction will discern the arm of the Lord. The nations will remain obstinate to the end when their destruction will come upon them. He will break them to pieces as untimely vessels. He will rule them with a rod of iron. All the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of our Lord, Jesus Christ.

Paul gives some profitable instruction to Timothy which we should accept. He writes: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Farther he instructs: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect thoroughly furnished unto all good works." To rightly divide the word of truth and thoroughly furnish yourself unto all good works is striking the key note of harmony.

Temperance

There is naught that can ruin the worth of a man,
  Like loafing around an hotel;
It has blighted the joys of many a home,
  As the records of crime doth tell.

There is poison laid up in the dregs of the cup,
  Imbibed by the thoughtless in youth;
They are slaves to the demon of rum while they live,
  Too late they discover the truth.

A clean moral life is the best for us all,
  Of the wine cup and bottle beware;
It has ruined the hopes of many a life,
  And drowned them in sorrow and care.

J. E. HOGARTH.

Christian Light

WHAT IS a Christian? One who believes in Christ. One who practices, as well as professes, the doctrines and precepts of true Christianity. What is light? The luminous rays that flow from the sun and constitute day.

"Christian Light" is illumination of the mind by the word of God (Acts 17:11; John 5:39). What is the word of God? It is the sword of the spirit (Eph. 6:17; Heb. 4:12). How does it give light? By faith in the gospel as preached by Christ and Paul (Mark 16:15; Gal. 1:8). By baptism for the remission of sins (Luke 3:3; Acts 2:38; 10:43; Rom. 3:25).

What is the gospel? The word of God. Where do we find this word of God, or the gospel? In the Bible. What does it teach us about light? God is light. He dwells in light that no man can approach unto (1 Tim. 6:16; 1 John 1:5). Then how can one come to the true light? Through Christ. "I am the light of the world" (John 1:8; 8:12; 9:5). How can one come to the light through Christ? By believing and obeying the gospel by baptism into Christ. Then one has the light of the gospel of Christ, and it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth (Rom. 1:16).

Can any one be saved, but by the power of God? No. David said the Lord is my light and my salvation (Psa. 27:1). How should the people seek their God? Through his light. We may get the light that is of God through Christ; we get the light of God through Christ; we get the gospel of God through Christ. We get the word of God through Christ. God gives certain ones "eternal life" through Christ (Rom. 6:23). All power comes from God, and the Christian gets his power from God through Christ. We are in darkness, and we come into the glorious light through Christ (2 Cor. 4:4). We submit this as the true Christian light taught in the word of God.

Loyalty to Christ

RECENTLY THE chairman of a committee appointed by a church, denominated Christian, came to the writer and asked him to recommend some one to become minister of said church. We recommended a loyal gospel preacher. A few weeks later he met the same gentleman and made inquiry as to his success in securing a minister. He said they had been unable to secure the man we recommended. He then said that they had wanted to secure a man who would not insist upon preaching the doctrinal teaching of the church. He informed us there was a denominational body in the community, and he wanted to secure a man who would not preach on subjects concerning which there was a difference of opinion. He hoped to bring about a union of the two bodies in a community church, and, therefore, they could not employ a man who might hurt the feelings of their religious neighbors. Right here is the fundamental weakness of many of our people today. They are simply disloyal to Jesus Christ. They think more of encomiums of those who substitute human teachings for the doctrines of Jesus Christ than they think of the approval of God himself. Somehow they seem to think that God has appointed them as his special representatives to change the teaching of his Son and the inspired apostles in favor of those who are unwilling to follow the leadership of Christ all the way. Of course, we all desire the good will of our neighbors, but if it must be purchased by a failure to be loyal to Jesus Christ it comes at too high a price. Of course, we never desire to offend anyone uselessly, but if preaching the gospel in a spirit of love and loyalty offends, we can not help it. At any rate, it is better to offend a follower of man-made doctrines than to offend God by substituting something for his expressed will. Besides, any man who has the spirit of Christ even in a small measure, will be glad to learn the real message of Christ, and when he hears it will search the Scriptures to see if it is correct, and if he finds it is, he will accept it. If the difference between religious communions is only a difference of opinions, and there is no spiritual teaching on the subject, then each is entitled to its own opinion. But no man has a right to an opinion where Jesus Christ speaks on a subject, and any man who will insist on his own opinion in such a case or desire to respect the opinion of another, is disloyal to Christ. There is no possible way to avoid this conclusion, and no other term than disloyal is proper to use in speaking of such individual. What this world needs is not compromise, but loyal devotion to Jesus Christ. He is our Savior, our example, and our lawgiver. "All authority in heaven and on earth" has been given to him and we must seek to do his will. Any man who is unwilling to follow the leadership of Jesus Christ ought to be ashamed to wear the name "Christian," and any church that does not desire to follow his teaching fully ought not to be called a church of Christ.—Selected by the Editor.

Is It Not Wrong?

By S. ROXANA WINCE

BUT SOME one may ask, "Is it not wrong for the manager of The Restitution to do job work to keep the paper alive?" Why wrong? doing job work is not a dishonorable business. There is no sin in doing it, no more than in advertising a superba or in raising bees, or in selling berries and vegetables to earn money to suppotr the cause of truth, as I used to do, before my faithful, gentle Marguerite lay down and died. God will not condemn us for engaging in any honest work with a view to his glory.

Our paper may seem a very little thing and its writers, weak insignificant vessels; but it is the weak things that God chooses to confound the mighty. The whole history of the church, from the time of its establishment down to the present has been an exemplification of this fact. Not many mighty men have been called that the glory of taking the gospel to the ends of the earth might be given to God, and not to man.

God works in various ways to carry out his plans. I used to feel sick nigh unto death over our divided churches and divided papers, as perhaps some of the members of the churches in Asia Minor did when Paul and Barnabas quarrelled, and started out on different missions.

Now I am learning to leave the matter with God. If he sees that more can be done in separate missions than unitedly, let his will be done.

Can any one tell all the good that The Restitution has done in the past, or predict what good he may see fit to accomplish in the future through its pages? If not, pray and work, that it may live on until the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord. Do all that can possibly be done in an honest way to support it. Worldly men judge us, not by our profession of love for Jesus, but by the tenor of our daily lives and by the joyful sacrifices we make for the extension of his cause. If we spend dollars for confections and give nickels to the Lord, will the world believe there is anything real in the Christianity we profess? If we have never learned "to resist not evil," will they believe in our Christ? We must give to the world a thoroughly changed life if we want them to believe, must be to them a glorious window, through which Christ can shine. Oh, I want to be such a window; I want to be able to say with Paul, "For me to live is Christ;" to be to others "a wellspring of living gushing water of life all the time, not intermittently, not interruptedly, but with a continuous, irrestible flow.

It is such a life that wins; a life, so "unfolding the life of Christ," that men cannot help seeing what it was like.

So, in raising our working fund we do it because Christ lives in us, the hope of glory; our bodies, our minds, our wills are his, "literally a part of him," as Charles Gallaudet Trumbell says.

We give as we know Christ would give. Need I say more? You know your duty, and I am sure you will do it.

Three World-Leagues

AND THE great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell, and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath (Rev. 16:19).

IN THE symbolic vision of the seer of Patmos in Rev. 19, we have a vivid picture of the world conflict between truth and error, in which "the word of God clothed in a vesture dipped in blood," led by the Christ spirit, who leads a white horse army in conflict with the beast (Roman Empire), and the false prophet, or two horned beast (Rev. 19:20); 13:14). In Rev. 20: a third world power or league, called the dragon, and adversary of truth, is cast into the abyss, where he has no more power to deceive the world for 1000 years.

"'Truth for ever on the scaffold, wrong forever on the throne,' will then be reversed, for the martyrs for truth will then be resurrected to reign with Christ 1000 years (Rev. 5:9, 10; 20:1-21).

The ten horned crowned beast, or federation of Rev 15, has power to continue for forty-two months, or for three and a half years (vs. 5).

This crowned federation arising out of the sea of "nations, kindreds, tongues, and peoples," which waters represent (Rev. 17:15), is such a powerful military league that "all the world wonder after the beast, saying, who is able to make war with him ?" (vss. 3-6).

Priests, preachers, and statesmen throughout the world are hailing the world league as "the world Savior from desolating war," "a man's last hope of peace on earth," and as "the politician expresssion of the kingdom of God on earth." etc.

"And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark. or the name of the beast, or the number of his name," and the number of the beast is the number of a man, 666" (Rev. 13:17,18). Article XVI of the league covenant reads: "Should any of the high contracting parties break or disregard any of its covenants under Article XII, it shall thereby ipse facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all the other members of the league, which hereby undertakes immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the covenant breaking state, and the prevention of all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between the nationals of any other state, whether a member of the league or not."

"It shall be the duty of the Executive Council in such case to recommend what effective military or naval force the members of the league shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the league."

The boycott weapon provides the economic ruin of any nation which breaks the rules of the association. As one senator says: "That is the one weapon of the future by which the peaceful government of the world can be made certain. Guns cannot work the result. Wealth cannot do it, nor diplomacy, nor secret plottings, nor any other means save the calling into use of the power of trade. That country which has the channels of trade closed to it, wlll capitulate no matter how greatly its national honor may suffer."

Another correspondent says: "Any member of the league which breaks these rules will be regarded as having committed an act of war against every other member of the league, and then we shut their doors, and blockade them in, and boycott them. Just as soon as that is done, they cannot ship cargoes out. or receive them. They cannot send out or receive a letter, or a telegraphic message. Nobody can enter, or leave their territory, and this will be done to every nation on earth, whether they are members of the league or not. Her doors are shut from all connection with the outside world."

"Now that is the league of nations. First, an effort to arbitrate; then if that fails, a complete blockade and boycott; next, the force of arms, if necessary."

As to the ten horns of this beast: "Special assemblies shall be called at the request of ten members. The executive comsel of nine members will be increased to ten if America sends a representative to it, in case that we sign the covenant."

"The league was born and began its life Jan. 16,1920, at Paris, France, at the summons of President Wilson, and now its permanent seat is at Geneva, Switzerland, where an old hotel has been transformed into 'The Palace of Nations.'"

The presiding officers are M. Paul Hymans, of Belgium, or Senor Quinones De Leon, of Spain, representatives of two strong Roman Catholic countries; and the Secretary General is Sir Eric Drummond, a Roman Catholic of England. This child of the world at a year old comprises 49 nations, with a large majority of Catholic votes, and with supreme power over three fourths of the world's inhabitants. hTe cost of its first session in Geneva was over $1,500,000.

As to the number 666, it is connected with gold (1 Kings 10:14; 2 Chron. 9:13). The Latin or Greek numerals sum up 666 in Vicarius Filii Dei; in the name Benedikotos XV, in the word Eupodia; and Kaiser William II was just 666 months old to a day when the world war was declared. He was bonr Jan. 27 1849, and instigated the war declaration by Austria on Servia, July 27, 1914. This mystic number will have a close connection with money, the papacy, and with a revived Roman empire. "The beast that thou saweth, was and is not, and shall ascend out of the abyss, and go into perdition" (Rev. 13:8).

When the labor parties in all countries overthrow the kings, the crowned beast of Rev 13 will come to its end in the lake of fire; mainly gas, and then the scarlet Bolshevist beast of Rev. 17, will rule the world, and the league will continue under ten presidents without crowns, and then by intrigue, and by delegate vote the papal harlot will mount the beast for a short hour of judgment.

The seven heads of the beast are successive, not contemporaneous, for at the time that the angel shows the harlot ready for judgment, five of the hads had fallen, one is, and the othr is not yet come, and when he cometh he must continue a short space (Rev. 17:10).

Adam Clark makes theses even heads, Regal, B. C. 1181; Distotors of the republic of Rome, B. C. 753; the decemirrate magistrates; consu's and military tribunes: the triumvirate, B. C. 43: the imperial Caesars, and the Carlovingian Patriciate under Charles Martel and his successors.

But the dragon gave his seat and authority to the beats, under Constentine 322 A. D. (Rev 13:2). Hence the dragon in Revelation is a symbol of pagan Rome, and the beast under seven heads represents the so-called "Holy Roman Empire" of the middle ages, rising, and falling, under seven successive heads, after the empire professed Christianity.

Hence the first head of this conglomeration of paganism, and superstitions formality, was Constantine and his sucessors 322 A. D.

The next change in the empire, and in its head, was when the bishop of Rome, Boniface III was exalted above the emperor Phocas A. D. 606.

The next change was under Charlemagne, 800 A. D., who revived the empire.

Fourth. Otto of Germany, 962 A. D. "The Holy Roman Empire of the German People," continued under German head until 1254 to 1275 (West's Medieval History).

Fifth head; Napoleon I, in 1813, till his fall at Waterloo.

Sixth: Kaiser William II, of Germany, who arose to headship over all Turkey, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria, Northern and Eastern France and Italy in 1916.

Seventh head: King George of Great Britain, who has six votes in the world league, which controls all the old Roman world, and much more. Under this head the crowns will all fall at the hands of the labor party, and through bolshevist propaganda, the uncrowned, socialistic, scarlet beast will succeed the present world league for a short time.

"And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition" (Rev. 17:11). That is the world government or league, "that was" (under these past successive heads, and that) "was not" (or came to an end), "and yet is" (or is revived, or resurrected) "is an eighth beast," or federation of nations (because it is a new socialistic order), yet "is of the seven" (that is one of the seven federations, or the present British controlled league, converted into a socialistic league), "and goeth into perdition," or anarchy.

After this comes the collapse of the banking system, and the fall of commercialism: "for, in one hour, is so great riches come to naught" (Rev. 18).

Under this eighth form of the beast federation, pope Benedict the XV, the last antichrist, with his harlot bride, Babylon, will ride into power long enough to bring upon both a bloody and violent destruction, for "she shed the blood of saints and martyrs, and gave her blood to drink, for she is worthy" "Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death and mourning and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the Lord that judgeth her."

The beast has only had seven successive heads, because no matter how many popes get control of the empire, they all count but as one horn, or head of the beast; but the new socialistic form of the empire, or world league, makes it an eighth beast or federation, but under seven heads.

The present pope will dominate a world league of labor, in the last hour of judgment. The ten horns or presidents who "reign as kings one hour with the beast" will correspond with the ten toes of Dan. 2, after the clay of democracy and of socialism and bolshevism has entirely displaced the the iron of monarchy. Remarks

WE BEGAN the month of May by holding an all day meeting at Elder Fisk's school house where we took our dinners, and enjoyed the day. I believe this was reported in my last. My next point was Arkansas City, to which place I journeyed on Monday on the slow train through Arkansas, The jester could say most anything about this bit of road, and all be true, unless he should deviate from the truth and say something nice. When we finally arrived, we found the brethren had put off starting the meeting till Tuesday, thinking I should have a little rest; but to be idle when so many places were waiting was harder than to speak. So we held our meeting at Sister Hallick's roomy home, after being refused an empty church, and all halls too much occupied with lodges and clubs to admit of any religious services.

When I arrived I proceeded to Sister Reed's, where a welcome awaited me; but how I missed the kindly face of Brother Reed, who in November had gone to rest to await the trumpet call. We responded to invitations by Brother and Sister Arthur Chaplin, Sister Randolph, Sister Ella Long, and Sister Hadicke; all of which was enjoyed perfectly, as the Bible and the times in which we are now living was the principle theme.

On Sunday afternoon we went to the Lake in the City park, where six were planted in the likeness of Christ's death, and raised to walk in newness of life. How necessary this is in order to enter the kingdom. After the service of baptism, we went to Brother Hobson's, who with his wife and daughters were half of the number baptized, and partook of the emblems. In this group was old Brother Fisk, over 80 years of age. How he did enjoy the meeting; he fully realized there were not many more such meetings for him until the final great gathering. After service, Sister Randolph invited a number of us to her home for evening lunch, and some of the new members were of the number, and a couple of hours together was much enjoyed. Some of these new members had been attending the Bible class, and were well instructed, which shows what a live Bible class can do.

After the evening service the good byes were said, and we were soon speeding away on a fast train to Rene, Colo., where we arrived at noon the next day. There we made quite a record, spoke in Arkansas City Sunday night, and travelled over four hundred miles, and spoke again Monday night, when I arrived at La Junta, after travelling at a rate of speed, for which the great Santa Fe is noted. When I alighted from the train the first thing I saw was the familiar faces of Brother and Sister Grimsley, and we were soon speeding away over the Santa Fe trail, at were soon at Brother Grimsthe Santa Fe trail, and were soon at Brother Grinley's home. In the evening we started our meeting with all the brethren present. Not many outsiders came, but the meeting was enjoyed and the good visits at the homes of the brethren.

Here is one of the liveliest congregations I know of; they scarcely ever miss a Bible class, and had their collection made when I arrive. Brother and Sister Grimsley are doing a fine work here, and with their willing helpers, are keeping alive and progressing. At the close of the meeting four put on Christ, which was a source of great joy to the little congregation.

After bidding these worthy ones good by, we were soon on the way to Pueblo, where we visited Sister Hannah Barber between trains. Sister Barber is a live wire; if everyone put forth the effort to get the truth before the people that she does, more would get to hear it. After a pleasant talk on Bible themes, we were again on our way to Denver, where we had to change for Hudson, the next stop. Here Sister Wheeler, who used to be Florence Sellick, lives. I baptized both she and her daughter in Nebraska. This was a chance to visit them, that might not come again soon. After living in a community where there was a large congregation and then become isolated, is a change, hard to become reconciled to; yet Sister Wheeler seems to yield to the inevitable with a great deal of Christian fortitude.

Our pleasant visit was soon ended and we were on our way to Laird, for a double wedding the 22nd, and when arrived found meeting was given out for that evening in the hall. We had a congregation beyond our expectation, and it continued up to the last night with good interest; and on our return some are to be baptized. Sister Smith, who moved from Palmer, Neb., to Ft. Morgan, Colo., wanted me to give them a call, and while so close decided to do so. Here we are having the largest turnout for many days. We are not able to seat anywhere near all the people, and such marked attention. Some very fine singers are taking hold and helping out without apparently any prejudice. But what will the harvest be? When the test comes will they choose to remain where they are or will they decide to take Jesus as their Savior, and trust him to carry them over the time of trouble, and finally give them a home in his kingdom?

And there are many waiting but long experience has told me that nothing is accomplished by going from one point to another before the work is finished, and it takes time to do this; and then the indifference of so many, when we know they do not in any degree understand what they are facing, and worst of all, what they are losing; but we do our part, and it relieves our anxiety to a degree; but are we all doing our part? If not, brethren, get busy; there is something for everyone; the Lord will soon call us to account for our stewardship, and it will be too late then to make amends. Now is the time to prepare for the reckoning and guard against failure. I will give account of my work here in my June report.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Admonitions for Youths

LUKE 11:13

BRETHREN, SISTERS, young and old: In my paper under date of Nov. 24th I notice an open letter in regard to dancing and asking readers to write on the subject, and as I am a great believer in The Restitution and think it a good plan to talk to young people of such things, we will now go to Luke 11:13: "Jesus said unto his disceples, If ye then being evil know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him."

Now, brethren, Christ said "good gifts." Suppose ye then if we give them a large house and fit them up for a dance, that would be a good gift? I think not; I would rather call it an evil gift. Now let us go to Eph. 4:11--14 and see how that would go together with the gift of our Lord. Listen: "And he (Christ) gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, till we all come in the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ; that we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Is this all? Hear now what he says in verses 29 and 30: "Let no corrupt communications proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying that it may minister grace unto the hearers. And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption."

Again, go to Eph. 5:11: "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." Well, if we go along with our children to the dance, to the pie supper, to the box supper, or even let them go, we are reproving them? Methinks not. "Well, then" says one, "what shall I do? My children are all the time wanting to go somewhere." Answer: If they are Christians, give them the word of God: tell them that all things that are reproved are made manifest by the light; and that light is Jesus. "For whatever doth make manifest is light. Wherefore he saith, Awake, thou that sleepeth, and rise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time because the days are evil" (Eph. 5:13-16). Why do all this? "For ye are dead and your life is hid with Chrst in God" (Col. 3:3). If we are Chrstians our lives are hid with Christ in God. Are they? Yes, indeed. Then if we go to such places as above spoken of, where then is our Christian lives? Answer, you have partaken of the unfruitful works of darkness, and have fallen asleep in the blackness of darkness. You may say now, What shall we do? Go to Acts 3.19-21; let Peter tell you: "Repent ye therefore and be converted, that your sins may be blotd out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord. And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Beloved, the Savior tells us what to do. Let us read Matt. 11:28-30: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest unto your souls. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls; for my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

"Let this Cup Pass—"

Were Christ's Prayers Always Answered?

IN THE Restitution of Feb. 15th, there was an interesting article entitled, "The Blood of Christ: War it Necessary to His Resurrection?" by Brother S. T. Blessing. I have had it in mind for some time to write some comments on this article, but have been prevented until the present through lack of time.

The extract on which I wish to base a few remarks, reads as follows: "Jesus dreading the suffering, shame and ignomy of death on the cross, his agony was such that his sweat was great drops of blood falling down to the ground; and in his distress prayed, 'O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me.' When no other way was found he voluntarily and willingly offered to yield up his life blood in sacrifice." This would lead us to believe that Jesus shrank from drinking the "cup" of the cross. Let us see if this is true.

Now I am going to ask a few questions in connection with the subject. Did God set a definite time for the Savior to be sacrificed, before which time he could not die, and beyond which he could not live? Yes, there was a set time for his cutting off many years before he was born. Where do we find such a prophecy? In Daniel 9:25, 26: "Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem, unto Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks and three score and two weeks, and after three score and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself."

Did Jesus understand that his enemies had no power to lay hands on him before the set time? Yes, John 7:19, 30: "Why go ye about to kill me? Then they sought to take him; but no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not yet come." Did Jesus know when his hour did come? Yes, I am sure he fully realized that fact. "Now before the feast of the passover when Jesus knew that his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father" John 13:1: "Behold the hour is at hand, and the Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. Rise let us be going, behold, he is at hand, that doth betray me" (Matt. 25:45). He was now conscious that the hour for the Messiah to be cut off foretold by the prophet Daniel, had in fact come.

Are God's decrees always unchangeable, either by prayer or in any other way? Yes, prayer contrary to his written word would surely be contrary to his will. What did he pray for when he realized his "hour was come?" Matthew 26:34: "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." Was our Lord's prayers always answered? John 11:41, 42: "Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. I know that thou hearest me always." Was his prayer that the cup might pass from him answered? It was. Te Father let thec up pass hm.i But was he not cut off, just as Daniel foretold? Yes, but his prayer had no referecne to that event.

By a little careful study the almost general mistake that the cross was the bitter cup which Jesus shrank from drinking, could have been avoided. It would have been inconsistent, and altogether unlike our Savior to pray to be delivered from that which he knew from his personal study of the prophetic word was his revealed destiny as the Lamb of God to be slain for the salvation of sinners.

While Cleopas and his companion were on their way to Emmaus, Jesus fell in with them. The language of the Savior, in conversation with these disciples, after his resurrection, does not contain the least hint of his having prayed to be delivered from drinking the cup of the cross. In fact, if this had been his prayer, then his language to his disciples would reveal his inconsistency. Cleopas and his companion were very sad and talked seriously together, Jesus held their eyes, so that they should not recognize him. Then the Savior asked them, "What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk and are sad ?" Cleopas answering said unto him : "Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and has not known the things which are come to pass there in these days ? And he said unto them, What things ?" Then they told him the whole story, and added: "We trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel. Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken : ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into his glory ? And he said unto them, Thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day : and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, begining at Jerusalem." The fault he found with these men was that they were simple ones, and he rebuked them for not having a better understanding of the teaching of the prophets, and also as to what was written in the law of Moses and in the Psalms concerning him.

Now considering the words of Jesus, how that it bevooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day, it would have been very much unlike our Savior to pray, "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me." Did Jesus, himself, consider it necessary that the cup of suffering should be drunk ? I am sure he did, for he would have no consistent ground for censuring his disciples for not perceiving that which he had not perceived himself. And so he was well aware of the suffering that awaited him ; and further he knew the exact time when the suffering would come. John 13:1: "Jesus knew that his hour had come when he should depart out of this world unto the Father:"

Now notice that after Jesus had rebuked his disciples for their lack of comprehension as to what Moses and the prophets had writen concerning him, he began to teach them: "And beginning at Moses and all the prophets he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself" (Luke 24:27).Had Jesus prayed that the cup of the cross might pass from him, it would have been the same as our Lord asking his Father to let all the things written in Moses, the prophets, and all the Scriptures, concerning himself, become void or unfulfilled. Never for one moment would our Lord have entertained such a thought ; because he said, "All things must be fulfilled which are written in the law of Moses and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me." Whatever "must be" cannot be set aside, either by prayer or in any way whatever. The things written were that "it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day." These things could not be set aside. They "must be fulfilled." If the cup of the cross had passed from him, he could not have suffered and rose from the grave the third day. Should the suffering have been omitted it would in effect have been a prayer for the Father to count as nothing the prophecies written in Moses, the prophets, and the Psalms. Without the suffering there would have been no sheding of blood ; without the shedding of blood there would have been no remission of sins ; and so there would have been no "repentance and remission of sins preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."

Mark 14:33-35 reads as follows: "And he taketh with him Peter, James and John, and began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy ; and saith unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death : tarry ye here and watch." And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed that the hour might pass from him. He said "Abba Father, all things are possible unto thee ; take away this cup from me ; nevertheless, not what I will, but what thou wilt." The "cup" Jesus prays to be delivered from is death, but not death from the cross. Verse 34 shows that extreme sorrow had resulted in a deadly illness which would have ended in death, before the cross was reached, if his prayer, "take away this cup from me," had not been answered. I will quote verse 34 from the Diaglott, as I think it states the case in somewhat clearer language: "And he said to them, My soul is encompassed with a deadly—fatal—anguish." In other words, his soul or life was in immediate danger on account of a "deadly" malady, caused by his excessive "anguish." Mark 14:33, 34 from the Twentieth Century Translation reads: "He took with him Peter James and John, and began to show signs of great dismay and deep interest of mind. I am sad at heart, he said, sad even to death ; wait here and watch." Also Luke 22:44 from this same translation reads: "And as his anguish became intense, he prayed still more earnestly, while his sweat was like great drops of blood falling on the ground." His heart anguish must have been intense.

Matt. 26:38 reads: "Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful even unto death." Death resulting from sorrow, otherwise called "a broken heart." In this extreme necessity he now prays, "Father, if it is thy pleasure take this cup from me ; only, not my will be done, but thine" (Luke 22:42). Was it the Father's will to hear and answer this prayer ? It was. "Presently there appeared to him an angel from heaven, who strengthened him" (verse 43). His prayer was answered. He was saved from death, to which he was dangerously close by reason of a "deadly anguish" which threatened to overwhelm him.

"When they had sung a hymn," the record reads, "they went out into the mount of Olives." Jesus takes only his three proved companions, Peter, James, and John, and passes with them further into the garden, leaving the rest seated, probably near the entrance. No pen can attempt to describe what passed that night in that secluded spot. He tells them: "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even unto death : tarry ye here and watch with me ;" and then leaving even the three he goes farther and in solitude wrestles with an inconceivable trial. The words of Mark are still more expressive: "He began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy." The former word means that he was struck with a great dread ; not from the fear of physical suffering, however excruciating, we may well believe, but with the contact with the sins of the world, of which, in some inconceivable way he felt the bitterness and the weight. He did not merely contemplate them. It is impossible to explain this scene in Gethsemane in any other way. The disciples have sunk to sleep. It was in search of consolation that he came back to them. He rebukes them by saying, "Couldst thou not watch one hour ?' A second time he departs and wrestles in prayer with the Father. A second time he returns and finds them sleping. The same scene is repeated yet a third time ; and then all is concluded. Henceforth they may sleep and take their rest ; never more shall they be asked to watch one hour with Jesus, for his ministry in the flesh is at an end.

In Smith's Bible Dictionary (page 923, edition 1913) I find the following: "One of the physical phenomena attending our Lord's agony in the Garden of Gethsemane is described by Luke the physician (22:44), 'His sweat was as it were great drops (literally clots) of blood falling down to the ground.' Of this malady, known in medical science by the term diapedesis, there have been examples recorded both in ancient and modern times. Aristotle was aware of it.The cause assigned is generally violent mental emotion." Dr. Millingen (Curiosities of Medical Experience, page 489, second edition) gives the following explanation of the phenomenon: "It is probable that this strange disorder arises from a violent emotion of the nervous system, turning the streams of blood out of their natural course, and forcing the red particles into the cutaneous excretion. A mere relaxation of the fibres could not produce so powerful a revulsion. It may also arise in cases of extreme debility, in connection with a thinner condition of the blood." These extracts indicate that the malady from which our Lord suffered so acutely is known by the medical fraternity.

It is quite evident that "a violent emotion of the nervous system" would likely result from the "deadly anguish" from which our Lord suffered. It cannot be true that our Lord shrank from the physical suffering of the cross. "Sad at heart and deep distress of mind" is mental suffering.' This had a much keener edge to it than the physical suffering the cross could inflict. I cannot but believe that our Lord was lacking in either manly or moral courage. He was of a refined and sensitive nature, and he could not endure the intense mental suffering with which he was burdened. His suffering was not from cowardly fear, but solely of the mind.

When Jesus prayed so earnestly in the garden he sought to be saved from death. For we read in Heb. 5:7: "Who in the days of his flesh, when he offered up prayers and supplication, with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared." It was during his fearful agony of heart, in the garden of Gethsemane, that he "in the days of his flesh" offered up such "prayers and supplications, with strong crying and tears," and he "that was able to save him from death, heard" and delivered him.

I cannot believe that the Savior ever shrank from that which his Father's word said "must be fulfilled." He said, "It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). And again: "All things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me. Thus it is written and thus it behooves Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day." So if it "must be" it could not be otherwise—it could not be changed. We know that Jesus would not pray for the removal of the "cup," meaning his suffering on the cross, for that would be asking for the removal of that which "must be fulfilled." He said, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God" (Heb. 10:9). Again, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work" (John 4:34). I believe it is now plain to all that his prayer had no reference to his suffering on the cross.

In conclusion, permit me to call your attention again to the prayer of the Lord Jesus as recorded in John 11:41, 42: 'Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. I know that thou hearest me always." Every prayer of the blessed Savior was answered. Let us not overlook this important fact. On every occasion the Lord's courage was equal to the trial. The noble and courageous character of our Redeemer is worthy of all the honor, love, and praise it is possible for us to give. He said predictions concerning him in Moses, the prophets, and the Psalms "must be fulfilled." Now we can clearly see that he submitted to these things, without a question on every occasion. I am sure that what we have learned has given us a more exalted conception of the noble and self-sacrificing character of God's glorified Son and our beloved Redeemer.

Editorial Comments

THE ABOVE article by Brother Groves is a well meant attempt to defend the Master from the implications of what appears to Brother Groves to be an appearance of weakness and inconsistency on the part of the Master of his betrayal into the hands of the cruel mob who slew him. We admire the spirit and purpose of Brother Groves' article. He is trying, as he says, to "give us a more exalted conception of the noble and self-sacrificing character of God's glorified Son and our beloved Redeemer." This is a high and worthy object and commendable in every way; nevertheless we are going to ask the Brother to bear with us while we analyse his statements and make some comment thereon, in all kindness and brotherly love.

To summarize the argument of the article it may be reduced to the following brief statements:

1. God set a definite time for Christ to be crucified, before which time he could not die, and beyond which time he could not live.
2. God's decrees are unchangeable either by prayer or any other way. Prayer contrary to his written word would be contrary to his will.
3. Our Lord's prayers were always answered, and this prayer that the bitter cup might pass from him was answered also; but his prayer did not refer to his death on the cross but to the fear that death might come before he reached the cross.
4. Christ knew that God had decreed that he should go through this ordeal, and therefore it would be inconsistent and very much unlike our Savior to pray, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me."

The above gives the substance of the argument in the article by Brother Groves. And now let us see where it leads us to. In the first place, it seems to us that the suggested solution does not solve the problem, but on the contrary, simply creates another horn to the dilemma. If it was inconsistent for Christ to ask the Father to save him from the ordeal of being crucified when he knew the Father had decreed that he should pass through it; what would we think of his faith in asking, that he might be spared from a premature death when he knew that the Father had decreed that he could not die until the appointed hour, and in the appointed way. As Brother Groves correctly states, "There was a definite time set for the Savior to be crucified, before which time he could not die." The suggestion advanced in the article under consideration puts Jesus in the position of doubting whether the Father could save him from a premature death, for his prayer was: "IF IT BE POSSIBLE remove this cup from me." And then in the words, "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done" the Master expresses his willingness (in case it was not possible to save him from a premature death) to let the whole purpose of God be a failure. Of course Brother Groves did not think of it in this way, nevertheless this is the logical conclusion to which his suggestion would lead. The trouble with this suggestion is that it is based on a wrong premise. The premise is found in the statement that it was unlike the Master to pray for deliverance when he knew it was God's will that he should pass through the great trial.

There is no scriptural basis for this idea. On the contrary, we find the Master, everywhere, when possible, seeking to avoid and escape from persecution and trial. He was seeking no hero's pinnacle or martyr's errown. When they would have cast him over the brow of the hill on one occasion he passed through the midst of them and disappeared.

Not only did he follow this wise course himself, but he taught his disciples to do likewise. When he sent them out to preach the gospel he said, "When they persecute you in one city flee to another" (Matt. 10:23). And when he came face to face with the last great crisis that was to carry him into the dark valley of death it was only natural that he should ask the Father if any other was was possible, but declaring in the same breath that whatever his will was, he was ready to obey it. There was nothing inconsistent about this. It has been asked by some, Did not his prayer and agony in the garden show weakness? We answer unhesitatingly, yes. Did it betray fear? Certainly!

We thank God that he did manifest these human qualities. It is the most glorious fact in the whole story of God's dealings with us, that he gave us a Christ who knows us, because he was made in all points like us, though he did no sin. Had he gone through this struggle like an expressionless stoic, without evincing the emotions of fear or anguish, he would have failed to manifest that relationship to us that it was the purpose of God that he should bear. It was not enough that he should taste death for us; so he partook of our experiences, felt our weakness was subject to our sorrows and experienced our fears. Thus he was brought very close to us and we can come boldly to the throne of grace, knowing that there is one there that understands us.

Oh how our hearts are touched as we behold him on that dark night under the gnarled boughs of the olive trees, wrestling with these human proclivities! He had just eaten the last supper with his disciples; he had approached the subject of his great trial, but they understood him not. His great blessed heart was weighed down with the anguish and responsibility that rested upon him, but there are none that understand; he must bear it all alone, so far as human help is concerned. Silently the little company filed out of the upper room into the darkness. They crossed the brook Kedron and followed the lonely path to the seclusion and silence of the garden on Olive's brow. It was a funeral march. The silence was broken at last by the Master when they reached the shadowy garden. Addressing the nine he said, "Wait here and pray that ye enter not into temptation." Then taking Peter and John he went into a more secluded part of the garden and turning to the two disciples he said, "Watch here while I go yonder and pray." And there among the shadows of that historic garden he poured out his soul in earnest petition to the only one who understood his feelings and the greatness of the burden he had to bear. The apostle tells us that "he offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears . . . . and was heard in that he feared." His prayer was answered; how? Angels came and strengthened him. He won the greatest battle in human annals when he said, "Thy will. not mine be done.' He was now ready to go through the terrible experiences with the calmness and dignity that became the Son of God. I thank God for the revelation of his humanity in this conflict in the garden as well as for his victory over it; for now—

When gathering clouds around I view,
And days are dark and friends are few,
On him I'll lean who not in vain,
Experienced every human pain;
He feels our griefs, he sees our fears,
He trod himself this vale of tears.

Practice economy. Be neither extravagant nor niggardly.

Drifting

Now dear reader, go with me to James 1:13-15. Let us see where we may drift by stepping out of the body of Christ. We may say we were tempted to go to such places. Well, who tempted us? Answer: "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God, for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. When lust has conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death."

Now in my closing words, let me advise by giving you the 16 and 17 verses of James: "Do not err, my beloved brehren, Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights with whom is no variableness neither shadow of turning." Then God has no part with the unfruitful works of darkness. Let us come out from them and be a separate people, as we know we cannot serve two masters. God help us in the name of his Son.

Baptism A Saving Ordinance

WE CANNOT evade this very important duty without direful serious and fatal consequences. As Christians we show in a four-fold way what we are: By though: "Believe on the Lord" (Acts 16:31; Matt. 22:42). Feeling: "If a man love me he will keep my words" (John 14:2). The will: Repent and be converted" (Acts 3:19); and by deeds: "Whosoever shall confess me before men, him will I confess" (Matt. 10:32); "Repent and be baptized" (Acts 2:38). If faith, repentance and confession are three of the corner stones, we shall never get the building reared until we get the fourth one, and that is baptism; and it is just as essential as the other three.

1. BAPTISM IS COMMANDED

A. It is a command of God. "There was a man sent from God . . . . he that sent me to baptize." etc. (John 1:6, 33).

B. It is a command of Christ. "Go ye therefore, ... baptizing them" (Matt. 28:18-20).

C. It is a command of the Spirit. "They were all filled (Peter too) with Holy Spirit . . . . And . . . Peter said . . . Repent, and be baptized every one" (Acts 2:4, 38).

D. It is a command of the apostles, and they were inspired to give the orders. "Then answered Peter, Can any man forbid water . . . . And he commanded them to be baptized" (Acts 10:16-18).

2. THE BIBLE TEACHES THAT BAPTISM IS CONNECTED TO GREAT EVENTS

A. Baptism is associated with obedience. "Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to (the river of) Jordan . . . . to be baptized of him (John) . . And Jesus answering, said unto him (John) Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness," or, all righteous requirements without baptism, you cannot. "And all the people that heard him (John) . . . . justified God, being baptized . . . But the Pharisees and the lawyers rejected the counsel of God . . . being not baptized of him" (Luke 7:29, 30). You however honest you are, are also rejecting God's counsel if you prefer a dry suit of clothes to obedience. "The like figure whereunto, even baptism, doth also now save us" (1 Pet. 3:21).

A good brother preacher of a denomination pretty well known said once to me when we were discussing the mode: "It is not washing the filth of the flesh away anyway; it is only the answer of a good conscience." To which I replied: "You sprinkle for baptism. You could sprinkle for a thousand years at the rate of a thousand a day, and no one would ever accuse you of washing the filth of the flesh away, for who would ever associate the sprinkling of a few drops of water on the head with the idea of washing filth from the whole body? But Peter's mode was such that he was accused of it. So his mode and yours are entirely different. His baptism could touch the filth of the body (if there was any) or they would not have accused him. Your baptism does nothing of the kind." To this he replied nothing. How could he?

B. It is connected with sin's forgiveness. Do not get frightened! Read: "Repent, and be baptized . . . for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38). "Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins" (Acts 22:16). I had nothing to do with putting this into the Bible.

C. It is associated with the gift of the Spirit (Acts 2:38).

D. It is divinely connected to salvation (Mark 16:16; 1 Pet. 3:21).

E. It is associated with the new birth (John 3:5).

F. It has to do with putting on Christ (Gal. 3:26, 27).

G. It is associated with the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus our Lord (Rom. 6:4; Col. 2:12). Can you say that much for sprinkling or pouring? If so, where are the chapter and verse? And where is the resemblance between sprinkling and a burial service?

3. THE NEW TESTAMENT EXAMPLES OF BAPTISM

A. Jesus (Matt. 3:13-16).

B. Jesus' followers (John 4:1).

C. Jesus told his disciples to baptize (Matt. 28:19).

D. The three thousand (Acts 2:41). How baptize so many? Chrysostem immersed 3000 in Constantinople April 16th, 404; and Paulinus 10000 in the River Swale, and 3000 in the Pool of Harbottle, Northumberland, A. D. 627; and Vladimir ordered thousands to be immersed all in one day, and Dr. Clough baptized 2222 in Ongole, India, in 1878, and only six assisted in the ordinance. Peter with eleven assistants could surely do as well.

E. The Samaritans (Acts 8:5-12).

F. The Eunuch of Ethiopia (Acts 8:38).

G. Saul of Tarsus (Acts 9:17, 18). Conybeare and Howson say that "he (Saul) was baptized, and the rivers of Damascus became more to him than all the waters of Judah."

H. Cornelius (Acts 10:1, 2,24-27, 44, 46-48).

I. Lydia (Acts 16:14-16).

J. The Philippian jailor (Acts 16:32, 33). How immerse the jailor? Prof. Stuart says that "such a possibility (as baptizing him in the prison baths) cannot be denied"; while Conybeare and Howson say it was in the River Gaggitas.

K. The Corinthians (Acts 18:8).

L. The Ephesians (Acts 19:1-5).

4. MODE OF BAPTISM AS FOUND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

A. Water (John 1:33); Acts 10:47).

B. Much water (John 3:23).

C. Coming to the water (Matt. 3:13; Acts 8:36).

D. Going down to the water (Acts 8:38).

E. The act is that of a burial and resurrection (Rom. 6:4; Col. 2:12).

F. Coming out of the water (Acts 8:5). Prof. Stuart says, "The passages which refer to immersion are so numerous that it would take a little volume merely to recite them," and he quotes fourteen.

Those who sprinkle need the first of these six essential things—water. That is all they need. They would make a ridiculous thing out of their sprinkling or pouring if they used the other five! But apostles insisted on using all these six essentials. "But the cold weather." Well what of it? Russia is colder than America and they practice it and have for centuries. To hide behind Ezek. 36:25 is not creditable, because this "clear water" is the "water of purifying" and in it are ashes or the blood of a dove (Num. 8:7). Do sprinklers mix the water they use in that way? Not a single case can be found in the Bible where an adult or a child was sprinkled for baptism. "Household" baptism will not assist sprinklers, for the household was preached to, and believed, and helped the saints by their ministry of comfort, necessities, etc. (Acts 16:32-34; 18:38; 1 Cor. 16:15). Babies do not do that! The first case of sprinkling was A. D. 250 by Novatian (see Eusebius, Nicean Fathers, Vol. I., p. 288). The first law against immersion was made A. D. 754 by Pope Stephen II.

You reply: "But I am a Catholic." Well supposing you are. Brenner (their great commentator) says: "For thirteen hundred years was baptism an immersion of the person under water." Another says: "I am a Methodist." Well, Wesley (the great Methodist) says: "Buried with him by baptism—alluding to the ancient manner of baptizing by immersion" (comments on Rom. 6). Yet again a third says: "I am a Lutheran." Luther, however says: "Baptism is a Greek word and may be translated 'immerse.' I would have those who are to be baptized altogether dipped." A fourth replies: "I am an Episcopalian." Well the great Episcopalian commentator (Wall) says: "Immersion was in all probability the way in which our blessed Savior and for certain the way by which the ancient Christians received their baptism." Another says: "I am a Presbyterian." But that gives no relief, for John Calvin the great Presbyterian, said: "The word 'baptize' signifies to immerse. It is certain that immersion was the practice of the primitive church."

Says Stoudza, a native Greek: "The verb 'baptize' has only one meaning. It signifies to plunge. Baptism and immersion are identical. To say baptism by sprinkling is as if one would say immersion by sprinkling."

"Baptizo" is a Greek word and "baptize" and "baptism" are not translations of it, but transliterations. The prominent Greek fathers (Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Origen and Chrysostom) said it meant "to plunge," "to immerse," "to overwhelm." The prominent Latin fathers (Tertullian, Cyprian and Jerome) so interpreted it. All the leading lexicographers so say (Sophecles, Scaplua, Robinson, Dunbar, Cremar, and Liddell and Scott, and others). Says Moses Stuart (a very able Congregationalist): "All critics and lexicographers of any note are agreed on this," etc. Prominent thinkers (such as Mosheim, Neander., Schaff, Cardinal Gibbons, Dean Stanley, Philip Schaff) say so. Says Dr. Wall the able Episcopalian commentator) : "One can not but pity the weak endeavor of such pedobaptists as would maintain the negative of it." etc.

Is Redemption Unconditional ?

IT 'IS argued by Universalists and others that since redemption is universal and unconditional it guarantees to every one therefore a resurrection and ultimate salvation. With such we differ. We believe the redemption wrought out by Christ Jesus, though offered to all, is predicated strictly upon conditions. Those who comply with those conditions will be "redeemed" while those who do not will be among the lost.

Hebrews 2:9; 1 Timothy 2:6 are often quoted by Universalists to sustain their views; but do they ? These readings declare he "tasted death for every man" and gave "himself (in death as) a ransom for all," which we firmly believe. But the benefits to be derived from the blood of Christ though shed for all is, as we have said, hinged strictly upon conditions. If we have faith in his blood (Rom. 3:25) and are baptized into his death (Rom. 6:3), thus getting into the "blood of Jesus," it will "cleanse us from all sins" (1 John 1:7) and get us into the "everlasting covenant" (Heb. 13: 20). Since Jesus was thus "brought from the dead by the everlasting covenant," so we when inducted into the blood, if we trample not under foot the Son of God (Heb. 10:26, 29), will derive the same benefits that he derived, namely an immortal resurrection.

Now Matt. 26:28 declares his "blood is shed . . . for the remission of sins." But is this remission unconditional ? No ! One must believe, repent, and be baptized before they will receive remission of sins (Acts 2:38). If one does not do these, will he derive any benefits from the blood ? Have the heathen done these things ? Have the wicked ? To our mind being "ransomed," "redeemed," and "saved" all stand for the same idea. If all are "ransomed" then all will one day have "everlast- joy" and their "sorrow" will forever "flee away" (Isa. 35:10). What could this be but universal salvation ?

Romans 5:18 is often quoted to prove universal unconditional redemption. But does it ? That the "free gift" is the "ransom" is shown by 1 Tim. 2:6, so it is the "ransom" which "came upon all men (eis) with a view to justification of (eternal) life." This "ransom" we have clearly shown is strictly conditional though made "for all." Those of the "all men" who comply with the conditions will receive "justification of (eternal) life"; or in other words, be ransomed with "everlasting joy" (Isa. 35:10). Verse 17 and 21 of Romans 5 show the "life" in verse 18 of that chapter to be "eternal life." Those who turn the "ransom" or "free gift" down will get "damnation" and the "second death" (Mark 16:16) ; while those who die ignorane of it are neither "saved" nor "damned." They simply sleep forever (Jer. 51:57).

That redemption is to be experienced by no one but the saints is taught by Hosea 13:14. Paul applied this passage to the risen saints (1 Cor. 15: 55). This being true, the "ransom" is thus restricted to the saints. But God will redeem my soul from the power of sheol (Psa. 49:15) Redemption here is limited to the class that David belonged to, for this same chapter declares of some, "They are abandoned like sheep to sheol, death shall feed on them" (verse 14). If "they are abandoned like sheep to sheol" are they not as eternally gone as the "sheep" are ? Then he adds, drawing a sharp contrast, "But God will redeem my soul (not every soul) from the power of the grave."

1 Peter 1:18 teaches that "redeemed" are those who no longer follow their "vain conversation received by tradition." Verse 19 declares this redemption was secured by the "blood of Christ." Then, if we ever get "redemption" we must obtain it "through faith in his blood" and by being baptized into his death"—blood (Rom. 6:3). Being thus in his blood, that "blood" will cleanse us from all (past) sins" (1 John 1:7). Being thus "washed white in the blood of the Lamb" (Rev. 7:14) they constitute, if they "abide in him" (1John 2:6), the "redeemed" who "shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:9, 10). Now if the redemption by Christ is unconditional, then when John sees all the 'redeemed" (Rev. 5:9, 10) he should see the heathen and the wicked too. But no ; he sees the good only. They then are the ones who experience redemption and salvation. They are the "ransomed of the Lord," and they alone are to have "everlasting joy" (Isa. 35:10). If all men are "ransomed'" then all will have "everlasting joy." Since the good only shall experience "everlasting joy," then only they are "ransomed" or "redeemed by the blood of Christ" and saved.

JOHN R. FISK, Jr.

Did Christ Arise in a Material Body ?

THE ANSWER to this question is most important at the present time, as many false prophets have come, who declare that Jesus arose in what they call a spirit-body, an invisible body, having neither flesh nor bones, but all spirit. And as proof of this, they teach that Christ, after he was risen, came through a closed door without making a hole in it. The instance to which they refer is found in John 20:19, and again another in verse 26. But in neither of these instances is it said that Jesus came through the door without opening it. The true teachers say, "We speak that we do KNOW, and bear witness of that we have SEEN" (John 3·11). The Scripture simply says the door was shut, and that Jesus appeared in their midst. But could not Christ have opened the door and held their perception that they should not know it ? Or, with the same power by which he made loaves and fishes, could he not have removed the physical elements of the door, come through, and then have restored the physical elements of the door, all without their knowing it ? If an angel could open the door of a prison house and let Peter through, and then re-lock and re-bolt it after him, without the keepers and the watchmen knowing it (Acts 5:19, 23; 12:4-11), surely the Christ of God could do the same for his material and resurrected body. How ridiculous and sinful to suppose he created a material body for the occasion, only to deceive !

But as Jesus appeared in their midst, did he tell them he was now a spirit-being, having left his material body in the grave or somewhere to see corruption, or, perchance, to be embalmed as a relic ? and was he invisible ? Before answering this, let us go back with the disciples to the tomb. Behold the stone is rolled away. But this was not necessary to let a ghost out ! A ghost could go through a closed door, without making even an enlargement of the keyhole, could even come through a stone. But to let the body of the true Christ through, the stone was rolled away.

Now, with Peter and John, let us look into the tomb. Here indeed are "the linen cloths lying, and the napkin that was upon his head not lying with the linen cloths, but rolled up in a place by itself" (John 20:6, 7), but we cannot find the material body (Luke 24:23, 24). His body, his real body, had certainly come out of the tomb. But did he drag it out and throw it away, to deceive the disciples and make them think it had risen ? Let us see. Luke tells us that as the disciples were gathered together that evening, as Jesus appeared in their midst, "they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they beheld a spirit." Now, if their supposition be true, then indeed Jesus was a spirit-being after his resurrection and had forsaken his maerial body. But reader, are suppositions always well founded and certain, especially during times of fear and excitement ? How did Jesus reply to this suppositions ? Did he say, Yes, my disceples, I am now a spirit-being, invisible, having forsaken my former body of flesh and bones ? or how did he answer them ? This is an all important question, and now let us hear the real answer of Christ, and let it also be a rebuke to false prophets : "Why are ye troubled ? and wherefore do IMAGINATIONS arise in your hearts ? See my hands and my feet, that it is I MYSELF : handle me, and see ; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye behold me having. And when he had said this, he showed them his hands and his feet. And while they still disbelieved for joy, and wondered, he said unto them : Have ye here anything to eat ? And they gave him a piece of broiled fish. And he took it and did eat before them" (Luke 24:37-43). Now, my reader, choose between the false prophets and the Christ.

Did Christ deceive them ? If so, when did they find out this deception ? Perhaps a doubting Thomas will help them out, for he was not with them at this time, and when the other disciples said to him, "We have SEEN the Lord," he replied, "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and put my hand into his side, I will not believe" (John 20:24, 25). Now, let us give Thomas a chance to expose the deception, if it be a deception. Surely if Jesus' body had not risen, Thomas can expose the phantom by this test. Well, the Scripture tells us that after eight days Jesus again appeared to his disciples, and we may remark, this time they were not affrighted, nor did they think they beheld a ghost, although the door was shut the same as in the previous instance. Compare John 20:19, which is the same as Luke 24:36-37, with John 20:26. Now Thomas is here. But Jesus does not shun investigation but saith to Thomas : "Reach hither thy finger, and SEE my hands ; and reach thy hand, and put it into my side." The evidence was overwhelming. The marvellous truth demonstrated to the wondering eyes of even a doubting Thomas, and, awed as in the very presence of God, he exclaimed, "My Lord and my God !" Thus he acknowledged from the depth of his heart, in the presence of God, that he KNEW FOR SURE that Jesus' body had arisen from the dead (John 20:27-29).

Now, let us go on a little farther. Peter says something about this very thing on the day of Pentecost, and he but spoke for all the disciples. Had they found out the deception by this time? Surely they had every opportunity to have done so, for we read that Jesus had been with them for forty days after his resurrection (Acts 1:3). Here, then, is the testimony of Peter, speaking under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, on the day of Pentecost:

"Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God unto you by powers and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, even as ye yourselves know; him being delivered up by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye by the hand of men without the law did crucify and slay: whom God raised up, having loosed the pangs of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it. For David said concerning him: I beheld the Lord always before my face; for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved: therefore my heart was glad, and my tongue rejoiced: moreover my FLESH also shall dwell in hope: because thou wilt not LEAVE my soul in hades, neither wilt thou give thine Holy One to see CORRUPTION. Thou madest known unto me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of gladness in thy presence (Psa. 16). Brethren, I may say unto you freely of the patriarch David, that he both died and was buried, and his tomb is with us unto this day. Being therefore a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, he would set one upon his throne; he foreseeing spake of the resurrection of the Christ, that neither was he left in hades, NOR DID HIS FLESH SEE CORRUPTION. THIS JESUS did God raise up, whereof we are all witnesses" (Acts 2:22-32).

Now, reader, what shall we say to these things? Here is the testimony of the apostles and prophets and the Holy Spirit, that Jesus arose in a real body of flesh. Nothing but a lying spirit and a false prophet would, or could, teach otherwise.

It is vain that these false teachers try to make 2 Cor. 5:16 lend support to their doctrine. That passage, with the next verse, reads, "Wherefore we henceforth know no man according to flesh: even though we have known Christ according to the flesh, yet now we know no longer (according to the flesh). Wherefore if any one is in Christ it is a new creation: the old things are passed away; behold they are become new." Now, if this passage teaches that Christ has no flesh, it equally teaches that no one else has flesh. The passage evidently means that it is not because a man is of a certain fleshly descent that he may have the favors of God, even though the Savior of men was himself of Jewish descent—we must all be begotten from the Holy Spirit, as Christ was. But when begotten again we do not lose our body of flesh and bones, but, quite to the contrary, our flesh dwells in hope, even as our Savior's did, for the Scripture saith we shall have bodies like his glori fied body (Phil. 3:21), which as we have seen, was composed of flesh and bones.

It is true that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God (1 Cor. 15:50). for the flesh when sustained by the blood is mortal and the kingdom of God is eternal; but we must notice that in the context of this passage, just below it, the Scripture saith that "this corruptible must be clothed in incorruption, and this mortal must be clothed in immortality" (1 Cor. 15:53). How shall this be? The answer is found in Rom. 8:11: "If the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwelleth in you, he that raised up Christ Jesus from the dead shall quicken also your mortal bodies through his spirit which dwelleth in you." Hence, while flesh sustained by blood cannot inherit the kingdom, flesh sustained by the spirit of God shall most certainly inherit the kingdom. And this flesh and bone body will be a spritual body, that is, a body quickened and sustained by the spirit of God. These so called spirit bodies that some talk about are only the dreamings and imaginations of carnal minds, leavened with the spirit of spiritualism. Christ arose in his real, material body of flesh and bones, and he is thus alive in the power of an endless life. Demons deny it, but the word and the Spirit declare it.—Ezra D. Gifford.

No Retreat

B LESTER F. REYNOLDS in "The Crisis" for June 8th, tells of a day when, presumably, in our late great war, the two nearly matched armies, fighting stubbornly for hours, could do nothing on either side that would ensure victory. If a few feet or yards were gained, they were soon lost; and this was repeated many times until at last he says in one sector of the great line, the aggressiveness formed a wedge and drove hard against the defenders. Before the fierce onslaught was over, the line of the defenders was shattered, the men faltered, fell back and were ready to flee.

"Thinking that orderly retreat would be better than utter rout, the colonel commanding that section of the line, called the drummer boy and said, 'Boy, beat the retreat.' The boy looked up in his commander's face and said, 'You do not mean it, Colonel, not the retreat?'

"Yes, boy; I tell you beat the retreat."

"'I never learned how,' replied the boy, then added quickly, 'but I can beat a charge that will wake the dead.'"

"'Never learned how?' responded the Colonel. 'What kind of a boy are you to be in the army—can't beat a retreat. Beat a charge then; something has got to be done!'"

"The drummer boy was quick to respond. The call for advance rolled along the line; the beaten shattered forces rallied, formed a counter wedge, and under the inspiration of the drummer boy's charge they broke through the enemy's line, planted their banner on the ramparts of the fort beyond, and won a great victory that day—all because there was one drummer boy who never learned how to beat a retreat."

Dear brothers and sisters, consider me that drummer boy, if you please: I never learned how to turn back. My Master never taught me to beat a fleeing tune. The music and words he gave me were all for the forward march, we must go forward, never back.

But our cause, though a little like that of the defenders in the above described battle, was not quite so bad, and can be won against all obstacles, if the counter wedge that has been formed keep making the charge against the foe.

I was reading about Asa, Judah's good king, yesterday morning. He had an army counting the men of Benjamin of 500,000, and the Ethiopians came against him with a million; and Asa, when the battle had been "set in array in the valley of Zephatha at Mansha," "cried unto the Lord his God, and said, Lord it is nothing with thee to help whether with many or with them that have no power; help us, O Lord our God, for we rest on thee and in thy name we go against this great multitude. O Lord, thou art our God. Let not man prevail against us. And the Lord smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah, when they in their trouble did turn unto the Lord God of Israel."

The lesson is obvious. We have turned to God in our trouble. Asa's prayer is our prayer, and a like victory will be ours, if we keep on working and giving in the fear of the Lord and in love and gratitude to him, who died for you on Calvary.

You cannot forget him; you cannot forget that he gave his all for you. Other men have suffered and died, but not to win eternal life for you. Give on, give freely, and thank God that he has given you the precious privilege of giving to hurry along the time "when guided right with holy light shall overthrow the wrong."

RIGHT BACK AT HIM

Father O'Hanlon, of Dubuque, was passing down the street, when he noticed one of his parishoners digging in a trench, while a little way off stood a swarthy superintendent.

"Well Pat," said his reverence, "how do you like having an Italian boss?"

Pat looked up, and mopping his brow, replied: "Faith, Father, how do ye loike havin' one yerself?"—Boston Transcript.

When brought face to face with the question of yielding all to divine control we find we have ambitions—many of them. When in response to the wooings of the Holy Spirit the heart breathes out its eternal "yes," all the energy of desire is concentrated and there is but one ambition—Christ. Then we begin to understand why the privilege of knowing Christ was to Paul so far beyond and above all earthly considerations and with the same goal in view we also "forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before . . . press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

If right ignore criticism-; if wrong, change without delay.

Many a hoarded dollar has gone to help win the war which some yasr ago God asked for to win souls. If th money had been given then the war might have bene averted. We know war is not the fruit of love.

A Paper Representing The Church of God

The Restoration of Israel and Zionism

Israelitish Signs Indicating the Ending of Gentile and Catholic Supremacy

THE PASSION for social justice dominant in the world today, has established itself in the heart of Zionism and served to elevate and broaden its appeals. Zionism draws its strength from Jewish history and tradition; but deeply imbedded in Jewish tradition in Jewish law as well as in the teachings of the prophets, is this same passion for social justice. It is no mere coincidence, therefore, that the spirits who were set afire by the idea of the Jewish Commonwealth in Palestine, have brought to the task also the determination that this Commonwealth shall be pleasing and acceptable to the God of justice and righteousness, to the God of their fathers. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, to the God who hates the oppressor of the poor and the widow and the orphan. It is no mere coincidence that the Zionists of America, for example, should have adopted at their convention in June 1918, the following principles to form the basis of the Jewish Commonwealth in Palestine:

In 1897 the first Zionist Congress at Basle defined the object of Zionism to be the establishment of a publicly recognized and legally secured homeland for the Jewish people in Palestine. The recent declaration of Great Britain, France, Italy and others of the allied democratic states has established the public recognition of the Jewish national home as an International fact.

Therefore, we desire to affirm anew the principles which have guided the Zionist movement since it's inception, and which were the foundations laid down by our lawgivers and prophets for the ancient Jewish state, and were the inspiration of the living Jewish law embodied in the traditions of two thousand years of exile.

1st. We declare for political and civil equality irrespective of race, sex or faith of all the inhabitants of the land.

2nd. To insure in the Jewish national home in Palestine equality of opportunity, we favor a policy which with due regard to existing rights shall tend to establish the ownership and control of the land and of all the national resources and of all public utilities by the whole people.

3rd. All land owned or controlled by the whole people, should be leased on such conditions as will ensure the fullest opportunity for development and continuity of possession.

4th. The co-operative principle, should be applied as far as possible in the organization of all agricultural, industrial, commercial and financial undertakings.

5th. The fiscal policy shall be framed so as to protect the people from the evils of the land speculation and from every other form of financial oppression.

6th. The system of free public instruction which is to be established should embrace all the grades and departments of education.

7th. The medium of public instruction shall be Hebrew, the national language of the Jewish people.

The practical application of these principles in a Jewish Commonwealth the whole world, no doubt, will watch with eagerness.

We have described what Zionism is; now let's see what it is not. It is not a movement to remove all the Jews of the world compulsory to Palestine. In the first place, there are about 14,000,000 Jews, and Palestine would only accommodate about one-third of that number. There are more than 3,000,000 in America alone, which is more than one-fifth of all the Jews in the world—a number larger than that comprised within any other country, except the Russian empire. Owing to cruel persecution in Russia and Rumania multitudes of Jews have immigrated to the United States, and New York has a larger Jewish population than any other city in the world.

In the second place, it is not a movement to compel anyone to go to Palestine. It is essentially a movement to give the Jews more, not less, freedom. It aims to enable the Jews to exercise the same right now exercised by practically every other people in the world: to live at their option either in the lands of their fathers or in some other country; a right which members of small nations as well as large—Greek, Bulgarian, Serbian, Polish or Belgian may now exercise as fully as Germans or English. Zionism seems to establish in Palestine, for such Jews as choose to go and remain there, and for their descendants, a legally secured home, where they may live together and lead a Jewish life where they may expect ultimately to constitute a majority of the population, and may look forward to what we call home rule. The other Jews in all lands will, without a doubt, for their own sakes, help them achieve their aim. The Zionists seek to establish this home in Palestine because they are convinced that the undying longing of Jews for Palestine is a fact of deepest significance ;that it is a manifestation in the struggle for existence by an ancient people which have established their right to live-- a people whose 3000 years of civilization has produced a faith, culture and individuality which enable them to contribute largely in the future, as they have in the past, to the advance of civilization; and that is not a right merely, but a duty of the Jewish nationality to survive and develop. They believe that there only, can Jewish life be fully protected from the forces of disintegration; that there alone can the Jewish spirit reach its full and natural development; and that by securing for those Jews who wish to settle in Palestine the opportunity to do so, not only those Jews, but all other Jews will be benfited, and that the long perplexing Jewish problem will at last find solution.

Oregon [illegible]

They believe that to accomplish this, it is not necessary that the Jewish population of Palestine be large as compared with the whole number of Jews in the world; for throughout centuries when the Jewish influnce was greatest, during the Persion, the Greek, and the Roman empires, only a relatively small part of the Jews lived in Palestine; and only a small part of the Jews (about 50,000) returned from Babylon when the temple was rebuilt. Since the destruction of the temple, nearly two thousand years ago, the longing for Palestine has been ever present with the Jew. It was a hope of a return to the land of his fathers that buoyed up the Jew amidst persecution, and for the realization of which the devout ever prayed. Until a generation ago that was a hope merely; a wish piously prayed for, but not as yet worked for.

The following is copied from "Israel's Watchman:"

The following are the very words used by the Jews at their wailing place at the foot of the great wall built by Solomon. Their special meeting is Friday afternoon. These words are sung and recited in chorus between the Rabbi and the people:

Rabbi—For the palace that has been laid waste.
People—We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi—For the temple that has been destroyed.
People—We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi—For the walls that have been demolished,
People—We have remained solitary and weep,
Rabbi—For our sovereignty that has passed away,
People—We have remained solitary and weep,
Rabbi—For our great men who have perished,
People—We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi—For our priesthood whose office has fallen,
People—We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi—For our kings who have been despised,
People—We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi—Jehovah, we beseech thee to have pity on Zion,
People—Assemble the children of Jerusalem.
People—Hasten, Oh hasten, Savior of Zion.
People—Speak in favor of Zion.
Rabbi—May beauty and majesty encompass Zion,
People—Return in pity towards Jerusalem.
Rabbi—May royalty soon be established in Zion.
People—Comfort those that mourn in Jerusalem,
Rabbi—May peace and happiness enter into Zion.
People—May the rod of power be raised in Jerusalem.

Now notice how these words agree with David's in Psa. 122:6: "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosepr that love thee; 51:18: "Do good in thy good pleasure unto Zion: build thou the walls of Jerusalem"; 126: "Turn again our captivity, O Lord, as the stream in the south."

Lord, save thine Israel,
Restore thine Israel
  To their own land;
Let Jacob's seed return,
While scattered now they mourn,
Oh! give them soon their own
  Beloved land.

They have been long cast off,
Long been the Gentile scoff,
  Without a home;
Their land by strangers trod,
Their tears bedew its sod,
Oh, they have felt the rod,
  Now bring them home.

Oh! end the "little while,"
And on them shed thy smile
  And loving words;
Remember Abraham's seed,
And make him great indeed,
As long ago decreed,
  O righteous Lord.

All hail the glorious day,
When through the heavenly way,
  Lo he shall come;
While they who pierced him wail;
His presence shall not fail;
Saints see your Lord prevail;
  Great Savior come.

Now Zion build again,
Erect thy temple's fame
  In glory bright;
The palace city raise
Where men shall give thee praise,
And nations learn thy ways,
  By truths' own light.

Discussion on Universal Salvation

Debate on the Attributes of God: Alpha Affirms; Omega Denies

ALPHA'S FOURTH SPEECH

FELLOW CITIZENS:

YOUR ATTENTION has been invited, for a considerable length of time to the arguments of my opponent. There has been considerable ingenuity manifested I admit; but I am glad the audience have the power to discriminate between real argument and sophistry. His effort during his whole speech, has been, as any one can see, not so much to elicit truth, as to assail my a priori logic. How he has succeeded, the audience, of course, will judge for themselves, let me say what I would. I have no disposition, neither should I take time if I had, to follow him through all his whys and wherefores, dilemmas and trilemmas, etc., for this would not only be calling my attention from my regular congeries of arguments which I intend to present in this discussion, but it would also be laying a tax upon the patience of my audience, which I, by no means, would feel justifiable in demanding, and to which, doubtless, they would not submit.

The principal argument in my last speech, which was predicated upon the justice of God, has not so much as been noticed. I proved, as the audience will recollect that God's justice demands the salvation of all men, and that neither man nor the devil can cheat him out of that which justly belongs to him. I showed, also, that his glory could not be diminshed, and that the declarative glory of God demands universal holiness and obedience. Will this demand ever be satisfied? But where is the justice of endless damnation? It is a solemn farce; and the God of orthodoxy is a cruel and vindictive tyrant, rather than a God of justice. He may ask me why God permits men to suffer at all? I answer, that they may know how to appreciate happiness. It is only by contrast that we can know when we are happy; and we could not enjoy the pleasure of holiness and purity had we never committed sin. This accounts also, for the present existence of sin and suffering.

My opponent's arguments from first to last, are predicated upon the assumption, that man is a moral agent; or, in other words, that he is in possession of a free will. This is one of the greatest errors of the present age. The doctrine of free agency is argued at full length by Brother Rogers: and we are all compelled to come to the same conclusion he did, namely: that the notion of a free will is nothing but a chimera. Hence, whatever we are to do, as involuntary instruments in the hands of God, we will certainty and inevitably do, and the idea of volition, choosing, refusing, etc., are all out of the question. Man acts, only as he is acted upon, by decree, by motive, or some other moving cause. Where, then, is the justice or propriety of eternal punishment?

I will here introduce an argument, which, if correct, will shiver my friend's doctrine to atoms. I refer to the true and scriptural design of punishment, which is everywhere in the Bible proved to be for the express benefit of the punished. God chastises for no other purpose than for our good -- in order to a reformation. This I shall abundantly prove hereafter; but, I have only time here to introduce the matter for further consideration.

I will now offer another argument, and carry it out legitimately, which is of itself sufficient to establish Uunivesalism without the assistance of any other It is predicated upon the acknowledged position that "GOD IS LOVE." I intend here to borrow the language of this argument, principally from Brother Skinner, in his debate with A Campbell. I am not at all ashamed to borrow from that source, as it is the best upon that subject I have ever heard.

God is infinitely good. David says: "The Lord is good unto all, and his tender mercies are over all his works" (Psa. 145:9). Solomon says: "Thou lovest all the things that are, and abhorest nothing which thou hast made; for never wouldst thou have made anything to have hated it.' Christ says: "There is none good but one, that is God" (Mark 10:18). John says: "God is love" (1 John 4:8, 16). Thus the very essence, the whole nature of God, is benevolence, goodness, or love. Dr. A. Clark has well remarked: "God is never said in the Scriptures to be justice, or patience, or holiness; but he is frequently in one form or other, said to be love." When, therefore, we say, God is infinitely wise, powerful, just, merciful, etc., we do but say: Love is infinitely wise, powerful, just merciful, etc., these being but the modifications and attributes of infinite love. When we say all are created, controlled, governed and disposed by God, we do but say: Love creates, controls, governs and disposes of all. The goodness or love of God being coeval, and coextensive with his wisdom, and even with his existence, must extend to every being he has ever created, and attend that being through every period of his existence. If there be in the universe of intelligencies a solitary being to whom God is not good, then his benevolence, being limited to less than the whole is not infinite. But as all allow that his goodness is infinite, no other legitimate conclusion can follow, but that his love extends to every being he has ever created. When we say God is omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent, it is but the omnipotence, omniscience, and omnipresence of infinite love. And as love is omnipresent, we cannot go therefore where infinite love does not exist. No man can go beyond, or get out of the reach of infinite goodness. All mankind, not excepting saints nor sinners every intelligent creature throughout the vast and unbounded empire of Jehovah, are forever surrounded, encircled, upheld, above, around, beneath, in life, in death, in time present, and time to come, by Almighty, and infinite goodness, and by all pervading, and omnipresent love! Moreover, God being love, he cannot exist aside from his nature; and if God should ever cease to love the sinner, that moment he ceases to be God, for God is love! From all this I draw the unavoidable conclusion: universal salvation! Can my opponent dispose of this argument? I am perfectly willing he should try it; and will therefore take my seat, without introducing any other matter, to call his attention from this, for fear he will have some excuse for not taking it up.

Omega's reply to above arguments will be published next week.

"Jesus and the Resurrection"

IT IS perplexing to read the conflicting opinions and beliefs when the old question, "If a man die shall he live again?" is discussed. On the one side, we have men like Haeckel and others who decisively answer the question in the negative. "No," they say, "the grave is his end for ever." On the other side, we have Christendom evading the question. These say, Man does not die; "there is no death," what seems death is only transition, and therefore Job's question is quite foolish. He may have thought that man died, and in his darkness his enquiry may be excusable; but WE have more light; the real man, the personality, does not have to "live again" as Job imagined, because the real man never dies; he is immortal. Thus is Job disposed of. We see here the first party going beyond Job, who left the queston open. Throughout that sublime poem never is a scintillation of a hope for a future. "There is hope of a tree," he says, "if it be cut down that it will sprout again . . . but man dieth and wasteth away. Yea, man giveth up the ghost and where is he?" If Job knew what WE are supposed to know, what a stupid deceitful question that was. If he did not know so important a fact in man's nature, his reputation stands in danger.

The second party, the great WE, in thus ignoring Job altogether, has yet the burden of overcoming the united testimony of all Old Testament writers, who, ever and over again insist on the awful fact, that the responsible, intelligent, personality called man, does die. Job is not singular in that statement; Moses and Isaiah, David and all the other writers echo and re-echo the same thing.

FALSE PREMISE

In opposition to all this united testimony, we have Christendom cherishing the idea that the real responsible man is an "immortal soul," and as such is not subject to death, except in some metaphorical way. They concede that even in the New Testament no direct corroboration of this metaphysical speculation can be found. Even the expression "your immortal soul," so often mouthed by preachers to round up a period is not once found in the whole Bible! Is it conceivable that the company of writers of the 66 books embracing a period of 4132 years, would not have, at least once, even by chance, mentioned the immortal soul, when that soul according to We, is the responsible and better part of man?

Turning to the New Testament, we read precisely what Job had declared "Death passed upon all men." "It is appointed unto men once to die." "As by man came death," etc. In some quarters it is seriously maintained that the whole Bible assumes the immortality of man This is surely the pleadings of despair, and I refrain from discussing that point. In other quarters it is more gravely maintained, that the belief in the immortality of the soul is fundamental to Christianity. I deny it.

Were the statement formulated thus: "The belief in a future state is fundamental to Christianity." It would have the advantage of being both scriptural and true. But anyone can see that this is altogether a different thing from the metaphysical speculations of the immortality of the soul.

CONFUSING ISSUES

It is lamentable how the best advocates of immortal soulism confuse this metaphysical speculation with future state. "There is in every man," say they, "an anxiety, hope or dread of life beyond the grave." Granted! but does this feeling argue one bit for the immortality of the soul? Nay, raher is it not a strong natural evidence that there is to be a future state, a future reckoning, that the grave does not end all, as Haeckel and Edison vainly imagine?

But how is this future state to be attained? If a man die, how is he to live again? The Lord answers through Paul, "There shall be a resurrection of the DEAD, both of the just and the unjust."

This habitual blundering by many writers in confusing "future life" with "immortal soul" has been the fruitful cause of much plausible and many fallacious conclusions. There was a time (and even now with the densely ignorant) when a Christian man was shunned if not excommunicated, because he repudiated Plato's philosophical nonsense.

FAITH AND HOPE

I agree with Haeckel and his school of ultra-materialists just so far; with them I repudiate immortal soulism. They allow the dead to remain in the grave, so do I; but they leave them there for ever. I redeem them from thence, when the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise.

So Paul the Christian materialist, bases Christ's whole redemptive scheme on the fact of death. He answers Job's very sane and very pertinent question not by ignoring (but through Jesus raising the dead). As by a man came death, by a man also came the resurrection of the dead. So utterly does the apostle ignore the Platonic fiction that he stakes his future life solely on the resurrection. "If the dead rise not, let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die."

THE CHURCHES ASTRAY

Why has Christendom gone so sadly astray from the simplicity of this hope? Because the dogma blinds it. Plato has supplanted Paul! So completely has the church lost sight of the resurrection of the dead, that the doctrine is very rarely preached on, and then only to make confusion worse confounded. The church has even laid unlawful hands and altered the scriptural expression, "resurrection of the DEAD" to "resurrection of the BODY," an idea so utterly materialistic and grotesque that no one can seriously hold it. Indeed, if anyone just thinks, he will soon see that a belief in the soul's immortality must destroy the doctrine of resurrection altogether. It is impossible to hold both. This is why the church has transferred the scriptural expression and pretends to make believe that a resurrection of the BODY is to happen at some remote period in the world's history. One has only to ask, What for? to explode the delusion.

"Jesus" is preached, and I thank God he is, but "Jesus and the resurrection" are never preached because the gospel of the resurrection is in startling and violent opposition to Plato's figments; but Plato reigns!

Nebraska Conference Notice

The 37th annual conference of the Church of God in Nebraska will meet again in Omaha near August 20th. The exact date will be given later. The usual provisions will be made for those attending. We are truly living in the time of the end, and I would like to urge all who possibly can to attend. We need the help of each other to keep us faithful to the end. Brethren, don't let anything hinder you. The evil days are upon us, and Christ is soon coming. We are expecting a good attendance and a feast of good things.

CARRIE M. FREE, Sec.

Behold He Comes!

Behold, he comes, the shing One!
  Like lightning from afar;
His glorious body clearly seen,
  The bright and morning Star.

No ghost, nor spirit-phantom he,
  In hidden manner come;
But as the robber, unawares,
  Springs quickly on the dumb.

For as the snare so quickly springs,
  And seizes thoughtless game;
So Christ most suddenly appears
  To those who sleep in shame.

And as the snare when once 'tis sprung,
  Or robber seizes men,
So Christ most visible shall be
  To even carnal ken.

The blessed One who came in flesh,
  And rose immortal too,
In flesh most surely shall descend
  Before our wondering view.

We'll wait and watch and hope till then,
  And follow Scripture true;
Nor ghostly spirits shall we heed,
  But onward e'er pursue.

And when the Son of Man shall come
  To raise his own to life,
Our mortal bodies, quickened new,
  Shall rest beyond the strife.

Editorial

Will Christ Come in a Material Body, Openly, Visibly?

MOST CERTAINLY, if Christ arose in a body of flesh and bones, which could be seen and handled, and ascended to heaven in this body, he will come again, not in another body, but in the same body, openly and visibly. So what we have just said on this subject ought to be sufficient affirmative answer to this question, and it is; but, that we may help some who may have further difficulteis, we will add other proofs.

Please turn with me to 2 John 7, R. V., "For many deceivers are gone forth into the world, even they that confess not that Jesus Christ cometh in the flesh. This is the deceiver and the antichrist." Those who have ears to hear do not require any comments on this plain and important language. It not only teaches that Christ is coming in person, in his own body, a body of FLESH; but it also declares that they are deceivers who teach otherwise, and that they are teaching the doctrine of the deceiver and the antichrist. If the reader will read on to the 10th verse, he will see that we are forbidden to receive such, or to give them greeting.

Jesus was not invisible when he was going up into heaven, and the Scripture saith: "This same Jesus, who was received up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye beheld him going into heaven" (Acts 1:11). In harmony with this Rev. 1:7 testifies, "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they who pierced him." Rev. 6:16 is another testimony, declaring that when Jesus comes the sinners of this world shall seek to hide from the "FACE of him that sitteth upon the throne." Now, let those who wish to teach the coming or presence of an immaterial ghost follow their invisible phantom and keep on harvesting their elect, but let them know that the elect of God according to the truth cannot follow them. They are welcome to their own.

It is true the Scripture saith that Christ is "coming as a thief (a robber)"); but if this means that Christ will come in an invisible manner, then no eye shall see him, whereas the Scripture saith, "Every eye shall see him" (Rev. 1:7), even to sinners and tribes of the earth (Rev. 6:16; Matt. 25:30), for "then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and THEY SHALL SEE the Son of Man coming on the clouds of heaven with power and great glory"; see him, not in the secret chambers of a medium, nor shall they by some man's doctrine declare him to be abroad somewhere in the wilderness of this world in an invisible spirit-body, but they shall see him "ON THE CLOUDS OF HEAVEN," with every EYE, not as a power and glory, but "With power and glory."

We are warned against those who teach a secret and invisible coming of the Lord. Hear the great Teacher and Prophet on this subject: "Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is the Christ, or here; believe not. For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders: so as to lead astray, if possible, even the elect. Behold I have told you beforehand. If therefore they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the wilderness; go not forth; Behold, he is in the inner chamber; believe not. For as the lightning cometh forth from the east, and is seen even unto the west: so shall be the coming of the Son of Man" (Matt. 24:23-27). The word "lightning" in this passage is a correct rendering of the original, and it does not mean sunrising as our opponents falsely translate it. Nothing can be so visible, so glaringly visible, as lightning, especially when it "cometh forth from the east. and is seen even unto the west." "Even so shall the coming of the Son of Man be." "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God" (1 Thess. 4:16). Beware then of the false prophets who teach a false Christ and declare his coming to be secret and his presence invisible.

Let us now consider how Jesus shall come as a thief, a robber. The Scripture does not say that he shall be as a thief after he has come, but only that he shall come as a thief, a robber. A robber indeed comes unawares, and so shall Jesus come to this wicked world and to false prophets, for "when they are saying, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall in no wise escape" (1 Thess. 5:3). But concerning Christians the Scripture says: "But ye brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief (a robber): for ye are the sons of light, and sons of the day; so then let us enot sleep, as do the rest, but let us watch and be sober" (1 Thess. 5:4-6). Jesus is not therefore to come to the elect unawares, unlooked for, that is, robber-like. for they are watching and waiting. Those who believe he has come already have ceased to watch and wait for his coming, and are therefore no longer to be classed among the virgins. They have given heed to doctrines of demons, and have left the true Adventist hope. They are surely unfaithful and foolish, and their teaching is only some of the darkness of antichrist that precedes the rising of the Son of Righteousness. They may say, "Christ has come," and " the rusrrection has passed already," but the true watchers hear the Son of Man saying, "Believe it not." They may say, "Christ is a spirit, without flesh, and has come in this spirit-body," but we hear the raised Jesus say, "A spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me having"; and the angels said this same Jesus shall come again. They may reject the inheritance of the earth for themselves, but we rejoice in being heirs according to the promise (Matt. 5:5). They may teach that Christ left his body in the grave to see corruption, and even forsook his soul and became a spirit being, but we prefer the Scripture that says his soul was not left in hades nor did his body see corruption. They may say that he has come and is here as a thief, but the Scripture saith he is coming as a thief, a robber, and, we are led to say, coming as a robber even to them, that is, unawares, unlooked for, for having believed that he is already here, they have ceased to watch and wait for his coming. May these words be blessed of God to awaken some of them who are not yet fully joined to their idols and delussions.—EZRA D. GIFFORD.

"Prove Me Now"

H. W. TRUE, Pastor of The Crisis Adventist Church at Schnectady, N, Y., says: "When we received the notice of amount assigned us as our quota of the Forward Movement Budget, we supposed that it was for the five years program, but later learned it was only for this year. This dampened our ardour and we said as Israel did, 'We are not able.' However even after the council had decided that we could not raise the amount we could not get away from the word 'Prove me now.' Our position" he says, "reminded us of the experience of Israel under Joshua when he led them to Jericho: we felt that our opportunity was as formidable to us, as the walls of Jericho were to them."

But "the experience of Israel was taken into the mid-week prayer meeting and likened to our experience, and there was not a dissenting voice against making a drive for the money. And when the drive had been made, and the returns were in, counting pledges and cash paid and all, they found they had raised their appointment of $1090! And later $30 more came into their hands."

It is a fine illustration of how God blesses those who keep step with him. He wants us as followers of the Man of Calvary to keep moving forward, laying hold with intense and earnest endeavor of every opportunity that comes within our reach, for wider, more extended influence. Would Jesus have said, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," if the way was not going to be opened and the means provided for the accomplishment for such a thing? Surely not! The opportunity has come to us for doing wider, better service for Jesus through our paper: let us hasten to seize it. We do not want to be robbers, even of our fellow men, much less robbers of God, "who has given us richly all things to enjoy."

He has loaned us so much; do we begrudge him the little he asks in return, especially when that little is to be used in making this earth a paradise of beauty, peace and joy?

No earthly lord treats his creditors in such ungracious fashion. "Prove him." Bring all your tithes into his storehouse. If this were nationally done in love of the Lord and in obedience to him, devouring locusts, army worms, the wevil, the Hessian fly, the potato and squash bug, the fruit tree scale, the blight, the rust would disappear, and a blessing be poured out that there would not be room to receive. A blessing does come to those who obey, always, and evermore. They that fear the Lord lack not any good thing.

Why God Has Permitted Sin

SERMON NOTES BY J. H. THOMAS

ALL NATIONS however barbarous, when they bow down to stocks and stones, acknowledge their belief in a supreme power. Paul declares to the Romans that all men are without excuse because his eternal power and godhead may be seen and understood by the things that are made. The poet hath well said:

Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod,
And waits to see it push away the clod.
He trusts in God.

Not only is this so, but in all dispensations, and in all nations that have attained to civilization at least, we find the same acknowledgement, the same expression and admiration of the wisdom, beneficience, and munificience of the Creator.

Is it any wonder, then, that thinking minds believing in such an all-wise and good God, should ask the question, "why has God permitted sin with its long trail of evils to enter this world." Is it any wonder that atheists should sneeringly say, if there be a God why all this sin and misery?

To those unenlightened in the truth the problem is most difficult, yes, impossible to solve. The Rev. Dr. Sloane of Pittsburg in answer to the question says, "I don't know. It is an insoluable problem to the human mind, and if any man can answer it, he can more than the sages and philosophers of centuries did."

Had Dr. Sloane and the sages and philosophers of the past better understood the scriptural teaching in relation to the nature of man, they might have been able to solve the problem. But I contend that no man, be he sage or philosopher, that believes man was created immortal, can answer the question. But when we understand, as the Bible teaches, that man was created mortal, that immortality is a gift of God to those who develop a godly character, we are better prepared to understand why sin exists.

The answer in a word is, it is unavoidable.

This will appear as we go forward.

From many passages we find that the purpose of God was that the earth should be filled with his glory; in other words, that it should become the abode of an immortal race of men, who should be all righteous or godly in character and in nature, like himself; all sons or children of God.

Therefore he has said, "The heavens, even the heavens are the Lord's; but the earth hath he given to the children of men." Isaiah says, "I created the earth not in vain, I made it to be inhabited;" but as we see, those that inhabit it forever are to be righteous or godly in character.

Now it will be seen at a glance that man could not be created with a character either good or bad; that must be the result of his life. Your child has no character. It is good or bad as his life shall be.

What do we find them? According to the Bible account man was created capable of understanding and obeying law in order that he might develop a righteous character and so become worthy of immortality.

If then it was possible for him to obey law, it was possible for him to disobey law. This we find he did do. He disobeyed the law of God which was sin.

This is a solution of the problem of sin. It will, we think, be readily seen that it was necessary for the all wise and beneficent Creator to permit sin or not create man, provided man should sin; for it was impossible that he be created with the power to do right and without the power to do wrong; with the power to obey law and without the power to disobey law; for the same power that would enable him to obey, would enable him to disobey. Illustrate—take up and lay down; heat and cold

.We find therefore that man was created with the power or capacity to do right by obeying law and so developing a righteous character which God could honor with the gift of immortality; not being so created he had, on the other hand, the power or capacity to do the wrong by being disobedient and so introduce sin and death into the world. This he did do, therefore says Paul, "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin" (Rom. 5:12).

God in his wisdom knew this would be the result, and so when he had created Adam and given him a command to keep or obey he warned him of the consequences of disobedience, by saying to him, "'In the day thou eatest thereof dying thou shalt surely die." Nevertheless man disregarded the warning and sought rather to satisfy his fleshly longings than obey his Maker. We now behold the consequences: sin, misery, and death are our heritage in Adam.

We are not to blame for this any more than our child is (explain); yet we suffer in consequence just as our child suffers for what we entail upon it. But we need not go down to death on that account. A new way of life opened up.

Being delivered from Adamic death we stand on our own account; if we perish it will be for our own transgressions, not for Adam's, we may rest assured of that.

But to return: It was not only necessary that man should be created so that he would sin by disobeying or righteous by obeying; but it was necessary that he be created mortal in order that he might obtain immortality which is an endowment of God to those who work righteousness. Immortality or deathlessness belongs only to God, or those who are godly. It was impossible then that Adam could have been created immortal, as he could not be godly until he had walked in obedience to God. This is clearly taught in various passages. In the account given of his creation we are told that he had access to the tree of life which, had he continued to walk in obedience, and partaken of it, would caused him to live forever, or in other words made him immortal.

It is also said of Jesus that he was made perfect through suffering. Again, the apostle says he was tempted in all points as we are. Again, Paul says, "For in that he himself hath suffered, being tried, he is able to succour them that are tried." By this we see that not only Adam the first was put on trial, but also Adam the second. Though he was the Son of God yet the apostle says, "he learned obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."

Jesus therefore in order to obtain eternal life or immortality had to be obedient even unto death. It must be clearly seen then, we think that those only can be immortal who develop a righteous character. But Paul to the Corinthians sets the question at rest. He says Christ was made a life giving spirit. "Howbeit" he adds "that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural. The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven. As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

By this we see why sin is with us, it was a necessity, that man if made at all should be of the earth and subject to trial in order to develope a righteous character worthy of immortality! but he failed and so brought sin and death into the world.

But the question is often asked could not the Creator have made man so that he could not have sinned? We answer no; for the word "man" is expressive of a being so made that he had the capacity to obey or not obey, as we have already shown. Just as liquid is expressive of that which can flow or run. Take away the capacity to flow and you destroy the liquid, just so [illegible] the power or capacity to obey or disobey and you take away the man.

The all-wise Creator could have created a being that could not have sinned, but that being could not have been a man. In fact he did create many such beings or creatures, the bear, the lion, the [illegible] [illegible] created that they cannot sin. Why? Because they have not the capacity to obey or disobey God's laws; therefore they cannot sin, for sin is transgression of law.

A beast can sin against man but not against God. Explain.

Man therefore if created incapable of sinning, would not only have been incapable of becoming righteous, but have been like the lion or elephant, a mere animal, wanting in the intellectual and moral faculties which make him in the image of God capable of understanding his will and obeying it.

Every ordinary mind with proper reflection should be able to see why sin is permitted. The all-wise Creator had a purpose in creating the world. He tells us what it was, viz. that he created the earth to be inhabited and to fill it with his glory; that the knowledge of the Lord should cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. To accomplish this purpose it was necessary to create a being upon the earth with the capacity to understand his will and obey his law. This being he called man. But as we have shown the man disobeyed and brought sin and death into the world.

But has God's purpose changed or failed? Nay, verily, he still declares that the earth shall be filled with his glory. He therefore permits sinners to live, and sin to exist and all its attendant train of evils for a time, until there can be developed from the race of men a people who love God, love his law, and will obey him.

When this is done, he will put the rulership of this world into their hands and they will rule the world in righteousness and subdue it. Under their righteous rule all nations shall be blessed. In the language of the Psalmist: "The wicked shall perish and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume, into smoke shall they consume away; but the righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever."

Having accomplished his purpose, sin and evil will exist no more; for the tabernacle of God will be with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. Behold I make all things new." Then in the language of Paul, the whole creation that now groaneth and travaileth in pain together shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

The revelator closes this sublime picture of the glorious future in these words: "He that overcometh shall inherit all these things, I will be his God and he shall be my son." To inherit then is to overcome. To overcome is to know what God requires and do it. God requires us to believe in his Son. Explain.

Christ and His Kingdom

WHO IS Jesus Christ? He is the Son of God (1 John 1:3-7; 4:15; 5:5, 10, 12). How old is he? 1921 years old. Where was he born? In Bethlehem of Judea (Matt. 2:1). Who were his parents? His Father was the only God. Jesus was born by the will of God, by the means of the Holy Spirit (John 1:13;3:16-18). His mother was the Virgin Mary (Isa. 7:14; Luke1: 27-31). Where is Jesus now? In heaven at the right hand of his Father (Acts 7:55, 56; Matt. 26: 64). When did he go to heaven? 1888 years age, 40 days after he was raised from the dead, when he was 33 years old (Acts 1:11). Could he go to heaven before he was raied from the dead? No. Could he redeem man before his death, burial and resurrection? No. Why? Because God had made a law that the life of the flesh is in the blood (Lev. 17:11). Paul says without shedding of blood is no remission (Heb. 9:22). Was Christ's blood shed? Yes. Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things but with the precious blood of Christ (1 Pet. 1:18, 19). The blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son cleanseth us from all sin (1 John 1:7). When was Christ's blood shed? When he was 33 years old, when he was nailed to the cross. Therefore the Scriptures teach that Jesus Christ actually died. How long was he dead? Three days. What did he die for? He died for our sins 1 Cor. 15:3). He died for the ungodly (Rom. 5:6) He died to redeem us (Tit. 2: 14). What was the object of his death? To put away sin by the sacrifice of himself (Heb. 9:26-28). He bore our sins in his own body on the tree (1 Pet. 2:24). Could the son of Joseph redeem us? No! Joseph was a man and a sinner, and his son would be a sinner. Why was Christ not a sinner? Because he was born of God, and God cannot sin, neither can his only begotten Son sin, because God's seed was in him (1 John 3:5-9). What is he doing in heaven? He is a mediator between God and man (Tim. 2:5; Heb. 8:6; 9:15; 12:24). Is any one from earth going to heaven to be with him? No. Yet a little while I am with you and then I go unto him that sent me, and where I am thither ye cannot come (John 7:34-36; 8:21, 22). Is Jesus to stay in heaven forever? No. Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven (Acts 1:9-11).

When is he coming back to earth? Of that day and hour knoweth no man (Matt. 24:36, 39, 42, 44; 25:13). According to prophecy, the time is very, very near. How will he come? As a thief in the night (1 Thess. 5:24; Rev. 3:3). What does he come for? To receive the kingdom promised to him. When was the kingdom promised? 1921 years B. C. To whom was the promise made? Abraham. And in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed, and unto thy seed will I give this land (Gen. 12:3-7; 13:15-17; 15:18: 17:7, 8). To what place on earth does he come? Jerusalem. How long will he stay? Forever and ever. Is the promise made to Abraham fulfilled in Christ? Yes. Christ is the promised seed (Gal. 3:16) Is any one else to live with him forever? Yes. All that are Christ's at his coming (1 Cor. 15:23). Who are Christ's? All that have been baptized into Chrst (Gal. 3:27). Who can be baptized in Christ? All that believe in the gospel of the kingdom of God as preached by Christ and Paul (Mark 1:14; Gal. 1:8). What relation does that make one to Abraham? If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to promise (Gal. 3:29) Where are those that are Christ's? Sleeping in their graves here on earth (John 5:28).

Can this promise that God made to Abraham and his seed be fulfilled while the heirs are sleeping in their graves? No. What must take place to fulfill God's promise? All that are Christ's must be raised from their graves and made immortal! How is this to done? The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then those who are alive (in Christ) shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and ever be with the Lord (1 Thess. 4: 16, 17). Now in this resurrection scene what promise of God is fulfilled? The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord (Rom. 6:23). This is the object of Christ's coming, and no one has nor can have "eternal life" until he comes to raise the dead. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory (Col. 3:4). What does Christ do with the risen saints? He takes them to some place prepared, to hide them, until the indignation be overpast, while he punishes the inhabitants for their iniquity (Isa. 26:20, 21). Have we any account of anyone else being raised when Christ comes? No. All in Christ are raised and the living in Christ changed in a moment (1 Cor. 15:51-53). This class is the blessed and holy and are to reign with Christ 1,000 years (Rev. 20:4-7).

Everlasting Punishment

THE LORD will one day say to the lost: "These shall go away into everlasting punishment" (Matt. 25:41, 46). But the term "punishment" ,from the Greek "kolasin") in the English does not determine the nature of the said puishment. It does say something about the duration thereof, for it is made the antithesis of "everlasting life," which is given the saints at that time. But when we go into it a little deeper, we shall find that the Greek word "kolasin" does indicate the nature of the punishment, when used in its primary sense. The word comes from the verb "kalazo," and it means excision. Thus the Savior teaches penal excision. This is the "punishment" for the finally unsaved.

Donnegan gives the following for "kolasis:" "The act of clipping or pruning—generally restriction; restraint; reproof; check; chastisement. lit. and met. Punishment. Subst. of "kolazo." He gives the meaning of kolazo as: "Properly to cut off, or take from, to curtail, clip, or mutilate; hence to prune—generally to chastise. lit. and met. to correct, to check; to moderate—to chide; to rebuke; to punish—to keep back; to hinder, repress or restrain; to keep down."

Note 1. Not a word does he say about "torment"! Why? 2. He gives secondary meanings, it is true, indicating punishment. But that is a secondary meaning and not the primary one. 3. His primary meaning of the verb kalazo is "to cut off." When the wicked go not into "life" and the righteous do, are not the wicked in and by that very act "cut off"? The translators followed the secondary meaning and translated the word "punishment" instead of excision. But what is a rule which we may always safely follow? This: a secondary meaning must not be employed where the primary meaning is admissable. Especially is this true of the case under consideration, because the "life" is antithetical to the excision spoken of. If the bad are not allowed to "enter into life," then they are "cut off" from it.

While the English word "punishment" does not show the contrast the Savior had in mind, the Greek word does. It is "life" for the good, and cutting off—or eternal excision—for the wicked.

Had the Lord meant "torment" he could have used "basanos." Why did he not? A writer says: "Critics translate the term thus: 'These shall go away into everlasting excision, but the righteous into life eternal'—the wicked losing just what the saints obtain, or are forever cut off from the promised life."

If Jesus had wished to teach the awful and horrible doctrine of "eternal torment" for the finally unsaved, he could have used terms and words to set the matter at rest. But he did not do it. The facts are that his conception of our Father who is in heaven, and the conception of modern hell-fire and brimstone teachers, differ as much as day and night.

Not a word of proof can be found in the whole Bible to sustain that awful and blasphemous and God-dishonoring doctrine of endless torment for the finally and irrevocably unsaved.—J. J. Schaumberg, Editor of "Messiah's Advocate."

Discussion on Universal Salvation

Debate on the Attributes of God: Alpha Affirms; Omega Denies

OMEGA,S FOURTH SPEECH

RESPECTED AUDIENCE:

I KNOW not why it is that my worthy friend is almost in every speech insinuating that I will feign some excuse for getting rid of grappling with his arguments; I have felt no such disposition, and am perfectly willing the people should judge for themselves, whether I do or do not come up to the work. Whilst this argument is fresh in your minds I will examine into its merits. But, in the first place, I will offset it, by giving another, built upon the same principle.

God is infinite in vengeance. Paul says, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord" (Rom. 12:19). David says, "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little" (Psa. 2:12). The apostle says, "Indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man" (Rom. 2:9). "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God" (Heb. 10:31). And finally says Paul, "Our God is a consuming fire" (Heb. 12:39). Thus the very essence, the whole nature of God, is indignation, vengeance, or a consuming fire. God is never said in the Scriptures to be justice, patience, or holiness; but he is frequently in one form or other said to be a consuming fire. When, therefore we say, God is infinitely wise, jealous, powerful, and just, we do but say that a consuming fire is infinitely wise, jealous, powerful and just—these being but modifications and attributes of infinite vengeance. When we say all are created, controlled, governed and disposed by God; we do but say that a consuming fire creates controls, governs, and disposes of all. The indignation or vengeance of God, being co-eval and co-extensive with his wisdom, and even with his existence, must extend to every being he has ever created, and attend that being through every period of his existence. If there be in the universe of intelligences a solitary being to whom God is not angry; then his vengeance, being limited to less than the whole, is not infinite. But as all must allow that his vengeance is infinite, no other legitimate conclusion can follow, but that his vengeance extends to every creature he has ever created! When we say God is omnipotent, omniscient, and omnipresent; it is but the omnipotence, omniscience, and omnipresence of an infinite consuming fire. And as God is a consuming fire, and at the same time omnipresent, we cannot go, therefore, where infinite vengeance does not exist. No man can go beyond, or get out of the reach of infinite wrath. All mankind, not excepting saints or sinners—every intelligent creature, throughout the vast and unbounded dominions of Jehovah, are forever surrounded, encircled, upheld, above, around, beneath, in life, in death, in time present, and time to come, by Almighty and infinite vengeance; and by an all-pervading and omnipresent consuming fire. Moreover, God being a consuming fire, he cannot exist aside from his nature; and if he should ever cease to burn the sinner, that moment he ceases to be God, for God is a consuming fire! From all this I draw the logical and unavoidable conclusion—universal damnaation!

I might leave the matter here, as being satisfactorily met and set aside; but I have a few remarks to make upon this declaration, "God is love." The truth is, neither love nor consuming fire is the nature of God; but they are each his character towards men under different circumstances. Truth and holiness form the very essence and nature of God. Hence the spirit of God is called the "Spirit of holiness" (Rom. 1:4) and the "Spirit of truth" (John 15:26); but it is never called the spirit of love. But let us inquire, if the fact that God is love, will prove universal salvation, admitting love to be his nature. Not exactly: for the text speaks of him in the present tense: "God IS love," not, will be love at the resurrection; but he is as much love now, as he ever will be; and he is just as omnipresent now, as he ever will be: and yet, notwithstanding all this, sinners can live in the midst of this infinite and omnipresent love, guilty, miserable, and condemned; and finally die in their sins, and go into eternity, a monument of corruption, dissapation, and depravity, and all the time too, enveloped and encircled in the embraces of infinite love! The proposition that God is love does not appear to help the cause of my opponent, any more than if God was something else: for if men can be guilty, miserable, and damned threescore and ten years, and all the time surrounded with omnipresent and infinite love, they may, on the same principle, be damned to all eternity, notwithstanding his infinite love: and more than that they actually will be, as certain as God is immutable! God is not, however, omnipresent, in the sense in which he is love, any more than omnipresent in the sense in which he is a consuming fire.

I remarked a minute ago that these phrases represent the character of God towards men in different relations, or under different circumstances. "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself" (2 Cor. 5:19), and in this sense only are we to understand the proposition, "God is love." Those who are in Christ, are in love; for the apostle informs us that the love of God "is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Rom. 8:39). If the love of God was omnipresent, or if God was omnipresent in the sense in which he is love, then there would be no such a thing possible as getting out of the love of God: and this being true there would be no sense in the apostle's injunction, "Keep yourselves in the love of God" (Jude 21), for let a man do the very worst he could, he would still be in the love of God, and could not possibly get out! But those who were out of Christ, the apostle says, are without hope and "without God in the world" (Eph. 2:12), that is, they are without God, in the sense in which he is love! But in the verse preceding this proof-text, the apostle shows that God is not omnipresent in the sense in which he is here speaking, for he says: "Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God" (verse 15), and if God was omnipresent in this sense, he would dwell in God, whether he confessed that Jesus was the Christ or not! And in the very verse, where this proof-text occurs the apostle pointedly teaches that God is not omnipreset, in the sense in which he is love. "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God" (verse 16). Do all men dwell in love? How about those who are "haters of God"? ((Rom. 1.39). Do they dwell in love? If not, then they do not dwell in God, and hence God, in this sense, is not omnipresent; and all the argument of my opponent on this text, is not worth a straw.

I shall now attend to my friend's argument, based upon the justice of God. He was mistaken when he said that I charged him with denying the attribute of justice. I did say, however, that he had no faith in the attribute of vengeance; and his arguments so far, have proved the assertion to be correct: for he has not as yet noticed it, although I have repeatedly made it a point in this discussion.

He thinks that the justice of God requires universal salvation. I grant it. But, says he, God cannot be cheated, or wronged out of anything that is justly his due. I deny it. The service of all men in this life, justly and rightfully belongs to God; yet hundreds and thosands serve the devil with all their might as long as they live! Now one of two things my opponent is compelled to admit, either, that God is unjustly wronged, or cheated out of the service of those who serve the devil; or, that the devil has a perfect right to it! If he says that God is wronged out of their service, in this world, then he may be wronged out of their service in the next world also, and to all eternity! But if he prefer the ground, that the devil has a just right to their services in this world, he may on the same principle hold on to his claim in the next! Truth is , the justice of God just as much demands the salvation of all men here, as hereafter; and if man or the devil can violate those claims here, they can also be violated in the world to come.

But he still argues, that the ultimate glory of God requires universal salvation, and that his glory cannot be diminshed. But here again he errs, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God. Is not the salvation of all men as necessary, and desirable at one time as another? If so, would it not just as much enhance the declarative glory of God, for all men to be saved in time as in eternity? Most assuredly, yet all men are not saved, and consequently God's glory comes minus so much. My friend appears to be entirely ignorant of the fact that men can add to or diminish from the glory of God, by their conduct here in time. Paul, in describing the character of the world, before the first advent of Christ, gives us to understand, that "all had sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23). In another place he enjoins: "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Cor. 10:31) Thus we may come short of the glory of God, by serving the devil, and thus diminish his glory; or we may add to, or enhance his glory, by acknowledging his authority in all our works and actions. Now if man has it in his power to diminish the glory of God, to the amount of the worth of his own salvation and services, for the term of three score and ten years, may he not also, on the same principle, diminish the same amount forever?

But where is the justice, my opponent asks, in endless damnation? Before he asks this question, let him compute by figures, and tell the enormity of one sin committed against an infinite God, and the exact amount of heinousness attached to a whole life time, spent in rebellion against Jehovah; and then let him make an estimate, and report to this audience the exact amount of punishment necessary to satisfy the demands of infinite justice! Let this all be done, before he talks of injustice and cruelty.

But, he argues that man is not a moral, responsible agent; and that consequently he is not to blame, for his conduct, in the least! Yet he contends that God has, and does punish men severely for their sins: where then, permit me to ask, is the justice of this? Can my opponent justify the character of God, in such a course of conduct? First make man a mere machine, to act, only as he is acted upon; second, decree that he should commit sin, which he is compelled to commit, and, which he is no more to blame for, than for being created, or than the wagon wheel for turning, when the horses move; and in the third place, lay the blame all on poor innocent, unoffending man; the victim of his vindictive cruelty, and beat him with many stripes, for nothing under the heavens but for doing that which he could not possibly have avoided? Talking of a God of cruelty—a vindictive Tyrant comes with an exceeding poor grace from one who believes with my friend. But he may endeavor to save appearances, by the plea that God will not, according to his doctrine, inflict eternal punishment. But it is a principle established, not only in the ordinary affairs of life, but also in the Bible, that he who will be unjust in little will also be unjust in much. And as the God of Universalism punishes one innocent man, and that too unjustly, of course, he may, on the same principle, punish all innocent men unjustly, and that too with endless damnation, which is only an extension of the same cruel principle! None therefore, according to my opponent's doctrine, are safe under the control of the Almighty

But my friend urges, that it is necessary for men to be sinful and miserable, in order that they may apreciate holiness and happiness! This doctrine of contrast, will get him into a difficulty, I fear, of which he was not at all aware. In the first place, it holds out the strongest conceivable motives to prompt men to commit sin. The more a man sins, the greater will be the contrast, and of course the more happiness he will enjoy when he becomes holy, and he shall certainly be made holy, no mistake about it, let him do the very worst he can! But, says my friend, the more he will be punished too! So much the better; for, the greater will be the contrast, and he will consequently be the happier, when the punishment ceases. The base and profligate drunkard, would delight to lay up treasures in heaven in this way, and would swallow down my friend's doctrine with greedines. Yes, the drunker he can get, the sweeter will be his holiness, when he wakes up sober in heaven! And if he should happen to get punished, by having his heel bruised, or his head broken in some of his drunken frolics, yet he has all assurance from the doctrine of my opponent, that it will work out for him a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory! That dissipated wretch, under the conviction that his doctrine is true, and with the glorious anticipation which it inspires in his bloated soul, could bear with the patience of Job, all his bangs and bruises, with the absolute certainty of being so much the happier when it was all over with! Like the man who beat his shin with a stick, that it might feel the better when it was done hurting! My opponent told us a while ago, that the reason why he preached against orthodoxy, was to do away with the tormenting fear of hell. But why does he not act consistently, and let them be tormented with the fear of hell as much as possible, that the contrast may be so much the greater, and their bliss so much the sweeter, when they come to find out their mistake!

But there is another difficulty attending this doctrine of contrast, and that is this. Those abominable characters, after being in heaven a few thousand years, will forget how they felt when they were drunk; and will need what some folks call a memory-refresher, in order to keep up the happiness of contrast! Universalism testifies, it will be like fire, that will go out, unless occasionally renewed by fresh supplies of fuel! Hence the necessity of having a distillery in heaven, that the glory and blessedness of contrast may eternally be enjoyed!

But it is impossible, says my opponent, for any one to appreciate the bliss of holiness and purity who never committed sin. Then the holy angels of God, are undoubtedly the most unhappy beings in the universe, for they have never sinned, and I doubt very much, whether they have ever been sick; so that they are entirely destitute of the happiness of contrast. If my opponent's doctrine be true, it is the duty of every true phlanthropist to start into operation the most successful schemes of wickedness; and to encourage the most abominable, and diabolical practices, both by precept and example, which are the best calculated to decoy men into the sinks of curruption! The more inquisitorial racks, faggots, and engines of torture are put into successful operation, against all ranks and conditions of men, the more estatic will be their bliss, when it comes to be overruled for their good, and they get into the full fruition of the blessedness of contrast! Here then we leave this argument and the audience can do with it as they choose.

But stop, says my opponent, they have no choice in the matter, for they are not moral agents! Sure enough! But let us look at this matter for a few minutes. I expected, since the commencement of this discussion, that the infidelity of his doctrine would leak out, and here we have it in all its naked ugliness. He admitted a while ago, that sin was not according to the will of God; and that the doctrine of God decreeing sin, that he might overrule it for the good of the sinner, necessarily led to absurdities, which he had seen years ago! But now he has got back into the old absurd doctrine, that man is nothing but a machine, and can do nothing except what he is compelled to do by the immutable decree of Jehovah. I wonder how many times more he will back out, and back into these absurdities, before this discussion comes to a close. In denying a free will, or moral agency, he denies the whole revelation of God; for I assert, fearless of contradiction, that there is not a chapter in the Bible but that holds man as a voluntary, responsible agent -- praise-worthy or blame-worthy as his conduct is good or bad. If the doctrine of free will, or moral agency, be not correct, then no moral responsibility can be required of man, and the idea of blame and praise is out of the question altogether. But if such a thing as volition, freedom of action, choice, blame, or praise, is to be found taught in the Bible, then the doctrine of my opponent is but the quintescence of Deism! Let us examine: "I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing; therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live" (Deut. 30:19). "And Moses said unto Aaron, choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek" (Exod. 17:9). "Go and say unto David, thus saith the Lord, I offer thee three things: choose thee one of them, that I may do it unto thee" (2 Sam. 24:12). "Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me, for that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the Lord" (Prov. 1:28, 29). "Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter: because when I called ye did not answer; when I spake ye did not hear, but did evil before mine eyes, and did choose that wherein I delighted not" (Isa. 65:12). "By faith, Moses, when he was come to years refused to be called the son of Pharoah's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season" (Heb. 11:24, 25). So much for choosing and refusing, which is but a tithe of the testimony upon that subject. Again: "When Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed" (Gal. 2:11). "Who shall also confirm unto you the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. 1:8). "Do all things without mummurings and disputings, that ye may be blameless and harmless" (Phil. 2:15). "Now I praise you brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the ordinances as I deliver them to you" (1 Cor. 11:2). "What shall I say? Shall I praise you in this? I praise you not" (Ib. 22). Paul asks, "Am I not free?" (1 Cor. 9:1). My opponent answers, No; you are a machine; you can move, only as you are acted upon and you have just about as much volition as a water-wheel. Christ says: "Freely ye have received, frely give" (Matt. 10:8). My friend says: ye can do nothing freely; for ye are all involuntary agents. Once more: "I make a decree that all they of the people of Israel, and of the priests and Levites, in my realm, which are minded of their own FREE WILL to go up to Jerusalem, go up with thee" (Ezra 7:13). My opponent replies: God has made a decree, that no man shall have a free will any more than a big stone, after it gets to rolling: and that the notion of a free will is all a chimera!

From the foregoing testimonies we discover that man possesses volition—the power of choosing refusing: that he is responsible for his actions —that he is blamed when he does wrong, and praised when he does right, and that he possesses a free will; none of which can be the case, if the doctrine my opponent is endeavoring to inculcate, be the truth. Every phrase made use of, to express the freedom of the Almighty, in choosing and refusing as also applied to man; and thus God himself, is proved to be a creature of fate, by the very same logic, which my opponent applies to man! Not only so, but God in the creation, has stamped a lie upon the conscience of every man in the universe. There is no man, in any nation, but has a consciousness of certain actions being right, and others wrong; and that he could have done differently from what he did, and will acknowledge himself to blame for doing as he did.

This all goes to stamp infidelity upon the doctrine of my opponent. But the genuineness of a doctrine, may always be known by its inevitable and necessary tendency. And if my opponent will but look at the natural tendency of his doctrine, for a few minutes, methinks he will give it to the moles and bats. Suppose he should go to the legislature of this state, and succeed in convincing that body of the truth of his doctrine—that man was not a moral responsible agent, and that he was not in the least accountable for his conduct, from the fact that he was merely a machine, acting only as he is acted upon; and hence, that it was cruel to enact laws to inflict punishment of any kind upon wicked men, as they were not at all to blame for their actions. The legislature, of course, breaks open the penitentiary, and annuls all laws, relative to crime of any kind, and enacts a statute that no man shall be punished for any offence he may commit. Suppose, in the next place, my opponent should call a general convention of all the cut-throats, horse-thieves, blacklegs, murderers, robbers, gamblers, drunkards, liars, profane swearers, debauchers, scoundrels, and villians in the state, and congregate them upon some vast theatre; and then let him commence lecturing them upon his most salutary doctrine of no responsibility, and prove to their entire conviction that they were not to blame for anything they might do—let them murder, cheat, steal, lie, get drunk, blaspheme the name of God, or do what they would, they had no choice in the matter, were only doing that which God had decreed, and which they were no more to blame for, than for having an existence! And not only so, but that no human punishment should be inflicted upon them; and as for divine punishment there was not the least danger—their sins should all be over-ruled for their good; and they would only be the happier in heaven, when they come to experience the wonderful contrast that would exist. Then fancy, fellow-citizens, a thousand hungry wolves, let loose among a flock of as many sheep, and if your imaginations are sufficiently acute, you have an imperfect minature representation of the wretchedness and devastation which would follow in the train at the breaking up of my opponent's convention. Such is, unquestionably, the natural and perniciuos tendency, and such the inevitable and ruinous result of this dogma of fatality, whereever it obtains to the extent supposed. Having now noticed the principal arguments in my opponent's last speech, I shall again hear what he can add in response.

Nebraska Conference

THE 37th Annual Conference of the Church of God in Nebraska will meet in Omaha Aug. 14 to 21.

Sleeping rooms will be furnished free, meals 3 for 50 cents.

Brother Austin, Brother Hammond and Brother Adams will be the speakers, while other able instructors will give Bible lessons. Those coming from a distance write Brother Adams at 3944 Hartman Ave., Omaha, Neb., telling him what road and time they will get in Omaha, and they will be met by committee wearing a badge so they will be known. The exact location has not been decided upon. Brethren, make an effort to attend this meeting. You will be benefitted and your presence will benefit others. We are living in the time of the end, and all need the help and encouragement of each other. Cut this piece out and bring with you to aid your memory.

CARRIE M. FREE, Sec.

Help the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Saul and Paul

WE HAD the lesson this morning from 2 Samuel first chapter. We went briefly over the history of Saul, who was little in his own eyes at the beginning when chosen of God to be king, but became great in his own eyes, and as a result he was rejected from being king. We compared this with the history of Saul of Tarsus, who began high in his own and his countrymen's estimation, and ended in humility and self-abasement. The first Saul represents or illustrates the crucifixion of the true godly spirit and the development of the proclivities of the flesh, the exaltation of the flesh; while the second Saul illustrates the crucifixion of the flesh and the exaltation and development of the new man of the spirit.

The name "Saul" means "sought after" When Saul of Tarsus began his career he was sought after and exalted by men; but when he was struck blind on the way to Damascus he humbled himself, and changed his name to "Paul," which means 'little," which was in keeping with Paul's opinion of himself and with his life of abasement and glorification of God. Christ was the greatest example of this spirit of humility. He made himself of no reputation; he suffered poverty and distress and every indignity that God might be exalted.

DEAR BRETHREN:

Brother Griffiths writes me that he is pushing the work on "Good Company" as speedily as possible, and will very soon have it ready for distribution. I have sent mailing list of eastern subscribers to Brother Griffiths and they will be supplied direct from the office. I regret the delay which seems to be unavoidable and thank brethren who sent in remittances, months ago, for their patience. Should any fail to receive book in reasonable time after issuance, please notify me and I will duplicate order.

EDITOR RESTITUTION:

HAVING RECEIVED a number of letters asking what plans I have for the future and urging me to continue the Lord's work in North Carolina and South Carolina, I wish to answer through your paper. Also I wish to assure the many friends whose letters of sympathy I have been unable to answer that their kind loving letters to us in our great trial are appreciated. As to my plans for the future, I have made none. We are trying to keep the family together and hope with the Lord's help to do so. We have arranged to get Sister Cook to come and stay with the children the last of July and first of August so we can visit Gallimore Gap, N. C. for a meeting from July 28 to Aug. 1. At present we do not see how we can visit South Carolina this summer. However we are anxious to do all we can in these states.

Your brother,

J. H. ANDERSON.

BROTHER BROWN:

In The Restitution of June 28th, page 285, you have a long letter upon "the Two Adams." The text at heading of letter shows the difference in the two Adams, and a great contrast surely. Then the writer refers to Paul's declaration in Rom. 5:14, and says,Paul here discloses that Adam is a figure of him that was to come. Now my understanding of this text is this: "Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses (even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression), who is a figure of him that was to come." This, you will see, makes Moses the figure which argues with the Scripture quotd by Peter in Acts 3:22: "For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me."

Paul was not speaking of Adam's figure, likeness or image, but of his transgression. Now Brother Brown, if you believe this explanation of the text is correct, perhaps it would be well to publish it in The Restitution for the benefit of others.

It would be a great blessing if all of us who profess to be guided by the word of truth, could get the mind of the Spirit as it was intended to be understood, till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God (Eph. 4:13).

Your brother in Christ,

WILLIAM READ.

EDITOR OF THE RESTITUTION:

Herewith please find enclosed a check to help pay the expenses of The Restitution. The Restitution is such a help to all of the household of faith, and especially to the isolated ones like myself. We can not afford to let our paper go down. If it was not for my Bible and The Restitution I would get very much discouraged in trying to gain eternal life, for there is so many man-made theories taught. By the goodness of God toward us we are able to teach the gospel plan of salvation as we find it in his inspired word. We see the prophecies of the last days being fulfilled and the near return of our Savior to gather his elect unto himself that he may help to execute judgment and justice in the earth, when he rules on David's throne, which was promised in Luke 1:32, 33. I am striving to gain that crown of life which Jesus will give at his appearing, "And not to me only, but to all those that love his appearing." I am very sorry I can not give more to help spread the glad tidings of the kingdom. I will close wishing abundant success for the cause of Christ by your good old paper that has so many able writers and has been battling for the plan of salvation so many long years.

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. ELLA R. GATES.

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN

BROTHER ROBISON will have to change his article on the rich man and Lazarus; for the editor of the David C. Cook Publishing Co., Elgin, Ill., has made the great discovery. Here it is Lesson 4, April 24th: "Hell, hades, where the spirits of men are between death and the resurrection. The rich man was in one part of hades, Lazarus in another called Paradise."

So there you have it -as clear as mud as a Brother usd to say. What folly for well read men to send out to be taught to the children of our land! They certainly ought to see that it is not in harmony with the teaching of any of the Bible writers Paradise is lost, and will not be found until it is restored in the new earth when Christ and his associates have control of all earthly affairs.

Yours for the truth,

D. L. P. CLEM.

The Resurrection of the Dead

IF I so emphasize the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, it is simply because the Scriptures emphasize it as being absolutely indispensable if the DEAD are ever to live again. With the except-tion of the "coming of the Lord," there is no other subject oftener repeated and insisted upon. It is an integral part of the gospel that "Christ rose again." If then "Christ died and rose again," and "Christ died and lived again" (which are scriptural statements), we are forced to the conclusion that he lived again when he rose again! In his case, therefore, we have a practical answer to the old question put by Job, "If a man die shall he live again ?" No wonder, then, that Paul writes: "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then . . . they which are fallen asleep in Christ hape perished." How unutterably sad and desperate would be our case if it were not for the hope of the resurrection! Where and how does the dogma of the immortality of the soul fit and harmonize with this hope? Popular teaching today in ignoring death as the result of Adam's transgression, ignores also as a logical result, this fundamental doctrine of the resurrection of the dead because it sees no necessity for it. It is badly in the way, a veritable snag and so it is put away in the background and a grotesque bogey set up called "resurrection of the body."

UNTRUTHFUL HYMN

As children we have sung:

There is a happy land, far, far away,
Where saints in glory stand, bright, bright as day.

The word resurrection (anastasis) means "standing up again" and if dead saints are standing now, what need of a future standing up again ? If they are standing, they must have feet; if they are singing they must have lips and mouths; if they are beholding the Christ, they must have eyes. In fact, they must have a new and glorified body already. Where did they get it ? And then, what in the name of common sense are they going to do with their resurrected body ? Where is the use of the body anyway ?

MISSIONARY IN INDIA

This reminds me of my most respected friend, late missionary George Bowen of Bombay. He spun out an article glorifyiny death as the gateway to life! He believed the saints at death were furnished with a spirit body, which he called an "etherio magnetic envelope"; with this they exercised all their functions and did exploits, such as "singing hallelujahs," looking over the battlements of heaven," watching their friends run races or play football. walking about on the "golden shore" or "gathering at the river washing up its silver spray," etc., so that there was nothing more to be desired in their complete makeup. A few days after I asked him if he believd in the resurrection? "Certainly, the resurrection of the body." Well then, what was he going to do with the "etherio magnetic envelopes" ? Were they to be hung up like so many overcoats and the "naked" immortal souls sent flitting and hustling for their respective bodies. all raised up and squatting, awaiting tenants? He "waxed wroth" and turned away.

Well might Tyndal the Reformer write: "In putting departed souls in heaven, hell and purgatory, you destroy the arguments wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurrection . . .. if the souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good case as the angels be? And then. what cause (need) is there of the resurrection ?"

MISSIONARY IN ATHENS

When Paul by request of the Epicurean and Stoic philosophers made a public statement of his doctrine on Mar's Hill, they listened patiently for a while. but "when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked." If he had reasoned on the lines of modern misionaries in favor of the immortality of the soul, they would have ranked with him Plato himself. If he had talked of conscious survival of souls, of the transmigration into "glory land" in a new body, their verdict might have been a greater than Pythagoras is here! But he spoke on the resurrection of the DEAD, a doctrine so foolish and incredible to them that they mocked the great apostle and called him a "babbler" (Acts 17:14).

SAD DARKNESS

I have dealt at some length on this point to show how sadly Christendom has gone astray. All gone after the way of Swedenborg, and his fancies. But Swedenborg at any rate was most consistent, for after death, the "soul" was for ever done with the body- there was no such thing as resurrection in his scheme. It saddens me to see the best talents of Christian churches prostitued in endeavoring to prove the immortality of the soul. They apparently do not see that for every point urged in favor, by so much is the resurrection of the DEAD discredited. Most churchmen are even ignorant that the Church of England long ago rejected this dogma, for in the revised articles of that church in 1562-71, two Articles were deliberately omitted and dropped, one of which did maintain conscious survival of dead souls. The religion of Jesus needs no broken crutch of Plato. Future life with Plato was a direct consequence of the soul's immortality, a speculative figment of his own; future life, according to the Scripture, rests wholly and absolutely in God's power to raise the dead.

RESURRECTION

"Thanks be to God," says Paul, "who giveth us the victory" from death and from the grave (1 Cor. 15). How? By the resurrection of the dead! A mighty theme this, my readers, lofty enough to be given serious thought. To a king who was once overwhelmed in the contemplation of this stupendous work, Paul made reply, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead ?" That I may interest many and awaken a few to serious consideration of this important subject, I am privileged in witnessing to this forgotten theme in the columns of this paper. "Prove all things" is enjoined on us as individuals. In proportion to light is liberty; in proportion to liberty is emancipation from the bigotry of priests and slavery to half-taught fathers and to conclaves. We have a standard, "Whatsoever is not read in Holy Scriptures, nor may be proved thereby, is not to be received by any man" (Art. VI, C. of E.). Ye churchmen and Methodists, what a magnificent charter is this! Hold it and use it if you dare!

G. W. WINCKLER.

What Others are Doing

LET US take a brief glance at other Advent churches, and see what they are doing to help the peoples who are wrapped in heathen ignorance, or in the darkness of Roman Catholicism, to come "out of darkness into light." And also keep themselves awake and alive.

The Seventh day Adventists do not see as we do on many points, but their self-denial. zeal and earnestness are certainly worthy of imitation, and ought to be an inspiration to us in this our endeavor to place The Restitution on a firm foundation.

What do you suppose the missionary volunteers of that church in North America intend to raise for their mission work in South America the present year? $125,000! And this only supplementary to what they are raising for their missions at home, and in Asia, Europe, and in the islands of the sea, for their missions are wrold-wide, and no obstacles daunt them. They go where there are no wagon roads. riding mule back, face tropical storms, and arctic cold, and are planting churches and schools everywhere. Emulate them, dear brothers and sisters. The call comes to you the same as to them—

Hear our cry
Lest we die;
Do not wait till by and by:
Come this way
Come today;
Hear our plaintive cry, we pray.

We cannot do all that they are doing, but we can keep our paper alive, and send it far and near to do mission work for the Master. $1000 is a very small sum to raise, as I look at it now; and look at the mighty work that lies at our door.

You are doing fine Brother Griffiths says, and I am sure we shall soon have the needed sum.

But now let us take a glance at what our Crisis friends are doing, for they too are pressing forward towards higher nobler goals.

I have not kept quite so closely in touch with their Forward Movement as I ought to have done, but the drive is to raise $200,000 in five years, and the call is being made not only for the raising of this money, to be held and drawn from as it is needed in publication, educational and missionary work but also for more general and more thorough study of the Bible, for the erection of the family altar in every home, for ten thousand church members to engage in evangelistic work, that Sunday Schools and loyal workers may increase as they ought to increase in membership and usefulness for two hundred young men and women to fill up the fast thinning ranks that have hitherto acted as leaders in the service consecration. Is not that a budget of good things worth working for? And the best of all is, the motive set before the membership of these Advent churches, when they are asked to help on this Forward Movement in a financial way is that "the Lord is coming," and we will be required to give a strict account of our stewardship.

The motive is an effective one. There are few who are not converted to the necessity of the movement and who have not "awakened to the dear call of their matchless leader, the Lord Jesus Christ. No longer contented to dwell at ease and stand still, having heard the sound of marching in the mulberry trees, they intend to keep step with Jehavah."

The mark was set at $150,000 to be raised by the 5th of June in pledges and in cash. They have raised up to date, including a few individual gifts from one hundred and thirty-five churches, fifty-one of which have not completed their canvass, practically $128,000, and two hundred and sixty-five churches remain to be canvassed. So the lacking 22,000 dollars can safely be counted on, to come in in due time, especially as the southern states did not begin their canvass until a month later than the other section.

May God give them the victory; for it is a question with them of "move forward or die," as it is with our paper. We must give and give and keep on giving. And the more we give the greater will be our ability to give in the future; for when we reach the end of our hoarded resources, our Father's full giving has only begun.

> His love has no limit, his grace has no measure,
>   His power no boundary known unto men;
> For out of his infinite riches in Jesus,
>   He giveth, and giveth, and giveth again.

Spirit-Mind

THE PRIMARY idea of the word "Spirit" in Scripture is the breath of life. "Spirit and breath" are synonymously used in such passages as Eccl. 3:18-21 and Psa. 104:29, 30. A concordance and a comparison of the translation of the original words amply confirm this; and when the breath of life enters the blood and reaches the brain, mind results from the energy. So we have the secondary idea of spirit used in Scripture for mind; as for instance, Eph. 4:23, Job 32:8 and 1 Cor. 2:11. See also the many cases where "spirit" expresses a state of mind, as in Prov. 14:29.

And since the mind is essentially the governing force in forming the body and expressing personality bodily, the word "spirit" also expresses in Scripture the idea of a person, as in 1 Pet. 3:19 and 1 John 4:1. Notice in the latter case that "spirits" is synonymous with "prophets." Hence the meaning of the words of John the Baptist when asked who he was said, "I am the voice." His personality was vitally connected with his message, and the message was the important matter to Israel, not his looks or name or identity; for he was even Elijah in "'spirit and power," speaking to Israel a similar message and under similar circumstances of apostasy as did the Tishbite prophet.

In the same way Jesus could say, "I am the way, the truth, and the life," and be Immanuel, God with us, and say that those who saw him saw the Father. He was the Father representatively, not identically.

In the same way the Holy Spirit is God, by comparing Acts 5:3 with next verse. In one verse he lies to the Holy Spirit, in the other, the same lie was unto God. Such Scriptures throw considerable light on the subject of the trinity.

The sense in which Peter could truly speak thus of the Holy Spirit as being God is that in which Paul uses "spirit" in 1 Cor. 2 as mind. In verse 11 the word means "mind," for it is what "knows," hence in 5:16 we find "mind" used for "spirit." So we are to have the "mind" of Christ again by Phil. 2:5, and this mind is in Rom. 8:9 called both "spirit" and "spirit of Christ" as well as "spirit of God." And in the next verse this spirit of Christ is called "Christ"—another case where "spirit" means the personality. And this shows that all the knowledge of Christ we need is his spirit of truth and love, not his looks, or size, or descent, or such attendant matters. When he was here in flesh he was not considered handsome, according to Isa. 52 and 53.

There must be some vital connection between breath and Holy Spirit, as is evident from John 20:22 and Acts 2:2. Perhaps it is in the sense that mortal life is dependent upon breath of life and eternal life exists by virtue of Holy Spirit, according to 1 Pet. 3:18 and Rom. 8:11. So that both the present breath existence and the future spirit existence are termed by the same word, life, showing that life itself is the same in both cases, differing only in the medium of its manifestation.

The above words of Paul in 1 Cor. 2, afford an interesting explanation of inspiration and revelation. To illustrate: You know what is in your mind; I do not, for Paul says, "What man knows the things of himself but his spirit in him?" There may be grief or gladness, ignorance or enlightenment, in your mind. But if you express your mind in words to me I will get your mind into mine in the degree, I comprehend your words, And the same things that were in your spirit are aroused in mine then, in the degree I am in harmony, fellowship, with you. Your bereavement causes me tears as I read; your joy is mine; your holiness makes me righteous.

So of God and his spirit, says Paul, in comparison. God's mind is full of truth, peace, joy, power, love. His mind is a holy mind, his spirit a holy spirit Paul says these "things" were spoken in "words" which the Holy Spirit taught, or inspired: hence "the Holy Spirit" is "the Spirit of holiness," and the "Spirit of Christ" is "the Spirit of God," and the words are spirit and life (John 6:63). So as we read the holy words of Holy Scripture given by the Holy Spirit, God's mind, we become of that same spirit of holiness in the degree we understand the words and in the degree we are in fellowship with the mind so expresed in words. Let us put it this way: We understand the words in proportion as we are in harmony with the writer of the words, for this is the repeated affirmation of Scripture. To illustrate again: We will say you are French and are writing me a description of the battle fields from "things" in your mind. I do not know French; I am not in harmony with your spirit. I read your letter, I can probably understand nothing of it. Before I get the things of your mind I must Frenchify my spirit to be in fellowship with yours. As I begin to do this I begin to understand your writing. I begin to catch an idea here and there. When I fully put my spirit in harmony with yours I understand all you say. Then if you and I are in loving fellowship every thought of your spirit in your words wakens in me a like mind.

So of the Bible; God's mind that gave it is the Holy Spirit. In the degree I have the spirit of holiness I understand the words: and in that degree the Holy Spirit's Holy Scriptures transform me to its likeness. He speaks power and the apostles work miracles. He speaks peace, joy, faith, hope, and love, and his saints become like Christ.

So the royal pathway to learning truth lies in "the way of holiness." This is the idea in many Scriptures, such as Eccl. 2:26; Prov. 3:31; Psa. 25:14 and Dan. 9:13. The first spirit of holiness we have is repentance, and the next is faith in the saving gospel, then we go on in the spirit of truth, learning such things as are needful for our growth and development and final salvation.

Repentance is a godly spirit, for it is turning from sin, and God abhors sin. And to show that the Spirit of Christ is necessary to understand truth, notice that in the Scriptures generally, repentance comes first, then faith, then baptism (Mark 1:15). J. W. WILLIAMS.

Reward: How, When, and Where

"FOR HE that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb. 11:6). This Scripture teaches one must have faith in God; the only God. Must believe in him, come to him by the narrow way, as taught in his word by his inspired writers. For the gospel was written by holy men of God who spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit (2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:21). It also teaches there is a reward to them that diligently seek him. Who diligently seek him? They that receive the word with all readiness of mind, and search the Scriptures daily to see if these things are so (Acts 17:11). Who are rewarded? The righteous; all that believe and obey the gospel as preached by Christ and Paul (Mark 16:15, 16; Gal. 1:6-12).

How will they be rewarded? with eternal life; it is God's gift through Christ.

When are the righteous rewarded? When Jesus comes and all the holy angels with him (Zech. 14:5; Matt. 25:31; 16:27; Acts 1:11; Rom. 1:7); at the resurrection of the just (Luke 14:14): when he who is our life shall appear (Col. 3:4; 2 Tim. 4:1); when the last trump shall sound (1 Cor. 15:51-57); at the resurrection from among the read (1 Thes. 4:14, 18; Rev. 20:5, 6; 22:12).

Where are the righteous rewarded? Jesus says here on earth (Matt. 5:5) John says they will reign on the earth (Rev. 5:9, 10). Prov. 11:31 says they shall be rewarded in the earth. They that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the earth (Psa. 37:9). Verse 11, the meek shall inherit the earth; verse 22, such as are blessed of him (the Lord) shall inherit the earth; verse 29, the righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever. Could they be in two places forever? No! Then as they are rewarded in the earth, they are not in heaven, neither are they rewarded at death.

Do all that are resurrected receive the same reward? Yes; as far as life is concerned, but different stations in life. For example: Christ promise to the twelve, ye shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel, and the 144,000 sealed ones, out of the twelve tribes will be associate rulers, with the apostles over the twelve tribes of Israel in the promised land. The great number in Rev. 7:9 will be rulers under Christ over the Gentile nations. The Spirit and the Bride say come. Will you hear and come?

THE DOXOLOGY REVISED

I have changed one line in the doxology so it does not teach a triune God.

Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise him all creatures here below;
Praise him above ye heavenly host,
Praise God in whom we all should trust.

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 2nd, 1921 ● NUMBER 29

Are You Ready?

Are you looking for the Master?
Are you ready for the King?
For we know that he is coming,
Back to earth again to reign.

Have you on the wedding garment?
That spotless robe of white,
Which in Scriptures we are told
Is a robe of righteousness?

Are you doing unto others
As you would have them do to you?
And thus obey the Master
And keep the golden rule?

Are you a sheep following the shepherd,
Or have you wandered away
Into the world and its pleasures,
When the Master told thee "Nay"?

Dear one, let thy wandering cease,
Hie thee to thy quiet home,
Hark! Behold the cry goes forth,
"The Bridegroom, Christ our Lord, is come."

Mrs. (Dr.) L. HICKLIN.

Ruth the Gleaner

THERE WAS a famine in the land of Israel, and a man of Bethlehem in the land of Judah, whose name was Elimelech, took Naomi his wife and their two sons, Mahlon and Chilion, and went into the land of Moab, an idolatrous nation, east of the Jordan, and lived there. And Elimelech died, and Mahlon and Chilion took wives of the women of Moab. The name of the one was Orpah, and the name of the other was Ruth. This was contrary to the law given by Jehovah to his people Israel: "When the Lord thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it . . . thou shalt not make marriage with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son" (Deut. 7:1-3).

This law was given to keep Israel from idolatry and to keep them pure worshippers of the Lord heir God. Both of the young men died childless, and Naomi was left alone of her own family. Hearing that the Lord had visited his people and given them bread, she decided to return to her own land. How loving and tender must have been that stricken household! Both Orpah and Ruth went with her on the way, but the mother heart and the mother love was strong and she would not allow the sacrifice. Hear her say to them: "Go, return each of you to her mother's house. Jehovah deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with the dead, and with me. Jehovah grant you that ye may find rest each of you in the house of her husband." Then she kissed them and she lifted up her voice and wept and said, "Nay, but we will return with thee unto thy people"; but again she forbade them, urging the reason with them that she could not give them other husbands; for according to the law of her land this must be their hope (Deut. 25:5, 6), and she said, "Turn again my daughters, ... for it greatly grieveth me much for your sakes, for the hand of Jehovah has gone out against me, and they lifted up their voice, and wept again; and Orpah kissed her mother-in-law, but Ruth clave unto her."

And now from this woman of an idolatrous people, this loving Ruth comes down to us one of the most beautiful expressions of filial affection that has ever been recorded. The mother again urges her to follow after Orpah, saying, "She has gone back to her people and to her god." Ruth replied: "Entreat me not to leave thee and to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and they God my God; where thou diest will I die, and there will I be buried; Jehovah do so to me and more also, if but death part thee and me." So they journeyed and came to Bethlehem, and the city was moved and the women said: "Is this Naomi? Call me not Naomi, that is, pleasant; call me Mara that is bitter; for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me. I went out full, and Jehovah hath brought me again empty."

But how little did she understand the meaning of her great sorrow. As in many another instance her dire extremity was Jehovah's opportunity. Was it chance that one of her daughters-in-law should not only love her too well to forsake her, but also that in her heart, as in the king's son spoken of in 1 Kings 14:13, "There was some good thing toward the Lord God of Israel;" for in choosing to go with Naomi, she chose her God; turning her back upon her own family and their idol god, Chermosh of Moab. Nay, verily, Jehovah was working out his own good purpose toward them, for where there is a heart to honor him, there is God to honor and bless. The time was the beginning of barley harvest. Ruth became a gleaner in the field of Boaz, a mighty man of wealth, and a kinsman of Elimelech. Enquiring who the damsel was, he was told how she had come from Moab to be with Naomi. Boaz at once told her to remain by his maidens. Ruth acknowledged his kindness and asked why it was, seeing she was a stranger. Boaz replied: "It hath been fully showed me all thou hast done. The Lord recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to trust." She returned to Naomi in the evening with an ephah of barley, equal to about one bushel, and Naomi said, "Blessed be he of the Lord who hath not left off his kindness to the living and to the dead."

Boaz had commanded his young men not only to let her glean among the sheaves, but to let fall some handfulls on purpose for her, and leave them, that she may glean them, "and rebuke her not." thus fulfilling the harvest law as given by Jehovah (Lev. 1:9, 10). So she kept fast by the maidens of Boaz to glean unto the end of barley and wheat harvest and dwelt with her mother-in-law. For the sequel of her faithfulness and virtue, please read the third and fourth chapters of Ruth, and learn that she became the wife of Boaz by a strict law of Jehovah, and a son was born to her who by the law was reckoned to Malon her first husband (Deut. 25:5, 6), and his name was Obed, who was the father of Jesse, who was the father of David the king, the sweet psalmist to whom the promises of the coming Messiah were given as his house was so honored; and in the generation of the Christ (Matt. 1:5) we find Ruth has the honor of having her name on record in his lineage. Truly may we believe Jehovah's word when he says, "Them that honor me will I honor" (1 Sam. 2:30).

The book of Ruth is a connecting link between the time of the Judges and the monarchy, and is a beautiful proof of Jehovah's power and will to bring good out of evil, as well as a lesson to each one to seek and follow in his commandments which are not grievous. Bethlehem (house of bread). How truly did the young Moabitess find it so, to the rejoicing of her heart, and the comforting of Naomi in her old age; for the women said to her concerning the child that was born: "Blessed be the Lord which hath not left thee this day without a kinsman that his name may be famous in Israel."

The Moabites, descendants of Lot, were a pastoral people, who inhabited the mountainous country, east of the lower part of the Jordan and the Dead Sea. In the time of the Judges the Jews were under their yoke for eighteen years, but the Moabites were afterwards made tributary to David, but about 900 B. C. shook off thir allegiance to the Jewish kings and afterwards took part with the Chaldeans against the Jews. Their name no longer exists, and the remnants of the people have long been included among the Arabs (Chamber's Encyclopedia). The Moabite stone is a slab of back basalt beaning an inscription of thirty-four lines in Hebrew- Phoenician characters, the oldest monument of the Semitic alphabet. It was found in 1868 at the ancient Dilon in Moab, and now in the Louvre in Paris. The inscription records the victories of king Mesha over the Israelites (Century Encyclopedia). It confirms the Bible statement in 2 Kings 3:4, 5, and records the names of Omri, and Ahab, Jehovah and Israel. Some of the lines read "Omri was king of Israel and he oppressed Moab many days'; "I warred against the city and took it"; "I took thence the arels (altars) of Jehovah." We learn that the Moabites employed nearly the same language and the customs of warfare as Israel. They were not barbarous; both were progressively civilized peoples.

FRIENDLY.

Puffed Up and Built Up

THERE IS a vast difference between being puffed up and built up. A baloon is puffed up, and it does not take long to do it, but when the bubble is pricked and the gas is gone it is down flat in a brief time. A house is built up, and it requires some time to accomplish it, but when completed, especially of brick and stone and cement, it will abide and furnish a comfortable home for its owners and a shelter for the visitor.

"Knowledge puffeth up." Not the amount of what one really knows stimulates vanity but what they think they know is what swells up some people. My! how they will straighten up! Full corn in the ear tends to bend the stalk, but an empty head is erect. There is only one thing in favor of vanity: it does not tend toward round shoulders. A man who really knows a lot feels the burden of responsibility. It is not meant by this that he must be humped-backed. Titles tend toward vanity, especially used and doted on by their owners. Let others apply them to us, but let us not apply them to ourselves. There is nothing of this sort that can be attached to a man to indicate how much he knows. Some are "ever learning and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth." Some D. D.'s are dreadfully dark as to what the Bible teaches along some lines of theology. Some humble child of God could enlighten them much if they were of a teachable spirit.

"Chairty edifieth." That is, it builds up, and things built up endure. Charity is only another word for love—the Bible word. What would this world be without the love of God and the love that true Christians bear towards him and for one another! I should not want to live in it. It would be as frigid and barren as the North Pole. What has not charity accomplished for the temporal and eternal good of mankind? The list of what it hath done would be lengthy, but what it hath not done brief indeed.

It moved the Father to send the Son into our world. It moved the Son to suffer and die for us after spending years in teaching us the way of life. It has actuated every earnest follower of his to do and die for him since he left the world and will until his return. It moves every good purpose and continues to do so two thousand years this side of the great events. It still is in the building business. Every movement will come to naught whose mainspring is not love for lost men. Every movement is a forward movement that has divine love back of it like a steaming engine pushing ahead. God grant that that all our hearts and lives may be filled and actuated by his love.—C. E. Copp.

General Conference

A GENERAL Conference of the Church of God at large has been called to meet at Waterloo, Iowa, on Sunday, August 28th, to continue over the following Sunday, September 4th, 1921. The meetings will be held upon the Iowa State Conference grounds, and will follow immediately upon the adjournment of the State Conference. Railroad rates of one and a half fare for the round trip has been secured for those attending.

This meeting is being held as the next logical step in the progress of the effort that was started a year ago, and which was taken up in a meeting at Chicago, in September, and again in November at a meeting in Oregon, and again in April at Marshalltown, Iowa. At this last meeting a Constitution and Policy was formulated as a basis for the organization for a General Assembly of the Church of God. Since then the committee has had this constitution printed and distributed together with proxies to all the membership throughout the United States and Canada so far as the addresses could be secured. If anyone has not received a copy and wishes one, please send to F. L. Austin, Fonthill, Ontario, Canada, and he will send you one. It is not supposed that this Constitution is perfect, but is only proposed for the consideration, alteration and amendment of the church at large. Therefore has it been sent out and the General Conference called at Waterloo, August 28th to September 4th, to further perfect it and adopt it as a working basis to bring into working unison the scattered and disjointed forces and abilities of the church body to fulfill the injunctions of Eph. 4.14-16, saying, "That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried away by every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up unto him in all things, which is the Head, even Christ: from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

You are kindly asked to study the proposed Constitution and Policy, carefully and prayerfully, that it may be improved at the coming meeting at Waterloo, Iowa, August 28th to September 4th, 1921. It is proposed by this plan to allow every member to have a vote in person or by proxy to determine what form this Constitution and policy shall take before it is adopted, and to determine whether it shall be adopted at all or not. There has been no inclination on the part of those who have been working to advance this effort, to force any thing upon the church, but upon the contrary, it has been their constant aim to study the scriptural method and means whereby the abilities and energies of the church as a whole, and of each member in particular as a part of that whole, can be used efficiently and effectively, by co-ordinating and organizing all these forces existing in the church into an harmonious united body, to give opportunity to the practical application of the powers and energies of every member in doing their full duty toward the Head of the church. even Christ till he comes.

May the God of heaven. if it be his will, in the name of Jesus, help us to do our duty towards him in this matter. Therefore we urge if you approve that you embrace this opportunity and attend the Waterloo meeting, and if impossible to do this, send your proxy in the name of some trusted friend.

7. Zech. 8:16; Matt. 13:9; Eph. 4:21.

Funds

A fee of ten cents per meeting will be accepted by the Secretary-Treasurer of all members as a voluntary gift. The funds thus collected are to be spent in good works on Christ,[8] our ministries being specially to the household of faith[9] Our mission to the world is evangelistic, not financial.

8. Matt. 26:10-13.
9. Gal. 6:10; Matt. 25:40; 10:40-42; Mark 9:41; Heb. 6:10.

Meetings

Our meetings shall be held every alternate Thursday.[10]

10. Acts 28:23.

Officers

The officers of the Society shall consist of a President, who shall preside at all meetings; a Secretary and Treasurer combined, who shall keep a record of membership and an accurate account of all money received and disbursed. Both these officers shall be elected annually. The President and Secretary-Treasurer may act as a finance committee in emergency cases without the consent of the Society; but as a rule expenditures must be formally voted by the Society.[11]

11. 1 Cor. 14:32,33, 40.

Membership

Sisters in fellowship with the Church of God are eligible for membership in our Society; also friends and acquaintances who are friendly to "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." Such, however, have not the privilege of conducting Bible lessons or of holding office in the Society.

A clergyman objected to wiping the dishes for his wife, saying: "It is not a man's job." She quoted this Scripture to him: "I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it, and turning it upside down"(2 Kings 21:13). He is still wiping the dishes!—Sel. by Brother G. B. Alldridge.

"I Will Raise It Up"

THESE WORDS of our Lord in John 2:19, spoken of his resurrection, under figure of the temple for his body, indicate to many, the trinity and the immortality of the soul.

In order to understand how he raised himself from the dead, all that is needful is to consult other Scriptures. Doing this, we find by Hebrews 13:20 and 1 Peter 1:21 that God the Father, raised the Son from death; and by Romans 8:11 and Peter 3:18 we learn that the means used thus by the Father was the Holy Spirit of God. But the Son and the Father "are one" (John 10:30). Hence what the Father did in raising the Son, the Son did in the sense of being "one." But how are they one? In the same sense that we and the Son are one (John 17:21, 22). We are not in personality with the Son, we did not die on a cross to save ourselves. Neither are the Father and the Son one in identity, for he said, "My Father is greater than I;" and in the same breath with saying he and the Father are one he also declared the Father is great than all, himself included (John 10:29), But they were one in their shepherd work, one in service, in work, in purpose. Hence, looking towards his coming resurrection as a purpose of the Father, he spoke of raising himself. But their identity was separate. One prayed to the other. The Father did not die on the cross.

Again, the Son is the Holy Spirit (2 Cor. 3:17; Rom. 8:9, 10). That is, in the sense that he was God's presence, God's revelation, which the Spirit is. So when we read above that the Spirit quickened the Son to life, we see how he raised himself, As to pre-existence, this principle is true. Endorsing after birth a choice made for one by another before the one's birth, is equivalent to choosing for one's self; so the Son chose flesh for his birth (Heb. 2:14, 16; Phil. 2:7).

Likewise looking forward and choosing resurrection for himself, in harmony with the divine will, was equivalent to acting for himself in raising from death.

J. W. WILLIAMS.

Baptisms

IT WILL be of interest to the house hold of faith, and especially to those of Nebraska, to learn of the new interest being manifested in the kingdom of God and his righteousness at Avery, a suburb of Omaha, about eight miles to the south. The following persons after a diligent study with us of the same truths that Jesus went through the cities of Galilee teaching, and that Philip went into Samaria, preaching, namely, the gospel of the kingdom, gladly received the same word and we planted them in the likeness of Christ's death, burial and resurrection to walk in newness of life, begotten to a new creation. May God keep them until the bride of Christ partake of the divine nature, when Jesus comes to change these vile bodies and fashion them like unto his most glorious body: Mr, and Mrs. Kjargaard, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hansen, and Mr. Edward Banning. These brethren and sisters all rejoice in the hope of their calling, and will be of valuable service in upholding God's truth.

Since these baptisms the Misses Marie and Alice Kjargaard, daughters of Brother and Sister Kjargaard, have asked for baptism, and also Mrs. S. Hansen. Miss Marie had realized for some time that the major portion of present day religious worship consisted in forms of godliness, and the truth appealed to her at once. She graduated from the Omaha schools this spring and is a proficient music instructor, and now comes with the talents God has given her to render willing service for Christ. Miss Alice has been teaching a class in the Union Sunday School and has the kind of zeal that God always directs into channels of service for him. Not being willing to compromise truth and error she has given up her former relation to the powers of darkness, and has a class of children in our Sunday School where she can teach the truth without being frowned upon. Truly the God of Israel still lives, and as in the former days he doeth marvelous things before our eyes, All praise and honor to his holy name.

The boldness and faithfulness of the brethren in this place in letting their light shine is commendable and has been of great assistance to us: in fact, we have all labored together and feel greatly encouraged and rejoiced that God has directed the hearts of these our neighbors into the truth. May we all learn to use our time and direct our energy in preaching the kingdom of God to those who have not heard it. This is the commission of our soon coming Lord and King.

A Girl's Letter

DEAR BROTHER BROWN:

I AM a girl of 15 and have not had much experience in writing letters for the paper, but I thought I would do my best.

I was baptized into Christ's church last August, and am trying to live up to Jesus' commandment. I hope all of Christ's people will pray for me. Though Christ was on this earth once before, he is coming again, and I know he will not be treated this time the way he was before. I do not think the day is far off when he shall come and destroy all the wicked, and the righteous will be gathered all over the world and not one left to suffer. I am so lonesome out here in the country. I wish some of the brothers and sisters would write to me. Perhaps they could give me some new ideas about the Bible. I guess you folk have all heard about Brother Huggins; he is the one that baptized me. I came to the knowledge of the truth about the first of August, and papa then wrote for Brother Huggins to come and baptize me. So we are the only members in our family. I have a brother at home yet, and I hope some day he will come to the same conclusion that I did, and be baptized into God's church. My mother belongs to the M. E. church. Hope to hear from the brothers and sisters.

Editorial Comments

WE RECEIVED and read the above letter with much pleasure. Accompanying the letter was an article on "The Death, Burial, and Resurrection of Christ," written by this girl of fifteen years of age. We take this opportunity to compliment our young sister on her initial effort at writing for The Restitution. Her article is good although too long for our limited space at present. We invite the attention of our young folks to the above letter; perhaps there are other young folks who are lonely; we offer the column of The Restitution as a means of getting acquainted. We will be glad to reserve a column in our paper for our young readers to tell us about themselves; their joys and sorrows; their struggles in the truth, and anything else that is of interest to young people, Come along now; young folks get acquainted. Let The Restitution be the Gordian knot that binds you together. No long dissertations; just a few brief lines. When you read this, sit right down and write to us. Tell us how long you have been in the truth, how many other believers there are in your town or family, and any other details you wish to include. Come on now, young folks: Let's Go!

EDITOR RESTITUTION:

WILL YOU please allow me space through the columns of the good Restitution to introduce myself to the good brothers and sisters of the church of God. By way of introduction I want to say that I am a member of the church having been baptized last Sept. 11th by Brother Robert G. Huggins of Cleveland, Ohio, and have been wandering through the wilderness of isolation since. I formerly was a teacher in the public schools of the state of Ohio, but my infirmities compelled me to give up my position as a teacher and later to accept one in the County Infirmary, where I am surrounded by all manner of sin, namely, infidelity, swearing, lying, stealing, etc., and am isolated from church attendance, church fellowship, and social converse. Now I would like to get away from this place. I truly would be very grateful and thankful for the good brothers and sisters to kindly help me to do so, I am sixty-seven years old, am 5 feet 10 inches high, weigh 186 pounds and crippled in the legs and back; otherwise perfectly healthy. I was raised on a farm, can handle any kind of farm machinery, or do any kind of work sitting or standing.

Kindly asking you again to help me. knowing God will bless you for it. I have no literature, only my Bible and The Restitution. I lack words to praise The Restitution brothers and sisters. Help the good Restitution; give it a place in your libraries. Anxiously awaiting my release from this place, and hoping God will add his blessings to the church and his people,

Your brother,

Bangs, Ohio J. A. BUCKMASTER.

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS IN CHRIST, GREETING:

I HAVE enjoyed the many good articles by the brethren, also the letters at different times. I believe if each one realized how much encouragement the letters are, more would write. We are a big family although so far apart. Some here, some there and some way over yonder. I think we should try to help each other in every way possible, as we travel on our Christian journey. We each need the encouraging word, the helpful articles at times. Paul tells us in Gal. 6:9, "And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not," Let us press on more determinedly, trusting in God as did Abraham, and we will hear the words of our Savior in Matt. 25:21: "Well done thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Your sister in hope,

EMMA GARARD.

DEAR READERS OF THE RESTITUTION:

I HAVE just laid down our paper from the reading of the leading article of June 14th. How masterly is our beloved brother Thomas' defence of the truth, as revealed to man by God's own words spoken by him (and said words must be heeded), that we may not be found wanting, but be thoroughly furnished against all error, false teaching and doctrine of devils (2 Pet. 2:1). Truly satan himself appears through distorted glasses many times as an angel of light. We need not wonder that those who are not of the elect, those who have not the love of the truth, are deceived, and are deceiving others. Two Scriptures are strongly in my mind as I write (John 7:17, 18; 2 Thess. 2:10, 11). This is the suffering hour for the church, when she is being tried in the crucible of testing, and the church is an assembly of called out ones. Then the trials, the testings, the agonizing crucifixion of the flesh, is given individually. Each one must stand or fall alone. Let us each heed the admonition of Jesus in Matt. 16:6, 12, and Paul in Phil. 3:2.

How little personal communication we see in The Restitution. To those who are sitting constantly under the ministration of those placed over the flock as teachers and exhorters, and who are (if faithful) examples to call to live godly in Christ Jesus, this is not so much missed; but to those who are far from home and their Father's children, such communications are eagerly sought for, and read with joy, and are such sources of strength.

I believe we speak the sentiment of the isolated brethren when we say we long for those short articles that teach the essential things that must be believed to obtain eternal life, instead of long winded debates on non-essentials. Sister Susan Howard and Sister Hogarth, how I miss your words of comfort, and those of many others. I cannot forbear rewriting brother Thomas' words: "Why waste precious time and talents in studying out new inventions which bring with them only contentions and controversy ?" (Titus 3:9). There are so many hungering for bread and thirsting for the water of life. May they be fed from the word. Even in this day God has set in the church some as teachers and exhorters; and of all he requires as the basis of sonship and the gift of eternal life that they show forth their faith and hope, not by words only, but by works also; for just words are as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals (1 Cor. 13: 1). But let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven (Matt. 5:16).

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:

I WOULD like to say through The Restitution that during the recent flood in Pueblo, the Lord was very good to me and spared my life, for which I am very thankful. Perhaps he had some more work for me to do.

This was indeed a terrible flood. It swept through almost the entire business section of the city, and there were sixteen feet of water in the Union Depot. It also swept through a portion of the city called, "The Grove," where lots of poor people lived and caused untold suffering. Two passenger trains turned over before they could get out of the railroad yards, and many lives were lost. Some of the passengers climbed out of the windows on top of the cars, only to be swept away by the raging torrent. The loss of life in this flood was great, and can never be estimated.

The power house was flooded and the lights were out before the flood was at its worst, which made it hard for people to escape. We were without water, light, telephone, street car or telegraph service for awhile. During this time fire broke out which added to the horror of the night.

When we see these things coming in different parts of the earth, and causing so much suffering, it makes us long more and more for the glorious kingdom of God to be established in the earth.

While we were without any communication with the outside world, I thought of the brethren, and it seemed they thought of me too; for as soon as the mail service was restored, here came letters from a number of the dear ones in Christ Jesus. Some of them even offered me financial aid as well as sympathy. How can I ever forget these dear brethren! I lost nothing and needed no aid, but I most certainly appreciated their offers. Brethren, this looks like some "fruits of the spirit," were being developed.

And so it is "When one member of the body suffers, others suffer with it." May the Lord soon come so that we may be joined together as one family in the Lord,

Your sister in Christ,

HANNA M. BARBER.

DEAR BROTHER BROWN:

Will you please through The Restitution thank all those who have helped me in my time of need. I am very old and afflicted; have not been able to work; have no means of support. God bless you, my brothers, for your help. I wish I could take you by the hand. You seem near to me. Many thanks to you all. I am your brother in hope of eternal life when the Life Giver comes.

JOHN WEEKS.

Attraction acts on all, and at all distances. To feel repulsion, we must be very near. It is a petty and personal feeling; or, at the best, is the protest of natural affinities against unsought proximity.

Remarks

THE MONTH of June has been a very busy one, fraught with many joys and few trials. In my last report I was in the beginning of a meeting at Ft. Morgan. Several years ago when I started the church at Palmer, Neb., Sister Cornelia Smith was one of the original members. Soon after her baptism she removed to this community. Two years ago I went through here, and spent a day and night with Sister Smith and her husband and mother (the latter has fallen asleep and awaits the call of the Master). At that time I promised Sister Smith to give them a meeting, but was never able to do so till now.

Being called to Laird to officiate at a wedding, I was nearer than I would be again this year. We began our meeting the first and closed the 11th,

The truth had never been preached here, and not much else. I found the people were originally connected with the Lutheran Church and also the Christian, both much prejudiced, especially the former; but notwithstanding all that, they filled the house to capacity from start to finish, there not being one session that we could seat all the people, and some times all could not get in the house; but when the call was made to forsake the world with its passing forms, thirteen responded, and on the eleventh we went to the Pawnee Creek and baptized these thirteen into the name of him who died for them while they were yet sinners, and were raised to walk in newness of life, which the most of them, while belonging to the church, had never well understood before. The Lutherans when they were confirmed take an oath never to leave the church; so it is very hard for them to give up their former teaching because they think they are breaking their oath, so they have to be shown that they took the oath in ignorance of God's truth.

As Sister Smith was the one who made the call for this meeting, she was filled with joy, as her husband was among the number who responded to the call. The close attenton of the people from the beginning was remarkable. They seemed to drink in the truth with an eagerness seldom seen. Brother and Sister Wright, who formerly belonged to the Christian church, also Sister Sanodz, formerly a Lutheran, helped very materially with their musical ability, and are a valuable acquisition to the church.

How little we know when we are called to such meetings, what the result will be. It is all in the hands of him who has charge of the work. God had much people here, but he alone knew it; so we respond to these calls, knowing that God has some good purpose in sending us.

Christ as the head of the church should and must direct the work. I think sometimes we try to take things in our own hands. Every one should be ready at all times to respond to every call, and say: "Here am I, Lord; what wilt thou have me do?" What an impetus it would give to the work if every one performed with zeal the work assigned to him.

My many years of activity in the Lord's work place me in line for any unique circumstances. While at Laird before coming here, Brother Timothy Adams told me his sister, whom I had baptized many years ago, lived in Denver, and wanted me to come there and teach her children, and baptize them. I responded to the call, and upon arriving there was met at the depot by Sister Ackerman and her husband, and Sister McChesney who is now 89 years old, and is recovering from a serious injury sustained by falling down stairs last fall at the home of her granddaughter in Omaha. Upon our arrival at Sister Ackerman's home we found she had given out a meeting for that evening. Not many came, but the second evening the house was full; but the attendance dropped off to the original number where it remained to the end of the meeting, which closed the 24th, and at that date we went to the water and baptized not only her three children, but the father and husband also, so now the entire household are rejoicing in the Lord.

The second day after my arrival a noted evangelist a Mrs. McPherson, of Canada arrived in Denver. She is called the "mystery woman," or the healer. Knowing from Matt. 7:22, 23 and 2 Thess. 2:4 that such things were to be in the last days, she set certain times and special meetings were devoted to healing. The blind, lame, and afflicted of every kind flocked there to be healed; some claim to have been healed, I went to hear her, and get as much as I could first handed. The first defect I discovered in her preaching was the woful misapplication of Scripture; and the manner of conducting her meeting was so foreign to that set by Christ and the apostles, that it was not hard to discover that the Lord would not approve of her work. I am led to believe she does some things that look like cures; but her many failures prove she is not of the Lord. She bases her reason for attempting to heal on the fact that we have the same Christ today and that he possesses the same power, and to this we agree; but it was for her to prove that the order had never changed. This she utterly failed to do. She admitted that she failed many times, but said it was because the subjects were not rid of their sins and did not possess the proper faith. This was a plan to make converts: hundreds would come to the altar and confess their sins hoping they might be healed. She counted her converts by the hundreds. When the people have absolutely refused to listen to the truth God turns them over to the delusions of the last days. She is the first one of the many sensational evangelists that have ever made the claim of healing. So her work makes me stronger in the belief that we are in the last days; and now, brethren, it is for us to exhort one another to continue in the faith because such things were to come, and in that manner that if possible it would deceive the very elect. Why not be admonished by the Savior's warning? How sad to know that in the trials of the last days, some will fall, and this is to be the greatest trial of all, and will shake the faith of many, unless grounded and settled that they cannot be moved away from the hope of their calling.

Then came the time to say goodby, and we were again on our way back to Ft. Morgan, where we were to stop a few days as some, who did not hear all the first meeting wanted to hear a little more. Brother Flickens' brother was one of this class, and drove eight miles every night, and became so interested he wanted me to come to his home town. We complied, and are now holding meetings in the Christian Church at New Rayner. The results we will tell next month.

I forgot to mention that Sister Johnson, of Briggsdale, forty miles from here, desired me to come and hold a few meetings in the Congregational church, so we arranged to go there at the close of this meeting. In company with Brother and Sister Smith, Brother and Sister Wright, Brother and Sister Flickens, and Sister Nutter, we drove to Briggsdale Sunday morning, hoping to be there for the forenoon meeting; but upon arriving, we found a children's day program was on, which took all the time allotted to us. A sadness, too, entered into this program: Sister Johnson, a noble and devoted member of the body of Christ, had received a telegram the day before announcing the death of her father at Holbrook, Neb., and had left for that place. For this reason we decided to return to Ft, Morgan after the evening meeting, arriving near midnight. I spoke to the people there on this occasion of the accurate fulfilment of prophecy. They seemed very much interested and invited me to come again. A doctor and member of that church took us all to a hotel and ordered our dinner and treated us very kindly. We appreciated his kindness very much.One of the meetings which I am reporting was held in Sister Smith's school house. School had just closed, and as the teacher boarded with Sister Smith, she induced her to stay and attend the meeting. Sister Nutter had taught this school for three years in succession. She informed me that she had never been interested in religion, but she took a great interest from the start, and her great struggle with self was that she had learned to indulge in what she thought to be an innocent amusement, dancing. When she asked me upon this point I told her I knew how she would like to have me answer it; but I told her I must be true to God, to myself, and to her, and tell her it was but one form of worldly pleasure, that was dangerous and would ultimately destroy her hope; and if I should answer her as she wished just to get her in the church, I would be a false teacher and she would lose her respect for me. This she agreed was so, and after many talks and efforts on her part, she won the victory over self, and proved the real character that she was. I know she will pardon me for this personal allusion, There are many like circumstances and I believe they soon learn that the only real pleasure is in sacrificing for the truth's sake. Some other young people with her made the same sacrifice. Now brethren, don't forget these new born babes in Christ; but let us remember them in our prayers that they may be kept from the toils of the world, and have a place in the kingdom of God.

Sister Moore wrote me and sent Sister Smith's letter asking for a meetng, and she told me she sent it with a prayer that it might be fruitful; and now she is rejoicing that the prayer has been answered. May the Lord bless all the household of faith, and bless all efforts to promote the faith is our earnest prayer.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Did Jesus Die of a Broken Heart?

IN THE Restitution of July 12th Brother Sterling Groves writes an article stating that the cause of crucifixion was not mainly the cause of the death of the Son of God. That his agony in the garden caused the blood to be forced through the arteries and veins into the sweat glands. This, he says, is called "Diapedites." Medical men class this among the diseases of the flesh. We therefore have a diseased lamb as an offering of sacrifice.

If for no other reason this should disprove the theory. Readers should notice that the writer quotes from medical works to describe the intense agony of our Lord. In our opinion there must have been a cause for this condition, If not by meditating on the intense pain and torture of crucifixion, what was it? It was through suffering that Jesus was made perfect. This being true, there could have been no logical reason for a prolonged torture while on the cross. His prayers were not to relieve him of the shame of death on the cross as he must have known that crucifixion was the punishment under the Roman law.

The covenant made with the woman's seed necessitated death (Gen. 3:15); and it, the serpent, "shall bruise his heel." Every faithful offering from Abel to Jesus was but a type of the supreme sacrifice. It is not reasonable that Jesus would ask for the cup to pass in its fulness from him. It was the only means of his obtaining eternal redemption.

Was his suffering shortened or lightened? For a scriptural answer we will give the following:

"Pilate marveled if he were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead; and when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph (Luke 15:44, 45). We learn from Luke that he lived less than three hours after being nailed to the cross. When the Roman soldiers came to Jesus to break his legs, he was already dead and they brake not his legs (John 19:33), That there was a satisfactory answer to his prayers is evidenced from his words to his apostles. After returning the third time from prayer he was strengthened by the angel who had appeared and comforted him. Jesus said: "Sleep on now, and take your rest. It is enough the hour is come; behold, the Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners" (Mark 14:41). The conclusion is that his prayers were answered by the angel's message. Eliminating the idea of a diseased lamb, there can be no other logical reason other than a speedy death would relieve him of a prolonged, intense suffering. He was to taste of death, not necessarily be tortured.

Those who violated the Mosaic law and were put to death were not subjects of prolonged agony, but a speedy death. They were taken without the camp and stoned to death Under the Roman law the Jews could not legally order such a humane punishment as stoning. Is it not reasonabe to state that God could so do and not violate any part of the covenant made with his Son? The covenant was fulfiled in the death of the covenant victim, and not in a prolonged suffering. "The pound of flesh was awarded to Shylock, but not a drop of blood."

The theory given by the writer is not a new one. We have heard of it for the whole of our Christian life. Hebrews 5:7 is given as a proof of the truthfulness of the above. A correct and careful analysis of this Scripture shows that he prayed not to be saved from death, but to be saved out of death (Diaglott translation). Up to this time none of the race had ever been raised from the death state or "out of death." Jesus prayed for this just as we pray for an admittance into the kingdom through a resurrection from the grave. We know that God will deliver the righteous from the grave, but there is always the shadow of a doubt of our own righteousness. To hear his sayings and do them is our supreme test, As we approach death may our fears be strengthened through God's promise of "well done," is our prayer.

Your brother looking for the Master,

D. C. ROBISON.

Unconscious Signs of Life

THAT WHICH the persecutors once said of the apostles, ought still to be said of every Christian man: "And they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus' (Acts 4:13).

Men carry unconscious signs of their life about with them. Those that come from the forge, and those from the lime and mortar, and those from the humid soil, and those from dusty travel, bear signs of being workmen, and of their work. One need not ask a merry face or a sad one whether it hath come forth from joy or from grief. Tears and laughter tell their own story. Should one come home with fruit, we say, "Thou art come from the orchard;" if with hands full of wild flowers, "Thou art from the fields;" if one's garments smell of mingled odors, we say, "Thou hast walked in a garden," But how much more, if one hath seen God, hath held converse of hope and love, and hath walked with Christ, should he carry in his eye, his words, and his perfumed raiment, the sacred tokens of divine intercourse!

Help the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Some men will follow Christ on certain conditions—if he will not lead them through rough roads— if he will not enjoin them any painful tasks —if the sun and wind do not annoy them—if he will remit a part of his plan and order. But the true Christian who has the spirit of Jesus, will say, as Ruth said to Naomi, "Whither thou goest I will go!" whatever difficulties and dangers may be in the way.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 9th, 1921 NUMBER 30

Success

The man who wins is the one who tries,
Who seeks and gains a worthy prize:
'Tis not for those who sit and dream,
While drifting down life's listless stream.

Fame waits not for idlers by the way;
But seeks for those who work each day;
"Don't wait, and watch for dead men's shoes,"
While glowing fiction you peruse.

If one succeeds through push and pluck,
The knave wil say, "twas just good luck:"
Small credit will they give the man
Who works, and does the best he can.

Now, if in life you would succeed,
Unto their prattle give no heed;
Just choose your course and plan it well,
And let your work the story tell.

Due thought bestow on your work each day,
And tread with care the beaten way:
Use your mind, your hands and will,
And do your work with speed and skill.

'Tis best to have a mind your own,
Though to other people it is unknown,
Then, when you've run life's little race,
Some good in it perchance you'll trace.

To always work, and have no play
Is not the best for Jack they say;
Then do your work, and have it done,
And when 'tis play time, share the fun.

J. E. HOGARTH.

The Restoration of Israel and Zionism

Israelitish Signs Indicating the Ending of Gentile and Catholic Suprmacy

THE ZIONIST movement is idealistic, but it is also essentially practical. It seeks to realize the hope of a Jewish nation; to make the dream of a Jewish life in a Jewish land come true as in the past other wonderful dreams of the world have been realized by man working with devotion. intelligence and self-sacrifice. It was thus that the dream of Italian independence and unity, after centuries of vain hope, came through the efforts of Mazzini, Garibaldi and Cavour; that the dream of Greek, of Bulgarian, and of Serbian independence became facts. And we now witness the strenuous efforts of the Irish to establish an independent republic. The rebirth of the Jewish nation is no longer a mere dream: it is in process of accomplishment in a most practical way. And, so, while every other people is striving for development by asserting its nationality, and a great war has made clear the value of small nations, the Jews will never voluntarily yield to anti-Semitism, but will solve their problem. Surely they have no reason at this time to despair. Let them make clear to the world that they are a nationality striving for equal rights to life and to self-expression. As a prominent American Zionist recently stated: "The basic condition of success in our national life is fidelity to our national ideas, that if we would be fit to have and to hold our fee in the Holy Land, we must be a holy people. And if we, in our self-probation, realize that we in our own time and in our own person cannot attain that glorious goal, let us not despair or give up the hope as a vain dream but so shape our lives and warm the hearts of our children, that at least we can cherish the yearning belief that those whom we love will attain and achieve that for which we had striven, but for which we were not yet ripe."

We are certainly living in eventful times, when we need to keep wide awake, We are at the point where prophecy converges most swiftly towards its accomplishment.

We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time.

No truer lines were ever penned, or ever spoken. The impression is deepening that we are approaching a crisis, such as the world has never known. Prophecies are being rapidly fulfilled. We know that the sole object of the great world-wide Jewish Zionist Organization is to help bring about the restoration of Israel, and the formation of a Jewish State in Palestine. We know that all the leading governments favor such a movement. We frequently read about the Zionist project and kindred subjects in our newspapers. A few of the many recent articles follow:

"To the Editor of the News: In a recent article on Jewish emigration to Palestine, when the affairs of Turkey and Syria are finally setted, the writer seems skeptical in regard to the Zionists having their hopes and dreams fully realized, owing to the small size of the country and its scarcity of natural resources. This seems to be the prevalence of opinion among people interested in the future of Paestine and the destiny of the Jews. It is estimated there are about 14,000,000 of these people, and of this number not more than 6,000,000 could live comfortably within the present area of the country. However, biblical prophecy does not say that all Jews throughout the world shall return simultaneously and at once become a great nation . In Jeremiah 33:37 we find that they shall be gathered from all countries and brought back to the land of their fathers, but it does not say that this, shall occur all at once, or that every Jew in the world is included in the prophecy. Isaiah 10:22 says that a 'remnant shall return,' and in Isaiah 56:6-8 'strangers' and 'others' are included. In Jeremiah 8 we find more enlightenment on the subject, Many other quotations can be made but lack of space forbids. A literal translation of prophecy conveys the impression that the Holy Land will eventually be a refuge for the elect of both Jews and Gentiles, and that the heathen will not be allowed to profane its soil. However, this period of blessedness may be far in the future. It may be that an enlarged area may be acquired by taking in all Syria, and a part of Mesopotamia, in addition to the land extending to the Euphrates. But who can foreknow the destiny of this country wherein have occurred the most remarkable events of history—events entirely independent of national environment? The emigration of a million Jews to Palestine will be a fitting sequel to General Allenby's conquest and expulsion of the Turk who has long been a barrier to its progress and development. Moreover, it will be a true revival of national life after an exile of eighteen centuries, often coupled with persecution, While many are disinterested the subject is facinating to those that believe that the Holy Land has a glorious future, and that its famous stronghold will become in truth the'abode of peace and in the words of the Psalmist, 'the city of the great King' (C. M. S. Hudson, Ohio)."

"To the Editor of the News: The history of the Jews is a tale of endless persecution. Crucified in Rome, burned in Spain, banished from England, murdered in Russia, such is the pitiful tale! We in the twentieth century, however, attribute these unjust persecutions to the low standards of civilization existing in the world during those trying times, and say that those were the ages of barbarism, with the Jew as the scapegoat of every occurrence, whether political, social, or otherwise, The evolution of man was the bettering of the condition of the Jew. The world slowly opened her eyes, and saw before her the shameful yet pitiable state of a portion of the human race. The awakening of the world meant the inauguration of a new and better era of civilization, with the Jew as a prominent factor. He entered the fields of sculpture, music, law, medicine, literature; and everywhere he found his place. The Jew, the tortured Jew, was beginning to live! Now we are living in the twentieth century; the age in which civilization has attained its highest altitude. But the Jew is still the victim of persecution in Europe Why? And we are answered, 'Because he is a Jew.' In eastern Europe, in Poland, in Ukraine, we hear his voice crying, 'Mercy! mercy!' And we are tempted to exclaim, 'What! The Jew is being massacred! and in the twentieth century! Has the civilization of the world receded to its former barbaric standand? Forbid it, Almighty God!' We feel a pang in our hearts; our consciences trouble us; the Jew is being massacred! Our hands tremble; our voices quiver, we read, the Jew is being massacred! We recollect our own history; our ancestors fought for the inalienable right of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; the Jew fought side by side with them, bled with and for us in our past war; our reward was and is democracy, and his, O God, the Jew is being massacred! Is that his reward? The eyes of the Jews are turned westward! Westward to America! He looks to the great republic; he outstretches his hands; tears flow from his eyes as blood did from his body; he pleads for 'mercy! mercy!' no longer from his merciless oppressor, but from the land of noble America! America, the friend of the persecuted! Long live America, her ideals, her institutions! May she answer the Jew, 'I am your friend! your brother fought for me; I lend my voice in your behalf! Europe, no more shall the world ring with the cry, the Jew is being massacred' (Isadore Moidel, Warren, Ohio)."

The following editorial entitled "The Zionist Outlook," appeared in The Cleveland Plain Dealer May 6, 1920: "Zionists in America and in Europe are rejoicing that the San Remo conference, after taking cognizance of the difficulties which have arisen from Arab pretensions in Palestine, reiterated the Balfour statement of the allies determination to set up a Jewish state in the Jewish homeland. In spite of the fact that Feisal is established at Damascus, and lays claim to sovereignty of all the land from the Lebanon south to the Hedjaz, the Zionists believe that the allies and especially Great Britain, will make good their promise, and will in some manner induce Feisal to give up his claim to the Zionist state which is planned to be co-estensive with the ancient realm ruled by king Solomon. Next Sunday and Monday an extraordinary convention of American Zionists will be held at New York and practical plans will be prepared for the irrigation, afforestation, and sanitation of Palestine. The Zionists are now prepared to erect 2000 homes in northern and southern Palestine, and to start immigration to the region best adapted to the settlers. Plans are also under way for the enlistment of a special Jewish legion to relieve the British, who have been policing Jerusalem and other Palestinian cities. There is a general feeling among the Zionists that Feisal, who has already proved himself a very intelligent Arab, will place no serious difficulties in the way of the realization of the Zionist program. Were they not convinced that realization is at hand they would hesitate to make such definite plans as those which are now being discussed. There seems to be little doubt that a Jewish Palestine will be one of the beneficial outcomes of the great war,"

A Creed? Absolutely No!

UNDER THE above caption the writer is pleased to read an article in your issue of July 5, in criticism of efforts being put forth with a view to gathering the churches of God together in General Assembly, as also criticism of the methods being used to that end.

Inasmuch as the author has apparently labored under a radical misconception of the motives prompting those who are carrying on this labor, I ask the privilege of briefly reviewing some of his references.

No-one is hunting for "big business." All realize that this is the day of "small things." This however does not forbid the assembling of "small things" into one common work, to the end that said "small things" may accomplish all possible in the fields of their natural activity, One of the purposes before us is to bring as many of these "small things" together into one compact harmonious working order as is possible, with a view to serving our Master more devotedly, and thus encourage the "small things" that already are, and persuade others to belittle themselves that Christ, the Great One, may save them them.

The basis on which the movement of a General Assembly is founded is the truth already stated in Scriptures that Christ's faithful followers "are one body in Christ." Not that they are to become one body, nor that they shall strive to exist as one body, but the fact, established from on high, that all such "are one body in Christ." "Ye are all one in Christ Jesus." Present tense. A present fact. This is in complete harmony with the memorable prayer of our Savior, John 17, verse 20 cites the Savior as praying, not alone for the disciples of his immediate day, "but for them also who shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one."

"One body in Christ . . . . . members one of another" is therefore an established fact. Established by God himself who"set the members everyone of them in the body," to the end that though the members were many they should constitute "yet but one body." Nor is there more than one body of Christ.

DIVISIONS, FACTIONS

Faithfulness to the Master thus demands that every individual person regarding self as a member of that body, should use every possible diligence to co-work with every other member of same body.

Divisions, factions and such like are the fruits of carnality, "The works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, , . . wrath, strife, seditions (divisions), heresies; . . . they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God" (Gal. 5:19-21). "Whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions (margin, factions), are ye not carnal?" (1 Cor. 3:3). Such can but tend to injure the several members as well as wound the Master, the member's Head.

But those in Christ are to reckon themselves "alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:11), Those who are "risen with Christ" are to mortify the members which are upon the earth" (Col. 3:15). All such are "new creatures in Christ Jesus." Therefore they have

NO NECESSITY OF A CREED

For, in fact, they are "one in Christ." It remains for them to realize that they are necessarily "members one of another." As such they should have an ardent desire for the closest of fellowship with one another. Such fellowship, under the operation of the orderly provisions of Scripture, would promote a' 'unity of faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the fulness of Christ" (Eph. 4:11-16).

Divisions are perhaps mostly created, and perpetuated by humanly ordained creeds. Unity is the result of being "one in Christ."

By "creed" the writer has in mind such "articles of faith," etc., as are customarily drafted by an individual, or a group, with a view of determining Christian fellowship.

The effort toward a General Assembly of the church of God is with a view to unifying into one fellowship and working force, as many as possible of those who are serving the Master. To establish a creed, in the general acceptation of the word would be to create new division. Our effort is to unify and consolidate with a view to more mutual edification and greater honor to the Lord.

It is not the purpose of the writer to endeavor to refute the criticisms that were offered in your issue of July 5. Such criticisms were perfectly in order. But the writer does fish to make a few statements with a view to explaining the attitude of those who drafted the "Policy," a part of which was quoted in said article. Kindly notice the first sentence, "Our whole policy shall be conducted with a view to maintain the unity of Christian spirit." One in Christ is thus the fundamental thought. One common service. Aiding one another in united effort unto mutual growth and in the proclamation of the things pertaining to him, his kingdom and his salvation.

Because of the fact that there are so many minor factions, divisions, disintegrated portions among those of us calling ourselves by the name church of God, it was felt, that for purposes of a working basis, a brief statement of things which we in common agree upon should be declared as a basis upon which we would unite our various abilities for common effort. This statement was not presumed by the committee drafting same to be perfect, or to cover any or every phase of thought.

Further, the brotherhood in General Assembly may wish to revise the entire statement.

In the mean time let the reader realize that it requires far less effort to tear down than it does to build. A single match may quickly nullify the prolonged labor of numerous builders,

With no effort to sustain the thoughts therein decared in afore mentioned Policy, the writer agrees that a Mohammedan would accept declaration "a," "the oneness and omnipotence of God." but would he accept sentence c, or d, or e, or f, or g? Shall we therefore eliminate sentence "a" simply because Mohammedans believe in God? or should we eliminate "the inspiration of the Scriptures" simply because most non Christians would accept that statement? But this is sufficient. May each one analyse these thoughts for himself.

As for surmising that there are veiled motives, may I assert that there is but one veiled or unveiled motive under consideration? It is unity of spirit and service and honor, to our God and his Son; the discouragement of factionalism, sectionalism, and divisions of all kinds; the true edification of one and all of the followers of Christ· these are the only prompting motives.

Just why the thought of a General Assembly of the church of God should be repugnant now to any who a decade ago took such active part therein, is a question. The whole matter has been faithfully presented to the brotherhood at large. No secret plans have been or are being formulated. One and all are urged to study the question from their own individual point of view and scriptural understanding. Previously to formulating any definite step, everyone whose name and address could be obtained, was urged to express their own personal judgment. Inasmuch as the judgment of those reporting was nearly unanimous in favor of the effort, and the spirit in which it was conducted, the committee appointed to obtain such judgment and act upon same, felt under obligation to issue a call for one and all to convene and consider these things, All are therefore invited to meet at Waterloo, Ia., Aug. 28 to Sept. 4, with one common spirit of Christ, and an ardent fervent desire to honor and serve him and in such service to aid in the best possible way every member of his body.

Brethren, mortality is short-lived in all of us. What service we perform for the Master must be rendered now . Let us cease the continuance of our factions, strifes, jealousies, divisions—all of which indicate measures of selfish carnality, and let us, to the utmost, unite in common effort for mutual edification, unto his honor.

Soon he that is to come, will come, and his reward will be with him to give everyone according to his work. Let us lend the helping hand of Christian love to aid each in a preparation that their acceptance may be complete by him who bestows so fully of his grace. A central working quarters, supervised by the whole brotherhood oft convening in General Assembly, is suggested as a common means through which such efforts may be more efficiently rendered for a common uplift of ourselves and the calling of others through the gospel.

The foregoing private, individual thoughts, are submitted in Christian love, with a prayer that the Father will guide each one unto the closest fellowship with Christ, and with all who are "one in Christ."

Verbal Inspiration

THE PROCESS by which truth passes from the mind of God to the minds of men is described in 1 Cor. 2:7-15; the process is a direct supernatural revelation, and can be understood only by minds truly spiritual. "The logical conclusion of no verbal inspiration," says Ivan Panin, "is anti-Christian rationalism. The Lord Jesus, the apostles, the early church, the true church of all ages, have firmly held that all and every Scripture is inspired of God." That some even devout scholars could see their way to strenuously oppose verbal inspiration only shows that their logical power was inferior to their piety and learning. And in these days above all, it must be remembered, that a sin against logic, specially in a leader of men, may become in the sight of God as henious as breaches of the decalogue. Vicious logic has more than once made an outright murderer of an other-wise will meaning soul, And it cannot be affirmed too solemnly that if not wholly inspired to its very letter, the Book is not an anchor of Christian hope, but a spired's thread. From an unshakable assurance it becomes a plaything for the guesses of the latest "scholar." Again he says: "Frankly, the Bible is either verbally inspired and this is 'mechanical' inspiration, or it is inspired, not verbally, but only 'dynamically'—whatever that means (the writer confesses that though reputed to be a master of English, he has not the glimmer of a notion what dynamical inspiration is if not verbal). And if not verbally inspired, and therefore sure to contain inaccuracies, then the Bible is not worth the pains which Westcott, Hort, Geden, and the great army of lovers of the Book that have spent their lives upon its text. . . . A book that contains inaccuracies, and, therefore, falsehoods, while claiming all along to be of God, should be hated, not loved. It is this issue that must be met by those, who victimized by their own phraseology are loth to cast away the Bible as a fallible book, and yet fear the bugbear of 'mechanical' (meaning verbal) inspiration,"

I. To infallibly inspire the matter of the Bible without inspiring the words in which the matter is revealed is an impossibility.

Words are the substance of language. If the language is inspired, the words must be. The words of Scripture have been the occasion of study for learned men for ages. Thus being above common comprehension, surely the many "unlearned and ignorant men" who wrote them, must have been inspired by a power above themselves. Even the prophets wrote so far beyond their own understanding that they were obliged to make a study of their own words (1 Pet. 1:10-12).

II, The perfect will of a perfect Father can be conveyed through inspired words.

To legal heirs and will and testament is a very important document. The very divine nature is bestowed upon God's sons and daughters through his Will and Testament (2 Pet. 1:4). As his nature is infallible, so must be the revelation which describes it. No revelation can be said to be infallible when its words can be said to suit the whims of the finite men who uttered them. If so, as well employ a hacking butcher to perform a serious operation, in place of a skilled surgeon who can cut clean with one accurate stroke of the lance. The Word of God both cuts and heals; first it convicts of sin, in the Old Testament, and then at the same time it makes possible righteousness in the New Testament. "The chastisement of our peace was upon him," Surely he who made the original creation perfect has given us a perfect revelation as to the way back to redemption. The description of the way back is beyond the power of men, and yet it has been given to us through man. We should take heed to such an important will.

III. The Bible witnesses to its own verbal inspiration.

We have already stated what the Bible has to say as to the process of inspiration (1 Cor. 2:7-15). It speaks in words taught of the Spirit. The whole attitude of Jesus toward the Old Testament, as disclosed in his words, both before his death and after his resurrection, confirms its truthfulness and divine origin, and he explicitly ascribes the Pentateuch to Moses, He also predicted the New Testament revelation (John 16:12-15). The writers of the New Testament invariably treat the Old Testament as authoritative and inspired.—The World's Crisis.

"They Spake Often One to Another"

DEAR BROTHER BROWN:

HAVING RECEIVED a letter from Brother George Dowle, and learning he is no longer able to take care of himself, and has gone to the Christian Advent Home in Florida, I would like it made known in The Restitution. It was Brother Dowle who taught me the truth of God's word and took me to Cleveland were I was immersed into the name of Christ for the remission of past sins, and to walk in newness of life. Thinking those who know Brother Dowle will be glad to know he is taken care of, and also there may be some brothers in Florida who would be glad to visit him and give him a hand of cheer, that he may fight the good fight of faith to the end.

I remain your brother in Christ,

ELLIS OSBORNE.

The Inspiration of The Bible

TO BEGIN with the Old Testament:

(a) Consider how the writers speak of the origin of their messages. Dr. James H. Brookes is authority for saying, "Thus saith the Lord," or the equivalent is used by them 2000 times. Suppose we eliminate this phrase and its necessary context from the Old Testament in every instance, one wonders how much of the Old Testament would remain,

(b) Consider how the utterances of the Old Testament writers are introduced into the New. Take Matt. 1:22, as an illustration: "Now all this was done that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Lord through the prophet." It was not the prophet who spoke, but the Lord who spake through the prophet.

(c) Consider how Christ and his apostles regard the Old Testament. He came "not to destroy but to fulfill the law and the prophets" (Matt. 5:17). "The Scripture cannot be broken" (John 10:35). He sometimes used single words as the basis of important doctrine, twice in Matt. 22, at verses 31, 32 and 42-45. The apostles do the same (Gal. 3:16; Heb. 2:8, 11 and 12:26, 27).

(d) Consider what the apostles directly teach upon the subject. Peter tells us that "No prophecy ever came by the will of man, but men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit" (2 Pet. 1:21, R. V.). "Prophecy" here applies to the word written as is indicated in the preceding verse, and means not merely the foretelling of events, but the utterances of any word of God without reference to time past, present, or to come. As a matter of fact, what Peter declares is, that the will of man had nothing to do with any part of the Old Testament, but that the whole of it, from Genesis to Malachi, was inspired of God.

Of course Paul says the same, in language even plainer, in 2 Tim. 3:16: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable." The phrase "inspiration of God" means literally breathed. The whole of the Old Testament is God-breathed, for it is to that part of the Bible the language particularly refers, since the New Testament as such was not then generally known.

As this verse is given somewhat differently in the Revised Version we dwell upon it a moment longer. It there reads, "Every Scripture inspired of God is also profitable," and the caviller is disposed to say that therefore some Scripture may be inspired and some may not be, and that the profitableness extends to the former and not to the latter.

But aside from the fact that Paul would hardly be guilty of such a weak truism as that, it may be stated in reply first, that the King James rendering of the passage is not only the most consistent Scripture, but the more consistent Greek, Several of the best Greek scholars of the period affirm this, including some the the revisers themselves who did not vote for the change. And secondly, even the revisers place it in the margin as of practical equal authority with their preferred translation, and to be chosen by the reader if desired. There are not a few devout Christians, however, who would be willing to retain the rendering of the Revised Version as being stronger than the King James, and who would interpolate a word in applying it to make it mean, "Every Scripture (because) inspired of God is also profitable." We believe that both Gaussen and Wordsworth take this view, two as staunch defenders of plenary inspiration as could be named.—JAS. M. GREY,

Confections or Jesus?

IF I should ask our young people which they loved best, confections or Jesus, I wonder what they would say? Every one of them enjoys having a box of delicious chocolates or of home made fudge to share with friends, and I do not question this right to such pleasures; yet when we come to such place of stress as we have come to now, we must give up something to give proof of our love. God is testing us here; the needs of Christ's cause are very urgent and pitifully appeal to our hearts, It seems to me as I write that I can see his tender eyes looking pleadingly at me, as if questioning which I love best, the sweets that gratify taste but for a moment, or him? And quickly I answer, "'you Jesus; you!" I will give up part even of my necessary food, go without Sunday dresses, forbear getting new furnishings for my house that the gospel that saves may go to men.

Living expenses are very high; we dare not spend a penny for apything that we can do without, we owe so much to God. The question of stewardship is a very important and solemn one; for everything we have comes from God. He gave us ourselves, and we who love him can say from the bottom of our hearts, "I thank thee O my creator, that thou hast given me life!" for with life he has given us all things richly to enjoy—reason home, friends, clothing, food, his Book, his Son, his care, his love, his precious promise of a life to come. Are we showing our gratitude by bringing our thanks offerings to him?

The converts from heathenism do this. One of these in Shanghai gave $500 toward building a new church and when asked how he could give so much, answered, "I am a very fortunate man. I have a lovely wife, and God has given me two lovely children. I just want to show him I appreciate what he is doing for me. How could I give less?

The love of Jesus sometimes so appeals to the hearts of very small children that they will give up candy for Jesus' sake. A niece of mine said one day to her little daughter, "Here are some pennies to buy a loaf of bread, and a penny for you to buy candy with,"

The child took the money, put on her hood and wrap, and marched to her Sunday school-box. The mother watched her put out the hand that held the penny and then draw it back as if she hardly knew whether she could give up the candy or not. But at last it went into the box proving that she loved Jesus best. And so if converted heathens "count their blessings" and return to God their thank-offerings, and if a little child can give up the coveted sweets for Jesus' sake, ought not we?

One thousand sticks of candy for one thousand children $10. Little folks save your pennies for Jesus. 1000 boxes of chocolates for 1000 young people, $50 at least. Save the money. It will help.

Little drops of water
Little grains of sand,
Build the mighty ocean.

An Infidel Silenced

THE FOLLOWING conversation occurred on a journey between Bristol and Birmingham,, England, Mr. R. entered the express for the north about 12:20. He found the carriage nearly full of commercial travellers, and sitting opposite him a stout gentleman about forty years of age who, after looking at him very hard several times, leaned forward and said:

"Would you mind me asking you a few questions ?"

"No," said Mr. R., somewhat surprised at the manner in which he was approached.

The traveller then said, "Do you believe in the existence of a God ?"

"Yes."

Turning to the other occupants of the carriage, he said: "Gentleman, I would esteem it a favor if you would listen to the questions I put to this gentleman; I have put the same to dozens of people and have had always the same answers, and doubtless I shall obtain them here again. Then we can discuss the matter!"

Turning again to Mr. R., he said:

"You believe in the existence of a God ?"

"Yes."

"Have you ever seen him ?"

"No."

"Can you measure him ?"

"No."

"Weigh him ?"

"No."

"Feel him ?"

"No."

"Smell him ?"

"No."

"Taste him ?"

"No."

"Do you know anything about him humanly speaking ?"

"No."

Then, with a look of disgust, he turned once more to the other travellers and said: "Gentlemen, it is the same answer that I have always obtained; they know nothing whatever about him, and yet there are tens of thousands who blindly put their faith in this person they call God. If we were to apply such reasoning to our business where would we be ? Gentlemen it's a marvel to me, and something that I cannot comprehend."

While this "oration" was going on Mr, R. was thinking of what he would say when it was finished. Whereupon, going over in front of the traveller's face, he said, "What moves these fingers ?"

The infidel hesitated a moment, and then said, "Life,"

"Good," said Mr. R., then turning to the others he said, "Gentlemen, I have never put the questions to anyone that I am going to put to this gentlemen, but before I put them I know what the answers will be. After we have obtained them we can discuss the matter."

Still moving his fingers before the infidel's face he said, "You have already informed me that life moves these fingers."

"Have you ever seen life ?"

"No," mumbled he.

"Can you measure life ?"

"No," Drawled out.

"Weigh life ?"

"No" with great difficulty.

"Feel life ?"

"No," Spat out.

"Smell life ?"

"No," Shouted.

"Taste life ?"

"No," Groaned.

"By the way, do you know anything about life, or where it is located in the body ?"

"No," Somehow gotten out.

Turning to the others Mr. R. said: "Gentlemen, here is a man who believes my fingers are moved by "life," but he knows nothing whatever about "life." And believe me, there are tens of thousands of people who believe the same thing, and know nothing whatever about it, They use it, walk about with it, eat by it, use all their senses with it, and yet they think it is 'life.' Were we to apply such foolish notions to our business where should we be ? Why, our business would not stand for an hour."

The infidel was much relieved when the train arrived at Cheltenham where he got off.—Christian Workers Magazine.

The Nature of Man

IT IS the fashion to decry everything tending to materialism. Theology, by long and persistent endeavor has evolved a system to discredit "material" as altogether evil in itself. For instance the old Bible doctrine of a kingdom to be yet established upon this material earth, with a material King, Jesus reigning and ruling, resurrected and "changed" material men and women in righteousness, is pronounced a "materialistic view" and so spiritualized and frittered away to a sky kngdom with an invisible King reigning in the immortal hearts of his people in some shadowy, ghostly land, "beyond the bounds of time and space" wherever that may be.

A false and vicious eschatology has blinded our guides in the idea that man is not a material being at all, but a spiritual being, temporarily associated and confined in matter soon to be emancipated from its grossness, and to be freed to an endless progression of advancement to "higher being" in moonshine. Modren thought delights to dwell on this anticipated development of the immortal personality, and our religious magazines are full of such articles, Analyze Lyman Abbot's matured thoughts in the "Outlook," for instance, and you will find that he assumes "life in self" to every human soul, deterdined so, at its creation unconditioned and independent of God, thus rearing itself in proud arrogance and exclaiming with God, "I live for ever."

SPIRITUALISM

The modern cult of spirituaism is but one step on in logical sequence. The spirit is the man, says theology, living and progressing on for ever and ever, sentiment, alert and keenly alive. "Quite so," says the cult. "We will try and have rommunion with them"; whereupon the churches stand aghast! To hold that dead Browning is very much alive and called to "higher service" in "glory land," is permissible and altogether orthodox, but to believe that a medium had somehow got on to him and made Browning express himself more or less profoundly, is rank heresy!

To hold that the "souls of believers do immediately enter into glory," is sound Presbyterian orthodoxy, but to attempt to have a talk with John Knox is anathema!

MAN

According to modern conception, the body is an inconsiderable fraction of our nature, mortal and corruptible. It is the spirit which is the true man, the unseen, everlasting personality. The body indeed scarcely deserves the name of humanity; it endures a few years. The "soul" is the inhabitant of eternity, the "great coequal of God." the coequal of angels in the possession of immortality, This is the basic theology of such mighty men as Butler, Wesley, Edwards, etc. I prefer Moses and Isaiah. According to these, the above grandiose style of thought is reversed. This despised body is spoken of as THE MAN, "God formed man from the dust of the ground," and his whole being takes his name from the earth whence it sprang. He was called Adam from Adamah, the earth or ground. His distinguished name is taken from that corporeal organization which is supposed by theologians and idealists to be little better than a cloak of the human spirit. And when he fell, Moses attributes these words to the Creator, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return"; no mention even being made of that immortal intelligence which is supposed to constitute the veritable personality which had committed the offence.

Longfellow, an indifferent Bible student, but a beautiful poet, commenting on the above threat, says, "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return was not spoken of the soul"; and all Christendom in hearty approval quote this saying as true and pithy. Pray, whom was the Creator addressing but the intelligent, responsible personality.

THIEF

It is curious, how, in another mood, this same Christendom will insist that the words to the dying thief: "This day thou shalt be with me in paradise," that here, THOU was spoken of the soul. I could multiply such instances from the Bible, but this is enough to show how unsafe a guide is Longfellow, who further in his "In Memoriam, has done much to keep Christendom astray. A system of eschatology which plays fast and loose in such a way must surely be an outrage on common sense, false and vicious.

CREATION

Had the Mosaic idea of human nature been that of modern psychology, that man consisted of a mortal body and an immortal soul, it is inconceivable that it should not have appeared in this authoritative account of his creation. (Remember I am addressing Christians believing in the Bible, not infidels, atheists and agnostics). Clearly Moses desired to say something as to man's dignity in respect of the nature bestowed on him, for he speaks of being made in the "divine image"; and if deathlessness be his inalienable attribute that was the place to declare it. But nowhere in the whole Bible does Scripture confirm the lofty opinion of Christendom of the immortal nature of man.

If, as some are heartily led to argue that because man was man in the image of God, therefore he is immortal, I would reply that for the same cause man was made in the image of God, therefore all equally superlative attributes of the Creator! Clearly, this proves too much, and therefore nothing at all.

The New Birth

IN THE October 1st, 1907 number of Word and Work," on the last page. Sister Alden suggests that the living remnant of the church at the coming of our Lord will, or rather must die in order to experience the "new birth." This is a new idea to me and perhaps new to nearly all the readers of "Word and Work." I have always understood and taught that believers, who are alive when the Lord comes, will not experience death; that they pass from the one state into the other in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye; that the Adamic life reaches unto the life eternal, no death coming between. Many of the old writers called the action in their case a "deathless rapture"—a beautiful phrase expressing a beautiful thought. There is surely scriptural ground for such poetic words, Says Paul: "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not precede (R. V.) them who are asleep." "Are alive" and "remain" is positive proof of the fact that this class will not die. They are alive "unto" and remain "unto" the coming of the Lord. There is death affirmed of these, but the very opposite, Twice in this 4th chapter of 1 Thess. he affirms the same of this little remnant. They are alive when the dead rise first, and the two classes are caught up together to meet their descending Lord.

I have not exhausted the proof of this passage and its parallel 1 Cor. 15:51. In this 1 Thess, letter he affirms death of the one class in these words, "We shall not all sleep," which is equivalent to "We shall not all die." The apostle contradicts what Sister Alden modestly suggests must be true in order to a spirit birth. Sister Alden says Paul did not say "We shall not all die." But this is just what he did say by figure of speech,

In both passages he used sleep as the equivalent of die and dead. In each he is careful to take off the figure and give us the literal, as did our Lord when he used the word "dead" as the explanation of the word "sleepeth," the use of which gave rise to wrong understanding on the part of his audience. All, in the most absolute sense, will not die. There will be an exception in the future.

Further, Paul, after affirming that the living will not die, affirms in contrast with this, "But we shall all be changed," and, after stating the change that passes upon the dead, then says, "And we shall be changed." Those who do not die, live on, passing in a moment from a life of frailty into a life of eternal vigor and youth. Paul in the first Thessalonian letter declares that what he says in reference to both the dead and the living, he says, "by the word of the Lord." The word of the Lord in John 11:25, 26 harmonizes with the former passage. The one class that had died previously to that auspicious hour, live by virtue of a resurrection, The other class are living believers who shall never die. I will quote the passage: "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me though he die (R. V.) yet shall he live, and whososever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." It appears to the writer that belief is here affirmed of the believer on this side of the change that makes him deathless instead of on the other side, or deathless state. Life is first predicated, then belief. This is natural and reasonable, for belief is a condition of eternal life. There could exist no necessity for saying that the dead, after they are raised will believe. It is not anyone who is alive in that day, but whosoever is alive and believing in him will never die. The rendering in the Diaglott is, "And no one living and believing in me, shall die to the age."

Jesus in his conversation to Nicodemus teaches the absolute need of being born of water and of Spirit in order to an entrance into the kingdom of God. He says nothing about dying in order to the birth of the Spirit. This is unaccountable if death is a factor of the new birth and essential to it. A man, to enter the kingdom, must be born anew, but not a hint that he must die in order to this birth. The one is found in the Savior's language but the other is not; so we must conclude that a man can be born anew without dying, The Spirit's action on a mortal, living believer, working a marvelous change of nature, a change so unconceivably great as to put him beyond the possibility of dying, must be sufficient to constitute the birth of the Spirit. I think the great Teacher was contemplating such a change while engaged in serious conversation with Nicodemus.

Starting with the last moment of unconsciousness and lifelessness of the believer in the repose of death, and ending with an immortalized and beautiful human form, is wrought by the Spirit instantaneously, a change which may appropriately be called the new birth. Is this change greater than that which takes place in the living believer? The result of the Spirit's operation, so to speak, is the same in both cases, a physical organization of ever enduring quality, a child of God bearing the image of the heavenly. May both reader and writer be worthy to be changed in that day.—JOHN L. WINCE, Deceased.

Ye must be born again.

Wilful Sin

For if we sin wilfully after that we have received a knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins (Heb. 10:26).

THIS IS the only occurrence of the word "wilfully" in the Scriptures of truth, and to get a proper understanding of what constitutes wilful sin, it is necessary that we have the word defined. Jamieson, Faussett and Brown make it mean "presumptively"; the Greek, "willingly," Webster, "Obstinately," "stubbornly," "by design," "with set purpose."

Having these definitions, it is easy to go on. We understand at once that no ordinary sin is meant, no sin of ignorance or infirmity, such as the best of us are liable to commit every day of our lives: but "a deliberate sinning against the spirit," "a sinning presumptuously and perseveringly against Christ's redemption for us and the spirit of grace in us."

It is in fact apostatizing from the faith, giving the whole thing up and going back to the old wicked life. That is what constitutes wilful sin,

We can see that this is so from the whole tenor of the chapter; indeed it as good as affirmed in the expressions: "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering;" "Cast not away therefore your confidence which hath great recompense of reward;" "If any man draw back my soul shall have no pleasure in him;" "But we are not of them that draw back unto perdition, but of them that believe to the saving of the soul" i.e. continues in the faith until the "little while" shall end, and "he that shall come will come and will not tarry." For this "drawing back" was more than backsliding. The backslidden man does not become careless and indifferent with deliberate purpose, and, with set determined defiance of God, deny the truth and the word that bought him. He can be reclaimed. But for the wilful sinner there is no hope. Jesus says: "All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men and blasphemies wherewith they shall blaspheme; but he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Spirit hath never forgiveness but is in danger of eternal damnation, because they said he has an "unclean spirit" (Mark 3:28-30; Matt. 12:31, 32; Luke 12:8-10; 1 John 5:16), That sin is unto death. "It shall not be forgiven, neither in this world, nor in the world to come." Other sins if truly repented of, can find pardon through the atoning blood of Christ, but not this.

He who "does despite to the spirit of grace," calling it "an unclean spirit" or that of the heathen god Beelzebub, trampling thus underfoot the Son of God and counting the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified, no more than the blood of a common man, and recanting from the truth with horrid blasphemies of Christ, applying the same epithets to him that he did to Moloch: what can there remain for this wilful sinner than "a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries"—not their sins but them!

"He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses." That death was merely the cutting short of this life by the law of the land. A sorer punishment and more certain and irretrievable awaits the wilful sinner—he will utterly perish in his own corruption (2 Pet. 3:12). Such persons "have forsaken the right way, and have followed Baalam." For if "after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning." Then there was hope; now there is none. "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." "Vengeance" he says, belongeth unto me. I will recompense, saith the Lord."

"See that ye refuse not him that speaketh from heaven." Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together. Draw not back into perdition. Die rather than recant,

S. ROXANA WINCE.

We are not to seek pain; but when it is sent to us we are not to fret and grumble at it, but try and go cheerfully along, as though we did not feel it. It is for our good, our purification—for nothing is so purifying as pain, if it be rightly borne.

If a man meets with injustice, it is not required that he shall not be roused to meet it; but if he is angry after he has had time to think upon it, that is sinful. The flame is not wrong, but the coals are.

We are all writing books—histories of our own lives, and we can omit nothing, soften nothing. Only the naked truth can be marked upon those pages,

The Shekinah Glory

THE SHEKINAH Glory was the symbol of God's presence to his people in olden times. The Lord went before them, by day in a pillar of cloud to lead them, and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light, that they might go by day and by night. He took not away the pillar of cloud by day nor the pillar of fire by night from before the people, save the one time when it moved and stood behind them, veiling them from the eyes of the Egyptians, but giving light to all in their encampment.

In their march to Canaan, when it rested on the tabernacle they rested, whether for a day, a month or a year; and when it moved forward they moved.

But we had never thought of it as something that would return to earth to be a visible sign to the nations, that the tabernacle of God was with men, and that he was their God and they his people.

Yet the prophet so states in his vision of the kingdom (Isa. 4:4-6). This is how it reads: "When the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughter of Zion and shall have purged the blood from the midst thereof by the spirit of judgment and by the spirit of burning. And the Lord will create upon every dwelling place of Mount Zion and upon her assemblies a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night, for upon all the glory shall be a defence, And there shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the day time from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for a covert from storm;" (Obviously for Israel, still in the mortal state as subjects of Christ and his saints as co-rulers with him).

Jamieson, Faussett and Brown take this cloud by day and this fire by night to be the Shekinah glory, and say that "upon whatever the glory shall rest there shall be a defence;" or rather, thy question if it may not mean this, "as the symbol of God's presence it shall ensure safety." So it was," they say, "to Israel against the Egyptians at the Red Sea" (Exod. 14:19, 20). So shall it be to literal Jerusalem hereafter.

But before I had looked up what Jamieson, Faussett and Brown had to say on the matter, my attention had been drawn to this fourth chapter of Isaiah by an article on "The Coming Theocracy," written for The Banner of Israel, London, by F. W. Godsat, of British Columbia.

I was at once intensely interested as we always are when any new things relating to our future home are brought out. We cannot help but be, for we expect to move there before long, after a brief tarrying with our Lord, somewhere in the domains of God.

We have been singing for years, with rapturous delight—

The kingdom is coming! O tell ye the story:
God's banner exalted shall be;
The earth shall be full of his knowledge and glory
As waters that cover the sea.

but had a very dim idea as to what that glory would be. We knew there was honor and glory attendant upon being saved, to have the palms of victory and crowns of gold; but never imagined "the glory of the Lord" that Habakkuk says, "the knowledge of shall fill the earth as waters cover the sea," had anything to do with the pillar of cloud and the pillar of fire that led the Israelites from Egypt to Canaan.

I had read in "Fables of Infidelity and Facts of Faith" by Patterson, that the planetary system to which our earth belongs, is moving swifter than the swiftest railroad train to wards a region in the heavens lit up by suns of various hues, where the beauty and grandeur of the scene will be incomparably wonderful. I had supposed the earth on coming into this region would have fulfilled to her the language in Isaiah 20:26, where he says: "Moreover the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold as the light of seven days, in the day that the Lord bindeth up the breach of his people and healeth the stroke of their wound."

But, who knows? the language is literal language; there is no spiritualizing of it away. So it must mean just what it says. Who does not long to be over there?

But, Habakkuk says again (Hab. 3:3, 4): "His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise, and his brightness was as the light, he had rays coming forth from his hands" (R. V.). There are many other references that we might quote, but as some of them may be symbolic, and refer not to literal light but rather to the light of truth, as perhaps does Rev. 22:5, we will not give them.

The Shekinah Glory, however, will return to Jerusalem by the eastern gate, and will fill the house (Ezek. 43:4-7).

In 2 Mac. 2:7, 8 (R. V.), quoted by Mr. Godsat, when Jeremiah hid the tabernacle, the ark, and altar of incense, and some one followed him to mark the place, he rebuked them saying: "Yea, and the place shall be unknown until God gather the people together again and many come, and then shall the Lord disclose these things and the glory of the Lord shall be seen and the cloud." So it is certain that the Shekinah Glory will be one of the adjuncts of the coming kingdom and though there were but three or four instances of its manifestation in the gospel age, we know from these instances, something of what that glory will be like. It shone round about the shepherds, when the angel brought to them the news of the new born Messiah and "they were sore afraid" (Luke 2:9). It overshadowed the tranfigured Jesus (Luke 9:34), and made his companions, Peter and John afraid. It shone round about Saul (when near Damascus) with such brilliancy that he fell to the earth, blinded by its piercing rays, and trembling and astonished recognized that it was the resurrected Lord who was talking with him (Acts 9:3, 10, 17; 1 Cor. 15:8).

The brightness of the light that illuminated the countenance of Jesus when he appeared to John on the Island of Patmos, was like that which blinded Paul; it was as the sun shining in his strength. His eyes in that light, were as a flame of fire and his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace

The sight overwhelmed even the loving, trusting John. "He fell at his feet as one dead," How then can the foolish stand in his sight? And if the blackness, the darkness, the tempest, the burning of Mount Sinai, was so terrible that Moses said, "I exceedingly fear and quake," who can, who will be found worthy to stand unashamed before the flaming eyes and the glory of the Son of Man? Surely not the ones who are so overcharged with the cares of this life that they almost forget that Jesus and a new earth, filled with glory, is ever coming.

O dear ones, keep wide awake! We may be presented to Jesus in less than a month. We know not the hour of his coming, hence the greater need for watchfulness and preparedness, To be ready four days, and neglect to get ready the fifth, would be to loose our chance forever. The Shekinah Glory will soon cover the earth. Let the last prayer of David be our daily prayer. "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel who only doeth wonderful things; and blessed be his glorious name forever; and let the whole earth be filled with his glory! Amen, and Amen" (Psa. 72:18, 19).

The Kingdom of God

WHAT IS a kingdom? A country ruled by a king. How many elements in a kingdom? King, associate rulers,, capital city, territory, subjects and laws, Has God ever had a kingdom on earth? Yes. When and where? 1490 years B. C., in the promised land. In Exodus 19:6 we have God's words to Moses: "All the earth is mine, and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation."

From that time Israel was "God's kingdom on earth." Saul was appointed first king of God's kingdom (1 Sam. 8:6-22). After him David was placed upon the throne, but still the throne and kingdom was the Lord's (2 Sam. 5:3), God promised David that a Son of his should possess the throne and kingdom forever it being the kingdom of God still. David said of all his sons, the Lord had chosen Solomon to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel (1 Chron. 29:5). In 2 Chron. 9:8 we read that the queen of Sheba regarded the kingdom of Israel as the kingdom of God. Read also 1 Chron. 29:11, 23; 2 Chron. 13:5-8. God had sworn unto David: of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne (Psa. 132:11) The 12th verse follows with a conditional promise, thus: "If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them, their children shall also sit upon thy throne forever." Observe the oath and promise of the 11th verse refers to one particular seed of David, who would forever sit on his throne, so that he must be immortal. But till he come successive sons of David should occupy his throne, providing they kept God's covenant and testimonies. The lawful inference is, that if they did not keep the covenant and testimony there would be a break or suspension of David's rule. That is exactly what happened.

Is there any kingdom of God on earth now? No. By referring to Ezek. 21:25-27 we learn the prophet Ezekiel was sent to the last king on David's throne 2514 years ago with this message: "And thou profane and wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall cease. Thus saith the Lord God. Remove the diadem, take off the crown; this shall not be the same, Exalt him that is low and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it (the throne of David) and it shall be no more until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." Now God's kingdom is suspended until he come whose right it is. It was God's kingdom when overturned, and it will be God's kingdom when the one whose right it is sits on the throne again.

In the vision of Daniel's image the different parts of metal represented different kingdoms, under different rulers, but occupying the same territory and subjects. So the only change from one kingdom to another was in rulers and laws. When the time comes the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed (Dan. 2:31-44; 4:3; 7:14-18-27). Where is God to set up his kingdom? Here on this earth. How long will it stand? Forever, Who is to be king? Christ. What will be the capital city? Jerusalem. They shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord (Jer. 3:17; Micah 4:7, 8). The Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously (Isa. 24:23; 60:14; Matt. 5:35).

Who are the ancients he is to reign over? Israel (Isa. 11:11, 12; Jer. 31:31-33; Ezek. 36:27, 28). What promise did Christ make to his apostles? "Ye shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matt. 19:28; Luke 22:28-30). What part of the earth will they occupy? The land promised to Abraham (Gen. 12:7; 13:15; 15:18). Are the Gentiles to live in this land? No. All the land outside of the land promised to Abraham will be occupied by Gentile nations, Who will rule them? The Lord shall be king over all the earth (Zech. 14:9). The kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdom of our Lord, and of his Christ (Rev. 11:15). Who are to be associate rulers with Christ? The saints that are raised and given immortality when Christ comes (Rev. 3:21). Do all of them rule over the same subjects? No. The 144,000 sealed ones, out of the twelve tribes of Israel are rulers in the promised land, and the great multitude in Rev. 7:9 are the rulers over the Gentile nations.

TO RECAPITULATE

Christ is the Son of God by begettal (Luke 1:26-35! Matt. 1:18-25). Christ is the promised seed through whom all the nations of the earth are blessed (Gal. 3:16). Christ is the promised heir (Rom. 8:17; Gal. 3:29). Christ, with the nations, takes the place that the stone did with the image (Dan. 2:34).

Dear reader, the foregoing is the gospel, or things to be believed and obeyed in order to have a part in the first resurrection and become a ruler with Christ in God's kingdom. The invitation is: "Let him that heareth come" (Rev. 22:17). Will you come?

The Inspiration of The New Will

ARGUMENT FOR THE NEW TESTAMENT

WE ARE sometimse reminded that however strong and convincing the argument for the inspiration of the Old Testament, that for the New Testament is only indirect. "Not one of the evangelists tells us that he is inspired," says a certain theological professor, "and not one writer of an epistle, except Paul."

We shall be prepared to dispute this statement a little further, but in the meantime let us reflect that the inspiration of the Old Testament being assured as it is, why should similar evidence be required for the New ? Whoever competent to speak as a Bible authority knows that the unity of the Old and New Testament is the strongest demonstration of their common source. They are seen to be not two boks, but only two parts of one book.

To take then the analogy of the Old Testament, the foregoing argument proves its inspiration as a whole, although there were long periods separating the different writers, Moses and David, let us say, or David and Daniel, the Pentateuch and the Psalms, or the Psalms and the Prophets. As long, or longer, than between Malachi and Matthew, or Ezra and the Gospels. If then to carry conviction for the plenary inspiration of the Old Testament as a whole, it is not necessary to prove it for every book, why, to carry conviction for the plenary inspiration of the Bible, as a whole, it is necessary to do the same ?

We quote here a paragraph or two from Dr. Nathaniel West. He is referring to 2 Tim. 3:16, which he renders, "Every Scripture is inspired of God," and adds: "The distributive word 'every' is used not only to particularize each individual Scripture of the canon that Timothy had studied from his youth. but also to include along with the Old Testament the New Testament Scriptures extant in Paul's day, and any others, such as those that John wrote after him.

"The apostle Peter tells us that he was in possession, not merely of Paul's epistle, but 'all his epistles and places them canonically, in the same rank with what he calls 'the other Scripture,' i.e., of equal inspiration and authority with 'the word spoken before holy prophets, and the commandment of the Lord and Savior, through the apostles' (2 Pet. 3:2, 16).

"Paul teaches the same co-ordination of the Old and New Testament. Having referred to the Old as a unit, in his phrase 'Holy Scriptures,' which the revisers translate 'Sacred writings,' he proceeds to particularize. He tells Timothy that 'every Scripture, whether of Old or New Testament production, is inspired of God.' Let it be in the Pentateuch, the Psalms, the prophets, the historical books, let it be a chapter or verse; let it be in the gospels, the Acts, his own or Peter's epistles, or even John's writings, yet to be, still each part of the sacred collection is God-given and because of that possesses divine authority as part of the book of God."

We read this from Dr. West twenty years ago, and rejected it as his dictum. We read it today, with deeper and fuller knowledge of the subject, and we believe it to be true.

It is somwhat as follows that Dr. Gausssn in his exhaustive "Theopneustia" gives the argument for the inspiration of the New Testament.

(a) The New Testament is the later, and for that reason the more important revelation of the two, and hence if the former were inspired, is certainly must be true of the latter. The opening verses of the first and second chapters of Hebrews plainly suggest this: "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, , . . . therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard."

And this inference is rendered still more conclusive by the circumstance that the New Testament sometimes explains, sometimes proves, and sometimes even repeals ordinances of the Old Testament (See Matt. 1:22,23, for illustration of the first, Acts 13:13-39 for the second, and Gal. 5:6 for the third), Assuredly these things would not be true if the New Testament were not of equal, and, in a certain sense, even greater authority than the Old.

(b) The writers of the New Testament were of an equal or higher rank than those of the Old. That they were prophets is evident from such allusions as Rom. 16:25-27, and Eph. 3:4, 5. But that they were more than prophets is indicated in the fact that wherever in the New Testament prophets and and apostles are both mentioned, the last named is always mentioned first (1 Cor. 12:28; Eph, 2:20; 4:11). It is also true that the writers of the New Testament had a higher mission than those of the Old, since they were sent forth by Christ, as the Father had sent him (John 20:21). They were to go not to a single nation only (as Israel), but into all the world (Matt. 28:19). They received the keys of the kingdom of heaven (Matt. 16:19). And they are to be pre-eminently rewarded in the regeneration (Matt. 19:28). Such considerations and comparisons as these are not to be overlooked in estimating the authority by which they wrote.

(c) The writers of the New Testament were especially qualified for their work, as we see in Matt. 10:19, 20; Mark 3:11; Luke 12:2; John 14:26, and John 16:13, 14. These passages will be dwelt on more at length in a later division of our subject, but just now it may be noticed that in some of the instances, inspiration of the most absolute character was promised as to what they should "speak"—the inference being warranted that none the less they would be guided in what they wrote. Their spoken words were limited and temporary in their sphere, but their written utterances covered the whole range of revelation and were to last forever. If in the one case they were inspired. how much more in the other ?

(d) The writers in the New Testament directly claim divine inspiration. See Acts 15:23-29, where, especially at verse 28, James is recorded as saying, "For it seemed good to the Holy Spirit and to us, to lay upon y ou no greater burden than these necessary things." It is affirmed very clearly that the Holy Spirit is the real writer of the letter in question and simply using the human instruments for his purpose. Add to this 1 Cor. 2:13, where Paul says: "Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wsdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual," or as the margin of the Revised Version puts it, 'limparting things to the spiritual men." In 1 Thess. 2:13, the same writer says: "For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received not the word of man but as it is the truth the word of God." In 2 Pet. 3:2 the apostle places his own words on a level with those of the prophets of the Old Testament, and in verses 15 and 16 of the same chapter he does the same with the writings of Paul, classifying them "with the other Scriptures." Finally, in Rev. 2:7, although it is the apostle John who is writing, he is authorized to exclaim: "He that hath an ear let him hear what te Spirit saith unto the churches," and so on throughout the epistles to the seven churches.- JAMES M. GRAY.

Belief With The Heart

WITH THE heart, man believeth unto salvation (Rom. 10:10). If ye believe in your heart that God raised Christ from the dead, thou shalt be saved (Rom. 109). If ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses, neither will your heavenly Father forgive you (Matt. 18:35). Out of the heart proced evil thoughts (Matt. 15:9). The devils believe and tremble (James 2:19),

What is belief ? Faith in doctrines one can have confidence in; the thing believed; as the articles of faith summarily formed is a creed. We find the words "belief," "truth," and "creed" are synonymous. James says faith without works of righteousness is dead (James 2:16). From these Scriptures we are led to believe that one may believe the Bible creed, have the faith of the things concerning the name of Jesus the anointed and the things of the kngdom of God; yet if this belief is only received in the mind it is without saving grace. Why ? Because if believed with the heart, or affections it becomes active faith (James 2:18).

To go farther, if the belief of the gospel is followed by obedience in water (baptism), is this sufficient to save ? No; because we are commanded in our daily life to walk in Christ after we have received him (Col. 2:6); to bring forth the fruits of righteousness (right doing). Jesus gives us this criterion by which to know "living" (or heart) faith, as against mere intellectual assent in belief (Matt. 7:20),

Again, Christ says the way we glorify God is in our daily life (Matt. 5:16). We are known as his friends if we obey his commands (John 15:14). All men know we are Christ's by the manifestations of our love to him, not in mere words, but by loving one another as he loved us, which means being ready to sacrifice even our lives for them (1 John 3:10; John 13:35). In honor preferring brethren to ourselves (Rom. 12:10). By doing good to all men as we have opportunity, especially to the household of faith (Gal. 6:10) If we do these things, we are giving our bodies (the flesh) as a daily living sacrifive to God (Rom. 12:1). When we see one who is defrauding his brother of character, who is trying to get himself up by the downfall of another; when we see one trying to sow discord among brethren; when we see one maligning another trying to turn a brother from that one, that he himself may receive greater favor; when we see one turning from the poor, the hungry, or the naked, that his abundance may be for himself alone—when we see these things in one who makes profession to have knowledge above others of the truth, we wonder not at the question of 1 John 3:17, "how dwelleth the love of God in him ?" Let James answer: "The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth to envy;" and faith without righteous works is dead (Jame s2:17, 26; 4:5). There is no life in such an one. These things abound among us, we all know, Is it unchristian like to call attention to them ? No. God through his prophet says, "Cry aloud and spare not" (Isa. 58:1). If ye warn not the sinner and he die in his sins, I will require his life at your hands. His blood shall be upon you, who have failed to speak words of warning (Ezek. 3:18), The time of trouble such as never was, is upon the world; the time of testing is upon the church. Many walk as enemies of the true gospel. We are certainly in the choosing time when many are called, but few are chosen (Matt. 20:16; 22:14). Let us be watchful that no man take our crown (Rev, 3:9).

Editorial

Coming in The Restitution: The Christadelphians of Springfield, Mo., on "Mortal Emergence," and a rejoiner by the Editor of The Restitution.

Discussion on Immortality between Rev. H. W. Frost, of the China Inland Mission, and Brother R. H. Judd, Mr. Frost is a prominent cleryman and is looked upon as an able exponent of the orthodox doctrine. Readers of The Restitution need no introduction to Brother Judd. His many interesting and instructive articles appearing in the paper from time to time have endeared him to our readers who hold him in high esteem as a teacher who rightly divides the word of truth. Brother Judd's answer to Mr. Frost is fully up to the high standard he has maintained in previous articles. Order extra copies in advance. This will make an excellent article to give to the stranger.

Cleveland Miscellanies

August 7th, after making the good confession of faith, the following friends were helped to put on Christ's name by baptism: George Miller and his wife (a case of reimmersion with Brother Miller); and James Bowden, formerly a Presbyterian. Brother and Sister Miller came here from Maryland, Brother Bowden from Canada.

August 11th in the Baptist church in Mount Vernon, Ohio, the following put on the saving name of Jesus after years of prayerful meditation and study of the truth. They are intelligent believers and zealous as they are intelligent. Their names in the order of their baptisms follow: Mrs. Leora N. Spindler, Mr. Austin T. Spindler, and Mr. Amos L. Beckholt, all formerly Disciples. Brother Buckmaster rejoices much at the obedience of these friends, as he was entirely alone in the faith. Brother Beckholt is a semi-invalid, and immediately after Brother Spindler had been baptized he helped administer the ordinance for Brother Beckholt, his physical condition requiring two administrators. Only a few sympathetic friends were present as witnesses, but the occasion was peculiarly impressive, and will long remain with those present as a matter too sacred to tell.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS,

A House Divided

THE JUNE 21st and 28th issues of The Restitution having made public the effort emanating from Oregon, Illinois, known as "The General Assembly of the Chuch of God," we are constrained to give expression to some of our thoughts arising from the said appeal.

As we understand it, this is an attempt being made, through organization, to unite a scattered and divided household, so that it may work together more unitedly and efficiently. Surely this is a worthy object, But the question is, Is this being done in such a manner as to promise success? For if it is not, then it is doomed to failure.

In The Restitution of July 5th, Brother Huggins has called attention to the fact that this organization lacks a satisfactory and comprehensive creed, or recognized basis of fellowship. We agree with him that this is the great obstacle which stands in the way of the co-operation so essential to success. The true church of God cannot accept such a creed as that formulated by the promoters of the movement. It is impossible for us to accept it because it is deficient in many ways; lacking in those essential scriptural principles upon which depend our very claims as members of the body of Christ. Its defects are very noticeable. Its omissions are still more noticeable. Why leave out so many of the absolutely essential "principles of the doctrines of Christ?"

The commendable efforts being made looking to a union of the scattered and divided body, are worthy of the encourgement of every rightminded brother and sister, IF THIS CAN BE ACCOMPLISHED ON A SCRIPTURAL BASIS! We have for a long time deplored the divided state of the body. We welcome any effort put forth looking toward unity, providing the endeavors are based upon sound principles. Therefore, if those behind this movement desire to accomplish what others have failed to bring about, this can only be done by meeting the demand, as a basis of fellowship, of a creed comprising all the essential principles of our "most holy faith" which are plainly revealed in God's word and accepted and taught by us; which they have failed to do in the "brief statement of biblical teachings" that we are asked to accept.

We respectfully submit that those who accept this statement as representing and embracing biblical facts at present commonly accepted and taught by the people of the church of God "have erred concerning the faith," have overstepped the line in their anxiety for unity, and have departed from sound principles. We believe however, that many of those separated from us are sufficiently agreed with ourselves upon first principles to be within the bounds of our basis of fellowship, if they would only separate from certain theories and hobbies to which they cling, or from certain associations where fellowship without a basis is in force. But we cannot close our eyes to the fact that some have need to change their belief before we could consistently receive them.

If there are any who do not know the principles which separate us, it is most certainly their business, yes, their duty, to find out, so that each one may "be persuaded in his own mind;" for in this important matter there can be no case in which if "ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise." Let none forget that perversion of the gospel of Christ forfeits all claim to salvation (Gal. 1:6-12). Personalities of the past can certainly well be left out; and questions of minor importance which have been a source of wrangling and division if treated in the spirit of patience and humility, could be so harmonized and understood that they need be no barrier to that union which alone is based on purity and peace. But the primary and fundamental principles involved, must receive consideration and cannot be ignored and set aside.

Dear ones in Christ, let us then maintain these sacred principles; let us 'earnestly contend for the faith;" let us state our case on every occasion in such a way that it may be clearly and fully understood; let us seek the fellowship of all who agree with these principles; but let us not be guilty of changing our basis of fellowship which is "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." With the Master at the door and not knowing how soon we may be called into his presence, it is of the utmost importance that brethren cease from strife and smiting one another, and strive to walk in the bonds of love and peace so we may be meet for the Master's approval in the day of his appearing and kingdom,

STERLING P. GROVES.

Redeemed to Give and Serve

I HAVE asked you dear brothers and sisters to give to our Working Fund for the sake of him who loved you and gave himself for you. I have taken you to Calvary and have shown you what that giving meant to him.

I have assured you that there is nothing wrong in giving money that is to be used in an honorable business way, to earn the means whereby the heavy expenses not covered by subscriptions to The Restitution can be met, and it continue to live, to be a comfort to us and the blessed instrument in God's hands of saving others.

I have told you that, like the little drummer boy, I have never learned to beat a retreat. My notes are the clarion notes of victory. I see no obstacles in the way that cannot be overcome. If high costs of living is pleaded, I think of the Israelite who would not touch his tithe money, even to bury his dead, and of the poor Macedonians who out of deep poverty gave freely and joyfully to the Lord.

O we must give! come on! fall into line; we cannot be beaten. God is with us, he has illimitable power, untold riches. Obey him. He says, "If ye walk in my statutes and keep my commandments and do them, then will I give you rain in due season, and the earth shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit. and your threshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time, and ye shall eat your bread to the full and dwell in your land safely." "And I will give peace to the land, and ye shall lie down and none shall make you afraid, and I will rid evil beasts out of your land, neither shall the sword go through your land" (Lev, 26:3-6).

Obey and God will see to it that you are fed and clothed. If you give as he has commanded, he has promised "to satisfy your soul," even in the severest famine.

The Israelites were brought out of the house of bondage to serve and to give (Lev. 28:13; Deut. 6:21-25; 7:8-15). We gather this, because they were to keep his commandments, his statutes, and his judgments," and giving was one of these. They were to give every day, all through the year. Their first born children were the Lord's and must be redeemed with money. One tribe out of all the tribes was the Lord's for it says in Exodus 18:18, "The Lord thy God hath chosen him (Levi) out of all the tribes, to minister in the name of the Lord, him and his sons forever, They shall have no inheritance among their brethren; the Lord is their inheritance."

They were to have part of certain offerings, whether ox or sheep, the first fruits of the corn, the wine and the oil, the first fleece of the sheep, the first born males of the flocks and the herds, and a tenth of all the produce of the ground, and of the flocks and herds were to be theirs, save what was used in the festival celebrations in which all shared alike; the stranger, the widow, the fatherless being not forgotten.

They gave sin-offerings, trespass offerings, meat offerings, free-will offerings, thanksgiving offerings, gave for the tabernacle, gave for the building of the temple. And if they were redeemed out of the house of bondage to serve and to give, much more are we. "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel: for he hath visited and redeemed his people, and hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David, as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets since the world began; that we should be saved from our enemies and from the hand of all that hate us, to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant, the oath which he sware to our father Abraham, that he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him all the days of our lives."

Serving is keeping his commandments, and he has commanded us to bring all our tithes into his storehouse.

Report of Indiana Conference

THE ANNUAL Conference of the churches of God met at North Salem, July 15-17 inclusive. Brother Huffer called a business meeting Friday P. M, The roll of churches was called, most of them answering either by report or delegate, after which Brother F. L. Austin and D. E. VanVactor gave a very interesting discussion on the General Conference. The meeting adjourned to meet Saturday A. M.

Saturday forenoon the conference again convened to finish the work. The financial report was read and accepted, after which the discussion on the General Conference was continued, The Conference ratified the proposed constitution and Leroy Austin was appointed by the chair to get a questionaire before the membership, and empowered to draw on the treasurer for expenses of such work. Brother VanVactor was elected to represent Indiana at the General Conference, and $30 voted for his expenses.

After careful consideration the date for the next Bible School and Conference was set to begin August 10, 1922.

A resolution was carried to set aside the constitutional rule of delegate vote and vote by ballot. The following officers were chosen for the coming year:

President	Wm. Huffer
1st Vice President	Floyd Stilson
2nd Vice President	J. W. Burgett
Secretary	Maud Austin
Treasurer	J. J, Snodgrass

Manifestation of God in Christ

BIBLE DECLARATIONS on the fact that God is a unit are both express and manifold. Moses, the Psalms, the prophets with Christ and the apostles, all lay down and enforce the doctrine that there is "none other God but one." Old Testament affirmations are repeated in the New. The introduction of Christ upon the scene called for no alteration in the original doctrine. That being plainly recognized in the New Testamnet writings (Mark 12:29; Matt. 23:9; 1 Cor. 8:6; Eph. 4:6) it must be as plainly evident that all that therein is said of Christ must be interpreted in harmony with the unalterable fact so universally attested in the divine communications, first to Israel (Deut, 6:4) and afterwards to the Gentiles (1 Cor. 8:4-6) But while the Eternal Power is one, he revealed himself to Israel as "the Lord of hosts," and Ail Shaddai (commonly rendered God Almighty) signifying s rength of mighty ones. These mighty ones or Shaddai or Ail in plural manifestation, hence in the Hebrew Scriptures they are styled Elohim, which is the plural of Ail. To the mere English reader this is somewhat obscured by the uniform rendering of both terms by the word of God. The multitude of powers expressed by the plural Hebrew term constitute the "heavenly host" referred to in the words "and suddenly there was with the (proclaiming) angel a multitude of the heavenly host" (Luke 2:13). These were angels, and were so recognized by Jacob, for when a number of them met him, he said, "this is God's host" (Gen. 32:2). Now, these angels are the "similitudes" of Yahweh, as it is said in Numbers 12:8. Adam, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, and others were permitted to see such, but Israel at Sinai was only permitted to hear his voice of the divine presence, they saw no similitude, as it is written, "Yahweh spake to you out of the midst of the fire, ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude" (Duet. 6:12),

The reason of the absence of the angelic similitude of Yahweh upon the occasion of the nation's constitution into the kingdom of God, was that they might have no ground for making to themselves any idolatrous image or similitude of what they had seen (Deut, 4:15, 16). These are the 'morning stars" that sang together, and the sons of God, that shouted for joy, when the foundations of the earth were laid (Job 38:7), and who also rested from their labor and were refreshed when the work was finished (Exod. 31:17). Instead therefore, of "three in one," the Bible gives us a multitude in one, as it is written, "The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels" (Psa. 68:17). These are all the intelligent individualizations of his spirit, the embodiments of his power and wisdom the multiplication of himself after the patern of the father of a family. A further angelic sonship is contemplated in the purpose of the gospel, which provides for the final development of "children of God," and "children of the resurrection," "equal to the angels" (Luke 20:36), Of these Christ is the captain and "first-born among many brethren" (Rom. 8:29; Heb. 2:10-13). The final head of a community of immortals whose symbolic number is 144,000; all of them at last sons of power and common partakers with their exalted Lord and Master of the "divine nature."

This view of the case cannot be better presented than in the words of Christ himself—"go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father and your Father; and to my God and your God" (John 20:17). This, while it represents the present privileges of mortal sonship, comprehends at last the eternal relation which all the redeemed family of God will finally sustain to the great Creator and Father of all. All of them permanent developments of the Spirit of God, and all of them resplendent as the sun, and as bright and abiding and exalted as the stars of heaven. This gives us one Father-power, out of whose all encircling Spirit all things have come that appear, and will come that are not yet manifest. This one great first cause will never disappear from the recognition of the saved. Thus while Unitarianism merely negatives the Trinity, the revelation of God's purpose gives us something in its place that fills us with "wonder, love, and praise." Something that leads us to see that the Father and his Spirit are necessarily and eternally one, just as a man and his spirit are one; something that gives us to see Christ—"that he is the Son of God" (Acts 9:20), as was attested in the apostolic message. Not "God the Son" in the Trinitarian sense, but the Son of God in the way recorded in the narrative of his advent among men. "The Holy Spirit (said the angel Gabriel to Mary) shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore, also the holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God" (Luke 1:36), This is at once simple and intelligible. We see the generating Spirit-power of the Highest in operation, with the result of a Son. Jesus is, therefore, the image of the Father's character engraven upon tables of flesh. The Father's character was therefore latent in the new born babe, and only required time to manifest itself in the unique life and love of him who "spake as never man spake" before. Jesus did not say "he that seeth me seeth Gabriel, or the angel of the covenant;" but "he that seeth me seeth the Father."

And this is just what we are everywhere in the Scripture taught to see in Christ. His own version of the matter puts it out of our power to take any other view, "I and my Father (says he) are one." He is the "word of life" made flesh; the Father's eternal life, manifested among men, first in the mental attributes of the Spirit, and subsequently in the physical incorporation of the Spirit. This is all plainly evident in another description which Christ gives of the case—"As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself." Now the power of life in any sense is the Spirit as it is written, "The Spirit of God is in my nostrils," but more is the Spirit the power of immortality—for this is the subduing energy by which at last Christ will change the bodies of our present humiliation into harmony with the body of glory. But the Spirit is not only power and life, but is wisdom and purity, hence it is designated Holy Spirit, and holy men are said to have been moved by it to the utterance of the divine will. Now Christ is the sum total of this will in all particulars, the exemplary embodiment of the two great commandments, and all they comprehended—in a word he was a living Bible an wholly inspired Bible by all means; for, he says, "my words, they are Spirit and they are life." In the days of his flesh he was the mind of the Father the same to which the apostle refers when he says, "let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus." Now, since his ascension to the Father's nature he is the "express image of his person" in all other particulars. Thus, the phrase "the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit," instead of suggesting the three co-eternal Gods of the Trinitarian hypothesis, gather together into one the great facts in the mystery of godliness, viz., that the Father was manifested in the Son by the Holy Spirit. "Herein is love," and wisdom combined, such as no Trinitaran or semi-Trinitarian theory can boast The one presents us with high implacable dignity, and consequent substitutionary sacrifice of the co-eternal son-God; while the other gives us the ravishing picture of God in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself."

Belief

HAVING WRITTEN an article on the necessity of works, I now wish to show the absolute necessity of true faith (which is belief) lest some might be led to believe, as does the apostate church, that just being good, or following the dictates of conscience will save us.

Now the Scriptures say: "Faith without works is dead" (James 2:20). And it also says without faith (belief) it is impossible to please God (Heb. 11:6), We see that faith and works must be joined together. We noted in the previous article what the works of righteousness are. Now let us see what things are to be believed in order to have true faith. In Acts 8:27-39 we find the man from Ethiopia asking what doth hinder me to be baptized. We find from Philip's answer, nothing but lack of true belief—"If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest." Undoubtedly this man had the true belief of the things of the kingdom. We are led to this conclusion from the fact that he was reading the Scriptures and had been worshipping at Jerusalem. The Jews had the knowledge and belief of the glorious reign of the Messiah. When added to this knowledge the Ethiopian understood and believed the things of the name of Jesus, he had the true belief (faith) necessary to a valid baptism in water.

Turning to Acts 8:1-12 we find this same Philip preaching to the Samaritans the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ as the things to be believed before baptism into the name of Jesus Christ. This is the faith to have, and when obeyed in baptism and then combined with works following, makes one a child of God, an heir to the kingdom, and a recipient of eternal life when he who is our life shall appear (Col. 3:4).

Thus we see that faith alone (belief), even of all things written, cannot make one a child of God, without works following; because even the devils (adversaries of God) believe, Neither will works save without faith; because only by coming into Christ by a figurative death, burial, and resurrection can we become heirs with him, heirs of the kingdom, and heirs to eternal life.

The Scriptures quoted show without question that the true faith must precede baptism. Let us hold fast the faith and show to the world, and the brethren, that faith by our works (James 2:18).

FLORA A. KNAPP.

Hebrew Plural for "Life"

SOMETIMES CURRENT theology tries to establish the doctrine of the deathlessness of man by telling us that Adam had two lives: one a temporal life, and the other an immortal and deathless life. They found this on the fact that "breath of life" in Gen. 2:7, is "breath of lives" in the Hebrew. But we shall soon see if this proves anything at all, it proves too much. The Hebrew for "tree of life" in Gen. 2:9 is "tree of lives." Did that tree have two lives? In the Hebrew of Gen. 3:14 we read concerning the serpent, "All the days of thy lives." Did the serpent have two lives? In Gen. 3:17 it is "lives," and applies to beasts as well as man. Has a beast two lives? In Gen. 7:11 it is "lives," and in Gen. 7:15 it is "lives." The reference here is very plainly to beasts, for it is "two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of lives." Did these beasts have two lives? So in Gen. 7:22. In Gen. 9:5 the English and Hebrew read, "blood of your lives." Has the blood two lives? In Gen. 47:9 it is "lives" in the Hebrew, in both cases.

This is sufficient to explode the theory that the Hebrew use of the plural "lives" teaches that man has two lives, the one the perishable life and the other the imperishable and undying life, for, the word "lives" is also used when speaking of beasts.

There is no proof in the English or the Hebrew that man has an undying nature. He is everywhere spoken of as being mortal, perishable, corruptible, and doomed to death. Death is an "enemy" (1 Cor. 15:26) and not a friend. Death does not glorify as song writers have said; it kills. And resurrection is necessary or man is eternally dead.—J, J. Schaumburg, Editor of "Messiah's Advocate."

The Mystery of Godliness

Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide,
In the strife twixt truth and error
For the good or evil side,
Some great cause -God's new Messiah,
Offers each the bloom or blight—
Sets the goats upon the left hand,
And the sheep upon the right;
And the choice goes by forever
Twixt that darkness and that light,
Then the side with truth is noble
When you share her wretched crust;
Ere her cause brings fame and profit,
And 'tis properous to be just;
Then it is the brave man chooses,
While the coward stands aside,
Doubting in his object spirit
Till his Lord is crucified;
And the multitude makes virtue
Of the faith they have denied.
Though the cause of evil prosper,
Yet 'tis truth alone is strong;
Though her portion be a scaffold,
And upon the throne be Wrong,—
Careless seems the great avenger,
History's pages but record
One death grapple in the darkness
Twixt false systems and the word;
Truth forever on the scaffold.
Wrong forever on the throne—
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow,
Keeping watch above his own.—Lowell. Selected by Sister Garard.

AGED SEEDS

There is much prettiness in the story of the Ancient Egyptians seeds. The seeds are found in many wrappings, usually in the cerements of some princess or girl of high lineage who died five or six millenniums ago, The seeds are brought to America and planted. They germinate. They produce plants and beautiful flowers. Yes, there is much prettiness in the storeis; much more prettiness than truth.

The latest story of mummy seeds comes from Baltimore. The seed in question was found clasped in the hand of a girl who had been dead some 5000 years. It was planted, and has already produced sweet pea blossoms. It is a glorious tale, but absolutely and altogether mendacious.

Somewhere between the mummy and Baltimore there has been a break. Deception has leaked in No seed 5000 years old ever did germinate, ever could germinate, or ever will germinate.

Only living seeds germinate. And seeds do not live long. There are exceptions, but there are no living seeds even half a century old, to say nothing of over fifty centuries. Seeds die, just as all living matter dies. And a dead seed will produce no more sweet peas than a pebble or a pill.—Selected by the Editor.

COMET FOLLOWS IN WAKE OF BIG ELECTRICAL STORM

Saskatoon, Sask., July 8.—A terrific hail, wind, rain and electric storm which swept the Canora, Sask., district Thursday evening, damaging crops, flattening garden stuff and transforming roads into rivers of mud, was followed by an astral phenomenon, in the shape of a comet which tore through a clear sky in a train of sparks. The big red ball made a whizzing noise as it travelled in a northeasterly direction and exploded, leaving a small cloud in the heavens. The strange sight was visible for a score of miles on all sides of Canora, Damage done by the hailstones, which in some parts measured half an inch in diameter, has not yet been estimated, though farmers say their loss will be considerable.—Selected by Susan Howard.

Every man is the builder of a temple, called his body, to the god he worships, after a style purely his own, nor can he get off by hammering marble instead. We are all sculptors and painters, and our material is our own flesh and blood and bones. Any nobleness begins at once to refine a man's features, any meanness or sensuality to imbrute them.

A Paper Representing The Church of God

Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, AUGUST 23rd 1921. NUMBER 32

The Good Time Coming

The good time is coming, yet it tarrieth long,
  We have heard it in story, in verse and in song;
The kingdom is coming, do you know? do you care?
  Are you anxiously waiting? do you long to be there?

The prophets of old the glad vision have seen,
  Of Eden restored, with its fields ever green:
That country all glorious, tranquil and fair;
  The righteous with Jesus his kingdom shall share.

All there shall be happy as in Eden of old,
  The righteous shall walk those streets of gold;
Sweet streams from the throne of the Lord shall flow,
  And heal the dead waters wherever they go.

There on its banks grow the life giving tree,
  Its leaves for the healing of the nations shall be;
There'll be rest in the kingdom for the good and the true,
  When Jesus shall reign, and make all things new.

Then, Israel all gathered from the ends of the earth,
  Shall serve King Jesus with song and with mirth;
They shall hear the call of Abraham's God,
  They shall come forth and pass under the rod.

The last trumpet's call the twelve apostles shall bring,
  To rule over Israel, 'neath Jesus their King;
The risen saints, patriarchs and martyrs of old,
  All there with their white robes and harps of gold.

The shout of the ransomed shall ascend to the sky,
  They immortal like Jesus, can never more die:
Then God shall come down and abide with men,
  And all shall be happy and glorious then.

The Restoration of Israel and Zionism

THE GOSPEL Herald in its issue of Sept. 27, 1919, under the heading, "Notes Concerning the Jews and Prophecy," prints the following: "The Jews are seeking to dissociate themselves from Bolshevikism as far as possible, and point out that although Trotsky and Zinovieff are Jews, Lenine is the son of a Russian proprietor, Tchitcherin of a Russian nobleman and Lomarcharski, Tomski, and Rikov are not Jews.

"The Jewish flag on the high seas is a new thing in international life. Passenger and cargo vessels of Jewish ownership, plying between Jaffa, Constantinople, and Odessa, have received permission from the British authorities to fly the Jewish flag. This is a clear indication of the budding of Jewish nationalism and warns us that the fulfilmen of prophecy will not be slow from now on. Also Palestine will soon have its own stamp. Palestine is now the only nation which has no postage stamp of its own. But representatives of the Zionist movement in Londen have informed London philatelists this anomaly promises soon to be rectified. Pending the preparation of definite designs, stamps sold by the British Army Post Office in adjacent former enemy territory are being utilized by overprinting the word "Palestine,"

"A little while ago opposers of the Zionist movement objected that no Jews would want to go back to Palestine, but the press dispatches state that an attempt is being made to limit Jewish immigration into Palestine to 50,000 per year.

"A special missioner from Palestine to America, Yehudah Barak, speaking in Boston recently, uttered striking prophecy ,the fulfilment of which will be looked for with interest by others besides the Jews themselves: 'The day will come soon when, in the city of Washington, there will be a beautiful building, the home of the ambassador of the Hebrew Republic, and above the building will wave the beautiful flag of Judea, white and blue.'

"Rev. C. H. Gill, who has just returned from the Holy Land, maintains that in the immediate future, the best workers in the gospel cause should be available for Palestine, and particularly for the city of Jerusalem, which is the new heart of Jewry. So he said, a few days ago, from the platform of the London Jews Society. He added: "The Zionists, who are not professedly religious people, but simply bent on nationalism, are going to oppose us tooth and nail. When we understand and think of all they have suffered at the hands of a nominal Christianity, we bow our heads with shame, and do not blame them But we must recognize the facts. The Zionists are going to oppose us, because they cannot distinguish between the message of the full gospel of Christ and a persecuting Christianity, until they have had experience of it, It rests with us to give them a Christianity which will be a power to lead and direct them aright.'

"A well known American sculptor in Paris has been given much press publicity in his advocacy of the establishment of a world capital in America. His idea is : 'A monumental, modern, hygienic city, so comprehensive and practical as to house and deal with those questions which are common to all peoples alike, and the solution of which is necessary for their mental, physical and spiritual progress. Why should not such a city be unveiled upon the Atlantic coast ? It would be in keeping with its noblest records of union and democracy, and this springing into reality from virgin soil. would undoubtedly extend its lights far down the unseen corridors of time and illumine and give encouragement to the yet unborn.' How typical of the vision of a man 'under the sun' (Eccl. 1:3). On the other hand, we see forces above the sun moving in the direction of a spot 'beautiful fòr situation and the joy of the whole earth' (Psa. 48:2).

"Two thousand Christians recently assembled at the Jewish Prophetic Conference held at Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, passed resolutions expressing their sympathy with the Jewish people. Part of the resolutions follow : 'Be it resolved, that we pledge ourselves daily to pray to the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, David's son and David's Lord, that the day may speedily come when the dark shadows of 2000 years may flee away, and the long promised day of righteousness and peace may come for Israel's race, We also pledge ourselves to pray that the hearts of the beloved Jewish people may be turned to their our sacred Scripture, and that they may turn back to the law and to the testimony, so that they may see him who is our Savior and their coming King, and learn from their own prophets that which will soon come to pass. And furthermore be it resolved, that we express in every other possible way our sympathy to the Jewish people in the present crisis, doing whatever we can in their behalf, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the President of the United States.' Surely a movement of this kind may be regarded as a sign of the times."

The following is copied from the Cleveland News under the heading "In Justice to Jews," by Benjamin Karr : "Striking evidence is given in recent statistics compiled in Berlin showing the distribution of the Jewish population of the world, that it is a great mistake to suppose, as some Americans do, that where there are most Jews there is most bolshevism. The proof is all the more convincing because the tables of figures are purely mathematical and having nothing to do with propaganda or arguments of any kind. According to this latest attempt to determine the Jewish population of varions countries, there are 3,300,000 Jews in Poland, but only 900,000 in Russia, including Siberia. Dr. David Trietsch, the Jewish authority who gathered the statistics and made the estimates, places the Jewish population of the Ukraine, a country of uncertain boundaries and indeed of precarious existence, at 3,200,000. He says there are 3,100,000 Jews in the United States, Russia is Bolshevist through the Jews constitute about twenty per cent of all the inhabitants. The Ukraine has nearly as large a population of Jews as Poland, but the Ukraine is not in the hands of Ukraine Bolshevists.

These facts prove that the tendency to red revolution is far from running parallel to the proportion of Jews in the countries of eastern Europe, a afce worth remembering. If it is kept in mind by Americans they will be much less likely to do injustice to Jews in their detestation of the Bolshevists and all their works. One of the latest and most significant outcomings of Bolshevist oppression in Russia is the arrest of 75 delegates and alternates to the "All-Russian Zionist Congress" which met in Moscow late in April. The news of this wholesale incarceration of Russian Jews is told by the Bolshevist government itself. The excuse given is that "extraordinary secrecy" was observed regarding the meeting of this Zionist congress and that communications have passed to and from powers which are members of the "entente." It is also charged by the Sovit tyrants that a large proportion of those arrested were not connected with the Zionist movement. All of which means of course, that the Lenine-Trotzky government is exceedingly suspicious of the Jews who still remain true to their ancient faith, It is only among the apostate Jews that have forsaken all religion that the Bolshevist despots find followers who are of the race long persecuted in Russia. Because the Jews are much abler and keener, intellectually than the vast majority of the Russians who are not Jews, and far more energetic, it has naturally been a feature of the Bolshevist movement that leadership is largely in Jewish hands, but that does not mean that Jews constitute a majority or even a large minority of the Bolshevists themselves. On the contrary, there is evidence that much the larger part of the Jews in Russia are opposed to Bolshivism clearly, that is true of the Zionists, if the Bolshevist tyrants know their friends from their foes.

STERLING P. GROVES.

Did Jesus Personally Pre-exist

THE IDEA is held my many that Christ pre-existed and was in a certain sense the creator of his mother. We can not subscribe to such an idea. We regard it as the twin brother of immortal soulism. And as proof that the idea is not of the truth we submit the following arguments as some of the reasons why we so think :

1. "The chief of the creation of God" (Rev. 3:14). Priestley, Wakefield, and John Pye Smith, D. D. F. G. S. F. R. S. versions, Could he exist before he was "created" ? Is it possible ? "Creation" of which he is the "chief" means a bringing into existence. Could he exist before he was brought into existence ? The question answers itself,

"He is the most excellent and first (chief) of all the works of God." Sebastian Castilo, Prof. of Greek at Basil (b. 1515, d. 1569).

"The head of the creation of God," Samuel Clark's version.

2. "God sent his only begotten Son into the world" (1 John 4:9). Was he a Son in fact before he was begotten ?

3, Which was first, the mother or the child ?

4. Can a child be born without a mother and before her existence ?

5. Can a son at birth be older than his mother?

6. Can a son be "born" before he was "begotten ?"

7. Can a son exist without a father to "beget" him or a mother to conceive him ? If not, then who was Christ's mother before this world was ?

8. If a child must be born in a certain town, could he be born in that town before it had an existence ? "Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the king, for thus it is written by the prophet : And thou Bethlehem in the land of Judah art not least among the princes of Juda ; for out of thee shall come a governor that shall rule my people Israel" (Matt. 2:1-6).

9. Which was the first, Bethlehem or Christ ?

10, Can a thing be made before the existence of the material of which it was made ?

11. Which was first, dust or Adam ?

12. Which was first, "seed" or the product of the "seed" ? "The book of the generation, the son of David, the son of Abraham" (Matt. 1:1). "Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead" (2 Tim. 2:8). "Of this man's (David's) seed hath God raised unto Israel a Savior, Jesus Christ, according to his promise" (Acts 13:23).

13. Which was first, the type or the anti-type?

14, Was Abel's Lamb a type of Christ ?

15. Which was first, the prophecy, or that foretold by the prophet ? "Behold a virgin shall conceive." "Unto us a child is born."

16. Was this son "born" before Isaiah lived ?

17. Can the second exist before the first ?

18. Which was first, the "first Adam" or the "last Adam" ?

19. Was the virgin the mother of Christ ? "And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the highest shall overshadow thee : therefore that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Was he a living son before thus begotten ?

20. What was formed by the reproductive organs of Mary ? Was it not the body of our Lord ? If so, then how could Jesus pre-exist in as much as that "holy thing" formed by those organs was declared to be the "Son of God ?"

21. Which was the first, the sixty-nine weeks or the Messiah ? "Know therefore and understand that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem, unto the Messiah, the Prince, shall be seven weeks and three score and two weeks." In 69 weeks are 483 days used in this prophecy to represent 483 years, which was just the time between the decree of Cyrus to "restore" and rebuild Jerusalem unto the Messiah, the Prince or the true birth of Christ.

22. Which was first, the object made or the material of which it was made ? "His Son Jesus Christ, our Lord, which was made of the seed of David."

23. Which was first, the law or Christ ? "For the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ."

24. Could Christ be "sent into the world" before he was born ? "When the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law."

25. If he was made "under the law," did he exist before the law ?

26. "God gave his only begotten Son." Can one have life and consciousness before he is begotten ?

27. Can there be a begotten son before the existence of the mother ?

28. If there was a pre-existent Christ, what became of that one when the true and real one was begotten ?

29. Which was the first, the "Son of God" or "Son of Man" ?

30, Are there any inorganic living beings ?

31. If Christ had a pre-existence, was he then a living being ?

32. If Christ was a pre-existent living being, was he not necessarily organic or material ?

33. Does not begettal and conception produce mind as well as body ? If so, then could it pre-exist any more than his body in as much as both were produced by her ?

34. Was "the first Adam" a living being before he was created ?

35. Was the "last Adam" a living being before he was begotten ?

36. Has an unbegotten child any knowledge ?

37. Did a pre-existent Christ become a son of Mary ?

38. Can two beings become one ?

39. What came to Mary besides the Holy Spirit ?

40. Is the Holy Spirit the pre-existent Son of God ?

41. "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee." Was he begotten before that "day ?" or on that day ? Just as sure as this passage is true, Jesus was not begotten before that "day." Oh you may say this refers to his resurrection because it says, "He hath raised up Jesus again." But "again" is a supplied word. It is rendered as follows by Rotherham : "That God hath fulfilled the same for our children by raising up Jesus ; as also in the second Psalm it is written : My son art thou: I this day have begotten thee." "Raised" here is used in the sense it is used in verse 22, 23, and in Acts 3:22.

42. "It behooved him to be made like unto his brethren in all things." Could he exist before he was "made" ?

43. "A prophet shall the Lord my God raise up from among you like unto me." Was this "prophet" then existent when Moses said, "God shall raise up--cause to exist—a prophet" ? In as much as he was to be "raised up"—caused to exist--"from among you," could he be older than the "you" ?

44. "I have formed thee from the womb to be my servant." Could he exist before he was "formed" ?

45. In conclusion, it is absolutely certain that the "first Adam" was made of dust or he was not, It is absolutely certain that if he was made of dust as declared in the Bible, that the dust existed before he was made. It is also absolutely certain that Christ, the "last Adam," was "made of a woman" or he was not. It is also absolutely certain if he was "made of a woman," as declared in the Bible, that the woman existed before he was made.

JOHN R. FISK, Jr.

The Gift of God

BELOVED : SUPPOSE it had been you or I drawing water from the well upon which sat Jesus the anointed Son of God : would we have recognized him or would we have failed as the woman of Samaria did ?

Suppose God's spirit rested upon us as it did John the Baptist even before his birth : would we raise the question as he did, "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another ?"

Suppose we were the two on the way to Emmaus who confessed that Jesus of Nazareth was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God, and all the people, and the stranger who, "beginning at Moses and all the prophets expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself ;" would we as they, have failed utterly to recognize him ?

Yet he did aver that the things concerning himself were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms. For four thousand years God's prophets testified to these things, and note well this point, only Jesus among men fully comprehended it ; no wonder he marvelled at their unbelief.

At his baptism, God acknowledged him saying, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Isaiah speaking for the prophets asks, "Who hath believed our report ? and to whom is the arm of the law revealed ?" Jesus knew the book of Isaiah and could intelligently quote from it. Hence sometime I think he was not surprised at the manner his people received him. "He came unto his own and his own received him not." Why ? we sometimes ask. Well, it seems to me it was because of the meek humility which bore no similarity to anything that men were and are accustomed to call great. His family was obscure ; his city despised ; his nation corrupt and enslaved. He was a servant ; he claimed himself, that he came not to be ministered unto but to minister (Mark 10:45; Phil. 2:7). Isaiah was right when he declared that "He would be despised and rejected of men."

The Jews said, "Thou art a Samaritan and hast a devil" (John 8:48). The woman of Samaria did not recognize him, yet he was the gift of God. To know God is to appreciate his great gift to the children of men, "his only begotten Son." Jesus saith unto her, "Give me to drink." That was all he asked, just a cup of cold water. Really, beloved, how little Jesus asks of any of us.

In Jesus there existed no carnal mind ; the old animosity between Jew and Samaritan found no place in his mind. Had she but recognized him as the long looked for Son of God, how different she would have acted. How gladly she would render any service, however menial.

Yes, even of the nation Paul said had they only known, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory (1 Cor. 2:8). Why then, was he not recognized ? Paul tells us : "In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ. who is the image of God, should shine unto them."

Now listen : He (Jesus) took bread and blessed it and brake, and gave to them. And their eyes were opened and they knew him.

Let us go back three days into an upper room. These two friends and others with him are seated around a table. "And he took bread, and gave thanks and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you ; this do in remembrance of me."

Notice, Jesus adopts exactly the method he instructed his disciples to follow so that they may recognize him. After he blessed and brake the bread, "their eyes were opened."

Beloved, I cannot, no I cannot, stay away from the Lord's table. I am willing to deny myself anything so that I can be there. I love to see Jesus ; and the place he has promised to meet me and reveal himself to me is in "The breaking of bread" (Matt. 18:20). Paul please make this a little clearer to my mind : I am so slow to understand. Listen, beloved to Paul, not to me. for I am nothing : "For as the body is one hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body ; so also is Christ. For by one spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free ; and have been all made to drink into one spirit. For the body is not one member, but many." Thus each grain of wheat hidden in this broken bread, and each grape crushed to make this wine, represents the church, Christ's body. This is wonderful. Now I see. "The spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God; and if children then heirs ; heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." "For our light afflictions which is but a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." "Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church."

"Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God ; therefore the world knoweth us not because it knew him not." When we think of the multitudinous host which will constitute "The name" as expressed in the formula of "The name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy spirit" (Matt. 28:19) ; when we recall Jesus' prayer, "I pray for them also who shall believe through their word that they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, they also may be one in us : that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them ; that they may be one ; I in them and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one." How true it is today in the world in regard to the body of Christ, the church. Paul said it was a mystery, viz., Christ and the church. The world does not know that the Lord has his representatives among them. Like Jesus in the days of his flesh, they are not invested with the glory of the world : they, like him, are despised and rejected of men, unrecognized as the future judges and rulers of the earth. But beloved we should know and recognize each other and appreciate the joy of serving one another, for "Inasmuch as ye have done unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me' (Matt.25:40).

If we are with the world and participate in their ways and pleasures, they will claim us as their own. On the other hand, Jesus who was "harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners" (Heb. 7:26). "Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who, when he was reviled, reviled not again ; when he suffered, he threatened not ; but committed to him that judgeth righteously" (1 Pet. 2:22, 23). Yet the world failed to recognize or own him. How much more we the members of his body imperfect as we are. But we are in God's sight through grace reckoned holy (Eph. 1:5: 7).

Subjects of the Resurrection

IN THIS article, which I will make as brief as possible, I will attempt to make a little plainer some of the things said in a former article, which, evidently, Brother Judd did not understand; and will also add a few more reasons with Scripture as proof, for my belief.

Brother Judd states that because I said: "Every sinner who has died unrepentant since the flood has died the second death," that: "the righteous man has already died the second death before the resurrection.'" The kind of a death the wicked man dies does not apply to the righteous. The righteous man never dies the second death. Keep in mind the meaning of "second death" which is the second cleansing of the world from sin (the first death or cleansing of the world from sin being at the time of the flood). When a wicked man dies the world is cleansed of that much sin; not so when a righteous man dies, because he is free from sin; and because the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwelleth in him, his mortal body shall be quickened (Rom. 8:11), Let me ask how. What will quicken the body of the sinner? Can the rush grow up without mire? Can the flag grow without water? (Job 8:11).

Brother Judd seems surprised at the idea of dead men being judged. Rev. 20:12 says the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books according to their works. Because it is stated they stand he thinks they must be alive. If all the dead, both "just and unjust," and I suppose the living also, are to literally "stand" before God to be judged, there will be quite a line in waiting. If they have to give an account of everything, even to every idle word, it will take some time. Will they all remain standing? Think of the anxiety of the ones at the farthest end of the line waiting for their sentence; so few of the others having been found perfect, enter into the city and so many found wanting, pass on to the lake of fire, What would be the result if this were true?

The wicked mortal beings, who were living, would be immediately consumed and their sufferings ended; not so the resurrected ones, for we are told in Luke 20:36 that they which are accounted worthy to obtain a resurrection from the dead cannot die any more. Also 1 Cor. 15:14: "It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body." So these must endure the pangs of eternal torment. Brother Judd admits that the Scriptures teach some of the wicked will never see life a second time. How will it be known which are the ones to be left in their graves if the dead are not judged? Why are only a part of the wicked so favored?

He further says that "Scripture distinctly states there will be a resurrection both of the just and the unjust." Of course he refers to Acts 24:15. I think if he will rightly divide the word of truth, he will see that it is not Paul but the pharisees who believe in a resurrection of both the just and the unjust. Read Acts 23:8: "For the Sadducees say there is no resurrection neither angel nor spirit but the pharisees confess both." In Acts 24.15: I think the translator should have arranged the clauses differently so that it would read: "And have hope toward God that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, which they themselves also allow, both of the just and the unjust." This thought is in perfect harmony with all of Paul's argument. For instance Acts 26:6: "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers." Surely, no one will say that the promise made to the fathers include the wicked. Wherefore Paul's hope for a resurrection was for the righteous only. I might mention other places where Paul teaches by inference the rightous only will see life again, but will leave them and direct your attention to other more positive statements.

John 6:54: "Whoso eateth my flesh and dinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day," Consequently, if these things are not done he has not eternal life and will not be raised at the last day.

1 John 3:14: "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." David says, speaking of the wicked, "He shall go to the generation of his fathers: they shall never see light. Man that is in honor and understandeth not is like the beasts that perish" (Psa. 49:19, 20). Will the beasts be resurrected? "The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead" (Prov. 21:16).

We are told in Prov. 10:2, also 11:4, that righteousness delivereth from death. This would leave all who have not righteousness without any deliverance, Of what does righteousness consist? Would the innocence of ignorance be included in that term? We are told that Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him for righteousness. So before we can have righteousness we must have faith, and as faith without works is dead, we must also have works.

I think I have given ample proof that only those who have believed and obeyed and remained faithful until death, will be subjects of the resurrection. Read Ezek. 18:24-28.

Much more could be said and more Scripture given, but am afraid of making my article too long. Will say in couclusion, that I hope Brother Judd will not think I have especially single him out to criticise. I know there are others who have the same opinion as himself, in regard to the resurrection, and these thoughts are also addressed to them. It is only from a desire on my part to know the truth and have others to know it, that I presume to write for persons to read, who I know are far beyond me in wisdom and understanding. If I am wrong, able writers will surely hasten to put me right, and if I am right, I want others to be right also.

MRS. A. ORR.

Editorial Comments

THE ABOVE article has been on file for a considerable time, but as we had promised Sister Orr that we would make some comment upon it, and as we have not had an opportunity until now to do so, its publication has been delayed. There is some indication of confusion in the mind of the writer of this article on the questions of who are responsible to coming judgment by the great judge of the quick and the dead. The cause of this confusion, I believe, is a failure to understand the principle of responsibility as taught in the divine word. An evidence of this confusion is seen in the following words which we quote from the article: "Brother Judd admits that the Scriptures teach that some of the wicked will never see life a second time. How will it be known which are the ones to be left in their graves, if the dead are not judged? Why are only a part of the wicked so favored?"

When the simple and beautiful principle of responsibility to God as taught in the Scriptures is understood, there can be no difficulty in answering these questions. The apostle Paul lays down this principle in his epistle to the Romans as follows:

> For there is no respect of persons with God. For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law; and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law; in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men, by Jesus Christ according to my gospel (Rom. 2:11, 12, 16).

This passage deals with two classes of sinners: one class that sins in the law, and one that was outside or "without the law." The sinner that sins outside of the law of God perishes outside or beyond the pale of the law. God will not judge him by a law to which he has never become related or of which he is totally ignorant. Having lived in ignorance of God and his truth he passes out of existence without responsibility to the divine law. "Man that is in honor and understandeth not is like the beasts that perish" (Psa. 49:20). On the other hand, the sinner who sins in the law, that is, the one who has become related to the law, by knowledge or partial obedience, shall be judged by the law; when? In the grave? During the present life? Listen to Paul's answer: "IN THE DAY WHEN GOD SHALL JUDGE THE SECRETS OF MEN BY JESUS CHRIST ACCORDING TO MY GOSPEL."

These words of Paul to the Romans corroborate what Christ said to the Jews: "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken the same shall judge him IN THE LAST DAY" (John 12:48). Christ speaks of the "last day" as the time when the true believers are to be raised up (John 6:40). It is quite evident from this, and a great deal more might be added, that there is to be a simultaneous resurrection of all who are responsible, because of their knowledge of, or relationship to, God's law; as Christ has said: "They that have done good, to the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation" (John 5:28, 29). On the other hand, those who live their lives in ignorance of God's truth pass along the great broad way that leadeth to everlasing destruction and oblivion.

The question has often been asked: Why should God raise people from the grave to condemn them to return to it again? We might answer that by asking another: Why should men be allowed to mock God with impunity? To quote the words of the apostle Paul: "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and have counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite to the spirit of grace? For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense saith the Lord And again, the Lord will judge his people" (Heb. 10:28-30). Read also verses 26 and 27. Here are the facts plainly stated in God's word; it is not for us to call into question the wisdom of him who created the heavens and the earth, and in whom we live and move and have our being. Let us rather humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God and strive to be worthy of that better resurrection.

Delay in Publication

IN REPLY to several inquiries from our readers respecting the delay in receiving their papers, we desire to make it generally known that it has been caused by unavoidable circumstances.

The Restitution has never been self-supporting as the subscription list it too small, and of late still more subscribers have ceased to take the paper, and in nearly every instance their reason has been that they do not approve of certain things contained therein. The fact is The Restitution always has and always will stand unreservedly for the truth, and will not condone any doctrine while under present control, unless absolutely scriptural. This, of necessity, causes us to have to publish at a loss.

To overcome this condition we have resorted to the only feasible and honest way out of the difficulty: we have depended lately on making money to meet the deficiency by job work.

We have been handicapped here again through lack of capital to carry on a paying business, and so Sister Wince has been appealing to our faithful readers to help us out of this difficulty.

We have recently obtained a permanent order which has to be put out once a month. This we have started to do, and as we have not had sufficient funds to pay for needed extra labor we were obliged to get behind in our own paper. We have, however, by hard work nearly caught up again; and expect to be on time as usual by the first week in September; and will endeavor in future to keep on time.

It is a collossal task to attempt to do business without capital, and we trust our readers will appreciate our difficulties and help us to a better prosperity in the future.

There is no need to expatiate on Sister Wince's articles now running in The Restitution. We hope our readers will respond heartily to her appeals. May the Lord prosper us in keeping his word before the world, and edifying one another.

A Blessing From God

A tiny bud has blossomed today
Upon our family tree;
And every branch, and twig, and stem,
Is happy as can be.

THE TREE is that of Sister Bessie K. Walker of Procter, Montana. The "bud" blossomed into a delicate, beautiful flower on July 29th, 1921. Her name is ANNETEE ELIZABETH WALKER. Sister Walker is a conscientions worker in the vineyard of the Master. Today baby Annette's name is printed in The Restitution. Our prayer is that she so will live, labor and love that eventually her name will be written in the Lamb's book of life.. No greater glory could be hers

Set one new church in oredr.

Moved and seconded that Evangelist's report be accepted as read. Carried.

Moved by Brother Adams, seconded by Brother Courtney, that a ministerial certificate be grantd to Brother J. R. Fiske, Jr., of Caldwell, Kans. Carried.

Moved by Brother Herren, seconded by Brother White, that the Conference be held next year in Omaha. Carried.

Moved by Brother Herren, seconded by Brother Courtney, that Brother Sorensen be appointed as chairman of a committee to look after a building for the Conference to be held in; he being left free to choose the rest of the committee. Carried.

Sister Lawrence was appointed by the president to write to the different churches to remind them to send in table supplies.

Election of officers resulted as follows:

Brother P. E. Brown	President
Brother Arthur White	Vice-President
Sister Carrie Free	Secretary
Sister May White	Treasurer
Brother Almus Adams	Evangelist
Brother John Courtney	Advisor

Moved by Brother Courtney, seconded by Brother Zeller, that Brother Adam's salary be $1800 and expenses. Carried.

Letters read by the Secretary from Lucy A. McChesney, P. E. Brown and D. E. Van Vactor.

Brother R. E. Zeller, Sister Lawrence, and Sister Krogh, were appointed a committee on resolutions; who reported as follows:

We, the committee on resolutions report as follows, first:

1. Resolved, that we extend a vote of thanks to the Omaha brethren for the hospitality they have shown us, the visiting brethren.

2. Resolved, that we extend the appreriation of the Conference to the Avery brethren for the splendid assistance rendered in making our Conference most profitable and enjoyable.

3. Resolved, that we in conference assembled extend our regrets and sympathy to those faithful ones scattered abroad who, were unable to meet with us, in communion of faith.

4. Resolved, that we with one voice express our regrets that neither Brother Austin nor Brother Van Vactor, at the last moment by mitigating circumstances, were able to be with us.

5. Resolved, that we extend the thanks of the Conference to all brethren scattered abroad, who have assisted so generously in the work of the Master duing the past year.

6. Resolved, that we regret the inability of Brother Brown and Sister Free to be present with us, in their capacity of president and secretary.

7. Resolved, that the conference assembled in Omaha stand for unity and peace based on the principle of true forgiveness without proviso.

AUGUST 21st.

Meeting opened with Brother Zeller in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Moved and seconded that three deelegates be sent to the General Assembly at Waterloo, Iowa. Carried.

Brother Adams, Brother Zeller, and Brother Hammond were chosen as delegates.

Moved and seconded, that the delegates be sent uninstructed. Carried.

A general discussion followed in which a number took part; with reference to our attitude towards the General Assembly. The final conclusion arrived at, was that the delegates could be trusted to guard the truth and right.

Brother Courtney then took the floor and laid before the Conference a plan to build a conference building in Omaha and a subscription was started for the same. The conference then adjourned.

The brethren were fortunate as usual in securing a good building in which to hold the conference, the auditorium and dining hall being in separate rooms in the same building, both being very commodious; and the best part of it all was the whole meeting was one of peace, unity and good will. It was one of the largest in the history of the conference, thirty-six having preeceded it. More money was raised and expended than in any year during the existence of the conference.

When we look back to the beginning of our Conference thirty-seven years ago, with a handful of believers who had moved here from other states and think how they started their evangelist out, at a dollar a day; and often unable to meet their obligations at that, and now think of them raising over two thousand dollars, with all bills paid up to date, proves that some energy has been put into the work.

The Conference has met with many discouragements during its years of existence, but it has outlived them all; and gone steadily on in the Master's work, and today stands in strength and spirituality with any.

The subjects of Brother Adams and Brother Hammond were instructive and timely, being adapted to the times and the occasion.

Brethren Banning. Sorrensen, Zeller and others gave some splendid Bible lesons.

Some faces that were present last year, were absent; the grim reaper being the cause in some cases, sickness in others. These regrets are very common, being experienced more or less every year. Some faces, however, we see that were present at the first Conference

Five states were represented, as follows: New Mexico, Colorado, Ohio, Missouri, and Nebraska.

At the close of the meeting Brother Adams gave a discourse on the Holy City, at the close of which six splendid young people identified themselves with Christ Thus closed one of the best meetings in the history of the Conference.

Now, brethren, let us commence preparing for next year, and if we are to have another Conference in this age, let us all make a special effort to be present: in this way we prepare for the great meeting of all the faithful of all ages when Jesus comes.

MARGUERITE WRIGHT, Sec. Pro. Tem.

Like our Master it is our duty and blessed privilege to open the eyes of those who are blinded by the god of this world, and let the glorious light of the gospel of peace shine in upon their minds. Wherever we find the listening ear and the soul thirsting and feeling after God, let us, like Jesus at the well of Samaria, offer the water of life to all such in every opportunity presenting itself. In so doing our experience will be the same as our Head and Master Jesus (John 4:31-34).

GEO. B. ALLDRIDGE.

Indebtedness and Obligation

WHAT WOULD God have me say to you this morning? Most emphatically that indebtenness involves obligation to pay. I have all along, in appealing to you for working fund, been writing the word "Give." It is a good word. The Master used it. He said. "Freely ye have recived, freely give." God gave to us the rich treasure of his grace, without money and without price.. We could not ransom ourselves nor redeem a brother from death. When we were helpless he "laid help on one that was mighty to save." Having been given this wonderful Savior, and all that the giving of him involves, freely, by the loving hand of God, we are to give just as freely, as lovingly, and as joyfully to others, that they too may share in the riches that have been given to us. I repeat again that we are indebted to God and that indebtedness involves obligations to pay. "Pay" is a good word, strong word. It touches us at a vital point. When we use the word "give," men find various loop holes of escape. They have their families to care for, their houses to keep in repair, machinery to buy, their children to educate, and it takes every cent they can earn to do these things. And when we do persuade them to give, they give from fear of being thought stingy, from love of approbation, or from impulse of the moment and not systematically and continuously as God would have them give.

But when we use "owe" and "pay" there is no dodging the matter. An honest man will pay what he owes, and will do it freely and joyfully and at the proper time, having kept strict account and bringing the amount that he owes, as a good steward of the grace of God. I do not mean that we are to pay God for what he has done and is going to do for us and with us. You, dear ones, who have kept faithful step with me thus far in endeavoring to find out and to follow the teachings of the word of the Lord when called upon to put our shoulders to the wheel in times of need like that which we now face will not so misunderstand me.

But God has a plan in this matter as in all things else. He does not leave things to be done in a haphazard way. He loves us too much for that. He has taken careful thought that the rich brother be not eased and the poor brother burdened; but that each give in proportion to his means. We could not do this if there was no plan to go by, no way to find out what we owe, and how to pay it, and what the results of obedience will be. The little monysyllable "tithe" solves the question.

When Jacob made that vow at Luz, or Bethel, "If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread . . . so that I come again to my father's house in peace, then shall the Lord be my God: and this stone which I have set up for a pillar shall be God's house, and and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee"—he made it not only for himself but for all who should after him become followers of the God of heaven. There was really no "if" in Jacob's faith. He knew that God would be with him, and be his God, and with all his after seed as well, if children of Abraham by faith, whether by national descent or not. But tithing did not begin with Jacob; "Abraham gave tithes of all" to Melchesideck the high priest of God, and that he did so, is told us in such a natural matter of fact way, that we are left to infer that it went farther back even than him, even to the very beginning of the race. If the sacrificing of animals began just after the fall, as must have been the case, why not tithing?

Tithing was essential to God's purpose. His worship, his truth, his Levites, his high priests, his ministers, his missionaries must have the means of support, and there was no simpler, easier more practical way of providing for all such expenses, than for the Lord's people to set apart a tenth of all their increase for the Lord, payment thereof to be sacredly obligatory; not a penny to be withheld; not a penny to be spent for any other purpose, no matter how dire the exigency.

But has the New Testament made tithing obligation upon us? You can think of no place in which it commands us to give the tithe? No. you will not find any direct command to that effect, but turn to Matt. 23:23 and see what Jesus thought about it. He said to the "scribes and pharisees, hypocrites. ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law,judgment, mercy and faith. These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone"—making tithing still obligatory.

Jesus, when he took his journey, delivered to his own servants his goods, giving to every man according to his ability, one, two, five, and ten talents. The increase of these talents, though equal to the original sum, were given to the Lord, thus teaching the same lesson, though the word "tithe" is not mentioned (Matt. 25:14-31). As it also is in the latter part of the same chapter, where the care of the thirsty, the hungry, the naked, the imprisoned and the strangers are so clearly and forcibly taught. Even our enemies are not left out when the matter of giving is set before us. If he hungers we are to fed him, and do him good. "Give" Jesus says, "and it shall be given unto you. good measure, pressed down, and shaken together and running over shall men give unto your bosom, for with the same measure that ye mete, withall shall it be measured unto you again" (Luke 5:38).

"The Lord has ordained that they who preach the gospel shall live of the gospel" (1 Cor. 9:7-15) and that the poor be provided for (2 Cor. 9:9). To the poor, it seems that we are to give as a matter of bounty, not as of coveteousness, not grudgingly, or of necessity or not according to the law of owe and pay, but cheerfully and bountifully. Even though we follow that law in this case, as in others though judging from 2 Cor. 9:7 it does not seem we are to do so, but that we are to give "every man according as he purposeth in his heart." But that we are to give according to that which we have and not according to that which we have not, Paul plainly teaches. Some men are not to be eased and others burdened. There must be equality; the giving must be proportionate or measured by the amount of each man's income. Hence the tenth is what we owe. The laying by of this tenth in store, every first day of the week, is the way to pay it, and the results of paying it are to have good measure pressed down and shaken together and running over, given by men into our bosoms. It has been so in my experience. Try it, dear ones, There will be no lack of money when the Lord calls, if you all turn tithers.

But I am talking too long, and must only add, that sacrific must go with our giving. The things that we want must be given up. I have told you this before, but I repeat it here, that you may not forget. David would not give that which cost him nothing. It is the gifts that cost self-denial that are pleasing to God. And prayer must go with all our gifts. Remember this. Pray that God will give us what we ask for, and also that he will make those gifts redound to his glory.

A Paper Representing The Church of God
Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of "the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God, and the Name of Jesus Christ"--Acts 8:12

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1921. ● NUMBER 33

The Value of a Smile

The thing that goes the farthest,
Toward making life worth while,
That costs the least and does the most,
Is just a pleasant smile.

The smile that bubbles from the heart
That loves his fellow man,
Will drive away the clouds of gloom
And coax the sun again.

It's full of worth and goodness too,
With human kindness blent,
It's worth million dollars,
And it doesn't cost a cent.

There is no room for sadness,
Where we see a cheery smile,
It always has the same good look
It's never out of style.

It nerves us to try again
When failure makes us blue;
The dimples of encouragement
Are good for me and you.

It pays a higher interest
For it is merely lent—
It's worth a million dollars,
And it doesn't cost a cent.

A smile comes easily enough,
A twinkle of the eye,
Is natural and does more good
Than any long drawn sigh.

It touches on the heart strings
Till they quiver blythe and long,
And always leaves an echo,
That's very like a song.

So smile away! folks understand,
What by a smile is meant,
It's worth a millon dollars
And it doesn't cost a cent.—Selected by ETTA MEHRENS.

"Be ye kind one to another."

"Prove All Things; Hold Fast that which is Good"

SOME SUBJECTS in God's word are of vastly greater importance than others. All profesing Christians of whatever sect or denomination they may be, agree nominally at least, that the knowledge of God the Creator should take the foremost rank. In actual fact, however, is this the case? Nine-tenths of the leaders of the churches are completely puzzled by the simplest questions relating to the Almighty. They "worship they know not what" in a truly literal sense.

We have already given in previous articles ample proof that the doctrine of the Trinity is untenable, but we wish now to show that the traditional teaching regarding the Holy Spirit is particularly at variance with truth. Current theology maintains that there are three Gods, viz., God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost (or Holy Spirit), and that these three are co-equal, and co-eternal. "God the Father" is a distinctively scriptural term (1 Pet. 1:2; 2 Pet. 1:17; Jude 1). The other two expressions are foreign to the Bible, and antagonistic to its teachings. The Father and the Son are both personal beings, is abundantly testified in the sacred writings, and no single statement can be brought forward which in any sense nullifies that fact. It is most remarkable, however, that relative to the Holy Spirit, the exact reverse is the case.

The doctrine of the personality of the Holy Spirit is built almost entirely on the use of the personal pronoun in the 14th and 16th chapters of John's gospel. Did these passages stand alone, and had there not been any previous reference to the Holy Spirit in both Old and New Testaments, we might readily admit that such would be a natural interpretation to a casual reader, but, when another construction may legitimately be placed upon them, which will bring them into harmony with others which cannot possibly be consistent with personality in the generally accepted sense, it is but right to do so. Careful study however, of these passages gives abundant evidence that the orthodox view is incorrect, and is only attained by superficial reading, and a lack of the appreciation of the laws relating to the requirements of grammar, as we shall see later.

The strong belief in the personality of the Holy Spirit is, as we have already said, based principally on the two chapters referred to in John's gospel, where the promise of the Holy Spirit (the Comforter, the Helper or Advocate) is given. Strange to say, it is contended that the fulfilment of this promise took place at Pentecost, continuing from then until now. There was on that occasion no sign of personality, for the Spirit came as "cloven tongues of fire," and any suggestion of personality seems to be entirely omitted. To my mind, the gift of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost is the fulfilment of "the promise of the Father" (Joel 2:28; Acts 1:4; 2:3), and is not to be confused with the promises given by Christ. Reference to Joel 2:28 is sufficiently convincing that the "Spirit" there referred to is not personal, as the figure used cannot apply to personality. In spite of this undenyable fact the pasage is frequently so applied.

We think othodoxy is right in teaching that Christ promised something new something that did not then exist on the earth among men, and could not do so while he remained (John 16:7) How then can they affirm that the Holy Spirit (or Comforter) promised by Christ was a personal being—the third person in the Trinity, who, as they teach was co-equal and co-eternal with the Father, taking part in the creation and continuing throughout Old Testament history ? It is clearly proven by the following pasages that the Holy Spirit was already working in the lives of men in exactly the same manner up to the time the promise was given by Christ and afterwards: Luke 1:15, 67; 2:25,26; 4:1; Acts 2:4; 6:3-5. There surely then is something inconsistent here, which according to the traditional view, nullifies the force of Christ's promise of "another comforter." If the Holy Spirit referred to in the above quoted passages is a personal being, as is generally taught, then Christ's promise of another future gift cannot be.

That the Holy Spirit, wherever referred to, is the same throughout Scripture (except in manifestation), is, we think, correct, but the insistence of its personal individuality leads to endless confusion and inconsistency, and the difficulty is greatly magnified by adding to it the Trinitarian doctrine.

Having expressed our disbelief in the personality of the Holy Spirit in the sense accepted by current theology, we will now endeavor to give what we believe to be some cogent reasons for so doing, and would ask our readers to carefully weigh the evidence, comparing facts.

Fact 1.—It is most remarkable that only of God the Father, and of Jesus Christ the Son, do we read that they live. It might reasonably be assumed that God lives—that he is a "living God," yet it is repeatedly asserted in the Scriptures in spite of the natural evidences which surround us.

The case is different regarding the Son. He died and was buried, and proofs and statements are required to demonstarte the fact that he lives, and they are not wanting. Turn to the following passages in God's word, then ask yourself the query: "Why is it no such testimony is made regarding the Holy Spirit ?" Deut. 5:26; Josh. 3:10; 1 Sam. 17:26; Num. 14:21; Psa 42:2; 84:2; Jer. 10:10; 22:24; Ez. 5:11; 34:8; Dan. 6:26; Hos. 1:10; Matt. 16:16; Acts 14:16; Rom. 14:11; 2 Cor. 13:14; Heb. 7:8, 25; Rev. 1:18.

Fact 2.—All descriptions of God the Father, and all appearances of the Son are personal—whereas all manifestations of the Holy Spirit are impersonal none are personal. For example see Luke 3:22; Acts 2:3. The former passage seems to expressly imply that "bodily form" was not its natural state.

Fact 3.—The Holy Spirit has no personal name, and if a personality, would appear to be the only one living in God's universe without. The Father and Son have many names. Why should the Holy Spirit be thus singular if co-equal and co-eternal with Father and Son ? Personal names do not require the definite article. It would be absurd to say "the Peter," "the James," "the John," or "the Jesus," etc.

Fact 4. The Father and the Son frequently speak of their relationship to each other—the Holy Spirit never does so. Co-equality is certainly lacking in this respect.

Fact 5.—Both Father and Son undoubtedly exercise complete control over the Holy Spirit (Joel 2:28; John 14:16, Psa. 104:30; Matt. 12:28).

Fact 6.—Prayer is made to God, even by Jesus Christ, but prayer is never made to the Holy Spirit, nor is there any record of prayer to the Holy Spirit.

Fact 7.—Paul, writing to Timothy, distinctly affirms that there is but "one mediator' (intercessor or advocate) between God and man—the man Christ Jesus. This statement cannot be correct if the record given in Rom. 8:26, 27 applies to the Holy Spirit as a separate personal being.

Fact 8.—The Scripture terminology used relative to the Holy Spirit is altogether inconsistent with personality as any unbiased person will admit, and it is a most significant fact that no such language is ever used respecting God the Father, or Jesus Christ the Son, viz., "pour," "pour out," "anoint," "baptize," "by measure," "quench," etc. It is particularly worthy of note how almost against their will the revisers have been compelled to alter the phrase "by the Holy Spirit" to "in the Holy Spirit." Surely such a fact needs no comment!

Fact 9.—The Revised Version, in spite of the recommendation of the American committee have retained the word "ghost" instead of substituting "spirit" in all places where the prefix "Holy" occurs, evidently because it seemed to them to favor personality, though in other instances they have rendered the same word "Spirit." By substituting the word "Ghost" for "Spirit," in the other passages the absurdity of personality is very clearly demonstrated. Take for instance Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 2:10,11, 14; Phil. 2:1; 1 Thess. 5:19; 1 John 5:8; Rev. 2:7; 1 Cor. 13:3, 4, 7-9, 11, 13.

Fact 10.—The fact that the personal pronoun is used in connection with it, does not demonstrate that there is another God beside the Father. If we read of the Spirit coming, guiding, speaking, showing and teaching, we understand clearly enough that God does these things by the instrumentality of the Spirit proceeding from him, as Christ said, making various persons and objects his medium of communications. We would call attention to the fact that though the personal pronoun is used through the necessities of grammar (as in French), the neuter pronoun is used also as in 1 Pet. 1:11, "It (the spirit) testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ." Wisdom is personified, sin is also personified.

Were I to leave the subjet here I should be greatly disappointed in my task, for I am no believer in pulling down what I believe to be error unless I have good hope of building something entirely better in its place. Put to practical test in the light of the foregoing remarks, what solid ground for comfort have orthodoxy got ? By their own confession they cannot understand, or attempt to explain the doctrine of the Trinity, nor can they explain the difficulty in which they are placed when they teach that all three persons of the Trinity pre-existed the time of Christ, and took part in the affairs of men right up to the time when Christ promised to give them "another Comforter." Who then is this other Comforter ? How can he be the third person of an already existing Trinity?

We have previously stated that we agree that the Holy Spirit (except in manifestation) is the same throughout Scripture, but we insist that the very variety of manifestation is itself a strong argument against personality of any sort ; other than association with personality.

When we come to recognize the fact that the Holy Spirit is the "Power of the Highest" which "proceedeth from the Father," that it is the Spirit of the Lord, the Spirit of God who is in heaven (Dan. 2:28; Psa. 102:19; Psa. 123:1), we begin to understand something of its wonderful nature, and its operation in differing manifestations. "By his spirit he garnished the heavens" (Job 26:13). "By his Spirit are all things created and sustained in life" (Psa. 104:29, 30). The Spirit of God is everywhere. We canot evade it (Psa. 139:7-12). It was by the Spirit of God that Samson did his marvellous feats; by this power also Elisha detecected the deception a Gehazi, and Peter the lies of Ananias, Anna and others were 'full of the Spirit" as also Stephen. Christ himself used the Spirit of God (Matt. 12:28, see margin). It became the "Holy Spirit" when definitely set apart for carrying on the work of God's Holy Servant, Jesus.

In what way then, considering all these various manifestations, had the Holy Spirit as promised by Christ not yet been manifested so as to cause him to say he would send them another Comforter, Advocate or Helper ? (John 14:16) ?We get further information by noticing carefully our Savior's remarks, descriptive of the promise, and the results accruing from its fulfilments.

Notice Christ's expression, that this promised other Comforter (thus implying a former one) is called "the Spirit of truth." Then turn to Deut. 33:10, from this we get a reference to Malachi 2:6, 7, and we gain the information that the Old Testament "law" was called "the law of truth." David in the Psalms calls the law "the word of truth" (Psa. 119:43, 142, 151, 160). Notice how Christ after speaking of the Comforter, immediately speaks of those who keep his word, or rather, as he says himself, not his word, but the Father's, and the comforting results that follow. Then he comes back again, as it were, and talks to them of the Comforter. Even the Holy Spirit, which he at least three times calls "the Spirit of truth." Peter tells us, "Holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit," or in other words the Holy Spirit was manifested through these men in the "law of truth." That this "law of truth" was a Comforter and Helper the Psalms of David amply testify. Truth is not a personality, but like wisdom it may be and is personified.

Notice other results that were to follow the special gift of the Holy Spirit:

1. The Spirit was to guide into all the truth.
2. To testify of Christ.
3. To show, or declare things to come.

Now are not all these promises exactly fulfilled in the New Testament and in no other way? Let us examine them carefully and see if it is not so, and if it is so, surely the force of the argument cannot fail to be seen!

1st.—Do not all Christians agree that no man can be guided into all truth apart from the word which is truth?

2nd.—Do we accept any testimony or witness concerning Christ as authoritative, other than that given by the "Spirit of truth" or "word of truth," which is the same?

3rd.—Is reliable knowledge of "things to come" attainable any other way than through the Old and New Testaments which are both manifestations of the Holy Spirit of God? And surely in both of these we find "Comfort" and "Help" so that we may be able "to comfort others with the comfort whereby we ourselves are comforted of God."

Paul speaks much of comfort. He found the Scriptures a great comfort (Rom. 15:4; 2 Cor. 1:3; 2 Thess. 2:17).

The Old Testament is one Comforter.

The New Testament is another Comforter. See Psa. 119:49, 50; Psa. 23:4; Rom. 15:4.

A straight answer to the three questions above will do much to solve difficulties in relation to this all important subject.

Other very important points might yet be considered, such as the studied omission of any mention of the Holy Spirit in many passages which would unquestionably demand it were the Holy Spirit a personality. Space, however, forbids unless our indulgent editor permits a continued article.

R. H. JUDD.

Note.—The foregoing article deserves to be carefully studied. It deals with a question of more than ordinary importance, for there is no phase of Bible teaching where the Holy Spirit (or "Spirit of God") is not in evidence. It is everywhere present: "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence" (Psa. 139:7)!

In counteracting our defects, we should be cautious not to blunder by imitation of others. We should search till we find where our character fails, and then amend it—nor attempt to become another man.

Ishmael and Esau Covenants

IT IS evident to the careful and studious Bible student that when Ishmael was born that Abraham believed him to be the promised seed (Gen. 13:15). To this seed was promised the spiritual, future blessing. Abraham so believed until he was informed by the angel that this seed was to come through Sarah as well as himself. The message was that through his coming son, Isaac, the seed must be called. This introduces a new and very important covenant. It overshadows all covenants, and is a part of the covenant made with the woman (Gen. 3:15). The purpose of this article is to examine into the force and extent of each covenant.

We wish to examine the covenant in the order above stated. When Isaac was promised, Abraham was greatly disturbed as to Ishmael's standing before God. His prayer was: "O that Ishmael might live before thee!" (Gen. 17:18). In Isaac's birth Abraham understood that Ishmael had no part in the future spiritual blessing. From only one could a multitudinous seed come. This seed was to vitalize all who would be blessed with faithful Abraham (Gal. 3). It constitutes the Christ-seed, as Paul informs us in Gal. 3:16. This supercedes all other covenants and extends from Gen. 3:15 through the Old and New Testaments. We wish to consider the covenant made with Ishmael, which is found in Gen. 17:20: "As for Ishmael, I have heard thee: behold, I have blessed him, and I will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget and I will make him a great nation." We must understand that this is a national covenant and embraces only the blessings that would come through the influence of human governments.

This covenant having to do with human governents could only rule until the Isaac seed shall through Christ be given the ruling power. The right to a temporal rule was the greatest blessing that could be conferred upon such as Ishmael and his seed. If the Ishmaelitish seed became a beneficiary of the Abrahamic seed, it must come by obeying the conditions of that covenant. It is a well established fact that Ishmael and his seed have at all times fought the Isaac seed. As a nation the Ishmael seed can claim no part of the futur rulership of the world. They constitute a part of the thorns and briers that is nigh unto cursing: whose end is to be burned (Heb. 6:8).

We shall now notice the covenant made with Esau and his seed. He was a son of Isaac and was lawfully entitled to the birthright blessing which granted to him the possession of the future spiritual blessing. With this blessing however there must accompany a special fitness.

In the conception of Esau and Jacob there seems to have been conditions that disturbed the mother, Rebecca, who went to the Lord. The children struggled together with her. The Lord said unto her, "Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and the elder shall serve the younger" (Gen. 24.23). We have the same condition here as in the covenant with Ishmael: it was national and required a special fitness to rule. The history of the two sons shows that only one possessed the fitness to produce a Christ seed. Esau became a cunning hunter, a man of the fields; Jacob was a plain man dwelling in tents. Isaac loved Esau because he did eat of his venison. But Rebecca loved Jacob. Paul reveals this to us in Rom. 9: "This is the word of promise, at this time will I come and Sarah shall have a son," and not only this; but when Rebecca also had conceived by one, even our father Isaac. Now follows Paul's interpretation of God's purpose in disregarding the birthright blessing upon one who was unfit to possess it: "For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth."

This reveals the true purpose of God. He reserved the right to elect on the basis of special fitness. This establishes the fact that the trickery resorted to by Rebecca and Jacob had no bearing on conferring the birthright blessing on Jacob. It proved the unfitness of Esau to become the future ruler. To further his purpose God overruled the law of a birthright belonging to the elder son. An intelligent faithfulness is required to become an elect seed.

"While Speaking I will Hear"

I HAVE a little story to tell in connection with the receipt of one particular, that will I think strengthen the faith of every member of the household. One morning recently I had read a chapter in Job, and we had as is our daily custom, asked God to guide and keep us through the day.

On rising from my knees I thought to myself, "I will look at the new Restitution and see how our fund is going on." I did so and saw that we were yet far from making the desired amount, and such a sense of my utter weakness helplessness without God would help me in this matter that I turned again to him beseeching him to give us the desired sum we so sorely need.

You know how helpless I am, dear Father, how weak, how frail I feel. I have no one to go to but you, no one else to lean on. I trust in you. You know just where the money is. I do not even know what else to say to your dear children. Quick as a flash came the words, "Be not weary in well doing;" "Use those words for your text." I have done so.

But this is not all of the story. When the mail carrier came a few hours later, there was a letter from a dear brother who lives in New Jersey. I opened it, and there was a post office order for thirteen dollars, a sum that had unexpectedly come into his hands that he said I should use to swell our fund!

His letter bore date of Sept. 7th. An undated letter from Frances T. Chapman, brought five dollars, and another from Brother F. and Sister Anna Cook also brought five.

Do you wonder that I said, "O thank you! thank you, dear Father." Do you wonder in my rejoicing in such a God as that. Has he not kept his promise to answer, even before we call. Surely the raising of this fund is of him.

Give, and he will repay.

Origin and Nature of the Church of God

ALL WHO are new creatures in Christ Jesus are the Israel of God overcomers or prevailers with God (Gal. 6:15, 16; Gen. 32:28; Rev. 3:21). These called out sons of God are also called the churches of Christ or congregations of the anointed to distinguish them from non-Christian assemblies.

They are referred to twelve times in the singular and plural as the church of God or churches of God in the sense that God is the head of the whole family of angels and saints including the first sinless Son of God, Jesus the Christ (Acts 20: 28, 1 Cor. 1:2; 10:32; 11:16, 22; 15:19; 2 Cor. 1:1; Gal. 1:13; 1 Thess. 2:14; 2 Thess. 1:14; 1 Tim. 3:5, 15). See also Rev. 3:13; Eph. 3:15; John 17:6-22. No sect or denomination has the right to apply this name exclusively to its membership, since we would have to be able to read the hearts of all men, and the book of lif in heaven, in order to know those who constitute this mystical body of Christ.

"The church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth," is only applicable to a body of saints whose bodies are a temple in whom the living God by the Holy Spirit lives and walks (2 Cor. 6:16; 1 Tim. 3:15).

On Pentecost we read that believers were added to the Lord, and that the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved (Acts 2:47; 5:14; 11: 24); therefore the church or body of Christ, or family of sons and daughters of God did not begin at Pentecost.

Hagar and her son Ishmael represent in type the old Semitic covenant and the national church of God in the wilderness, or Israel after the flesh (Gal. 4; Acts 7:38).

Sarah and Isaac represent the new covenant and the New Testament church of this dispensation of grace, under the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, children of God who are actuated not by fear of outward law or the penalties, but by the spirit of love within (2 Cor. 3; Rom. 8; Col. 5; Eph.2).

Rebecca represents the bride of Christ, veiled and dressed in white, waiting for her beloved to meet her, when the marriage will consummate her joy and glory (Gen. 24; Rev. 19). Adam was the first son of God (Luke 3:38), but lost his place in the spiritual body by sin, but in Abel and Seth we see the beginning of the holy seed, or the church or temple of the living God, and this ecclesia runs down through such saints as Enoch, Noah, Abraham Isaac, the prophets, Jesus, the pentecostal saints and the martyrs and spiritually minded to the present time. Hence since the mystery of God has been unfolding all along the ages, and God has dealt differently with them in different ages, we will consider the church under four heads.

1. The patriarchal church, or family church of God under the Father or oldest spiritual leader from Adam to Moses.

2. The national church of Israel under the law of Moses, under a conditional covenant, to demonstrate man's inability to save himself by his own righteousness apart from grace (Rom. 5; Eph.2).

3. The new covenant church manifested on Pentecost, saved by grace through faith and filled with the Holy Spirit, a body of sons and daughters of God open to individuals of all nations who will repent of sin and accept of salvation from both sin and death by the grace of God and as a free gift of love (Gal. 3; Rom. 11).

4. Lastly, the perfect man state of the church, in resurrected capacity, when all the dead and living saints are glorified with their head on the plane of immortality (1 Cor. 15).

Since Jesus was as a Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, and since the saints were chosen in him before the foundation of the world, there is no difficulty in including in this one church or body all the children of God, who obey him from love and who were justified through faith by grace whether they lived before or after the birth of Jesus the Christ (Rev. 13:8; 1 Pet. 1:20; Eph. 1:4).

The sacrifice of the true saints were always living sacrifices, whether they lived before, under, or after the law of Moses (Psa. 40; Rom. 12).

The angels of God were the mediators and priests of God from Adam until the ascension of our Lord to the right hand of God, when he became the one Mediator with all the angels as his servant under him.

Angels caried the incense of prayer to heaven, returned from heaven with answers to prayer, forgave sins and executed God's judgments as priests of God for 4000 years from Adam (Gen. 3:24; 18; 19; Dan.9; Rev. 8; Isa.6).

In Heb. 11 we have a list of these new covenant children of God in whose hearts God's laws were written by the Spirit of love, and who received pardon of sins and a new heart and a new spirit before the nation of Israel was born, with whom both the old and new covenants were made (Jer. 31; Ezek. 36).

Abel was justified by faith 4000 years B. C. and obtained witness that he was righteous (Heb. 11). Enoch walked with God, and was justified by faith and God translated him. Abraham was justified by faith, sanctified, and by faith saw both the heavenly country and holy city, the future centre of world government.

Moses endured as seeing him who is invisible, and esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt 1500 years before the birth of Jesus in the flesh. "Others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection," which places the whole body on the same plane of immortality.

For us, of this Christian era, a better thing has been provided in the birth, death, resurrection and priesthood of the Christ as a faith strengthener, yet they without us shall not be made perfect (vs. 39, 40). Also 1 Thess. 4 shows that all in Christ are made perfect at the same time.

Job saw his Redeemer by faith standing in the latter days on the earth, and is classed with the righteous by faith (Job 19; Heb. 11:32).

Hence before the law of Moses, under the law, and since the law, sinners could find a way back to God by repentance and faith, through an angelic priesthood who carried their prayers and confessions and living sacrifices to the true sanctuary in heaven, entirely independent of the Mosaic sanctuary, or the dead temple of Solomon.

The antitypical court is on earth; the Holy Place with its shewbread, lampstand and altar of incense are all on earth, and only the antitypical ark of the covenant and High Priest and spiritual sacrifices are beyond the veil—the flesh—in heaven. Hence heaven and earth is the true sanctuary that the Lord pitched and not man (Heb. 8 to 13; Lev. 16:17); Isa. 66).

The true church has:

1. One head, Christ (Eph. 1:23; 5:23).
2. One body, one fold (Eph. 4:4; John 10).
3. One door, one way (1 Tim. 2:5; John 14:6)
4. One spirit, one bond of union, love (1 Cor. 12:13; Col. 3:14).
5. One foundation (Eph. 2:20; 1 Cor. 3:11).
6. One builder (Psa. 127:1; Acts 2:47; 5:14; 11: 24).
7. One organizer (1 Cor. 12:18; Matt. 16:18).
8. One creed (2 Tim. 3:16, 17; Eccl. 12:13).
9. One church book (Luke 10:33; Heb. 12:23). Rev. 3:5; 13:8; Exod. 32:32).
10. One discipline, the New Testament (2 Cor. 3; Col. 2; Gal. 4).
11. The church book not on earth (Jer. 17:13; Rev. 17:5).

A Book Proposed on Satan

FOR SOME time the undersigned has been requested by different brethren to publish a book on the above subject, and many have volunteered money to help do so.

The writer has laid this before the General Conference, but at present they are not equipped to do it; also it is though best that the General Conference should not sponsor a view not shared by all who are part of such Conference.

We therefore take this way of presenting the matter to the brethren at large according to the following plan:

We will not undertake it yet unless the brethren wish it so. We are ready to do the literary part without intention of personal profit if others wish to undertake the financial burden, but we are not able to assume both burdens.

If you wish to share financially in such effort please address me at Belle Plain, Ia., and say how many copies you wish and how much you wish to contribute. In our judgment, the copy we would write would make a book costing not over a dollar, but that is only an estimate. Do not send money now.

The Restoration of Israel

Zionism a Fulfilment of Prophecy

THE FOLLOWING is an article from the pen of Arthur Brisbane, who writes for the Cleveland Daily News: "Prejudice and race hatred are dying, but slowly. Race hatred, resulting in murder. among ignorant peasants of Eastern Europe. does not surprise you. But when race hatred taking a new lease of life. appears in the far West in a weekly newspaper owned by Henry Ford. one of the most useful citizens of this country, you are surprised. What cunning instigation persuades Mr. Ford to deal with a subject he does not understand, to attack a race of whose achievements and history he is ignorant, and to use the great influence of his name and the slight influence of his newspaper harmfully? Ford presumably willing to learn, should study with open mind, as he studies gas engines and transportation. the history of the Jewish people. A book simply written is offered to his attention, "Jewish Contribution to Civilization," written by Joseph Jacobs, published in Philadelphia by the Jewish Publication Society of America.

"Jews are disliked because they have been successful. In lines that have been open to them, not closed by prejudice and hatred, they have been conquerors. World conquerors have never been liked by those that studied their excellence. From the Phoenician of old a Semitic people that led the world in daring, to Yankees and Japanese conquerors of today, there has been no love wasted on winners by those they overcame. Romans, Normans, Spaniards, Englishmen, Prussians, Goths, Mongols, in their days of conquest were never popular. The Jew's conquest in his own field has run through centuries, beginning more than 2000 years before our era, and running up to this day. Every other successful name that you see, in a great city, is a Jewish name.

"Jews numbering less than one per cent of the earth's population, possess by conquest, enterprise, industry and intelligence fifty per cent of the world's commercial success. They are disliked by those that seek excuse for failure. This of course does not apply to Henry Ford, who could buy, with perhaps two or three exceptions, the richest Jew in the world once every year and have plenty left. Those that misrepresent Henry Ford's real character and the historical facts in Mr. Ford's weekly newspaper are repeating what they have heard, not what they know or believe. Mr. Ford should remember how he himself has been ignorantly or maliciously attacked and hated. As an antidote to prejudice and lies handed down through centuries there are here offered to Ford and others a few facts.

"You are told that Jews reap the harvest of those that dare, that they do not take risks on their own account. What about the Phoenicians? They were of the Semitic race. They were first to sail from the Mediterranean through the Straits of Gibraltar out into the wild Atlantic. They were first to open the tin mines of England, and the first daring explorers in many lands. They were first to navigate out of sight of land, travelling at night by the stars—they had no compass—risking shipwreck in fog or cloudy weather. Does that show lack of enterprise or physical courage?

"Men ask 'What have Jews contributed to the intellect of the world?' In our own day and in almost every country they have illustrious representatives in all departments of intellectual and business activities. Three books have influenced the human mind above others—Homer, Eesop's Fables, and the Bible. The Jews wrote the Bible and gave Christianity to the world. The mother of Christ was a Jewess—especially chosen, undoubtedly for nobility of character and purity of soul. That fact alone should make 'Christians' hesitate to condemn Jews indiscriminately. The intellect of man owes much to the writing of Jews, who possesst the art of condensing thought. Here are a few sayings that Henry Ford and others use often, not suspecting that they are quoting the Jewish mind: 'A tale that is told;' 'A land flowing with milk and honey'; 'The wife of my bosom'; 'The apple of my eye'; 'Vanity of vanities'; 'Heaping coals of fire'; 'Weighed in the balance and found wanting'; 'Put not thy trust in princes'; 'Go to the ant thou sluggard'; 'Righteousness exalteth a nation'; 'A soft answer turneth away wrath'; 'Love is strong as death.' Is there lack of mental concentration in these sayings that might be streched out to fill every column of this newspaper?

"Whether the Jews originated monotheism, belief in one God, or borrowed the idea from the Babylonians, who borrowed it from others, we do not know. But we know that we got that idea from the Jews, and we should be grateful to them.

"Those that misrepresent Jews say they are not creators in industry, that they live by getting part of profit produced by someone else. As well say that Henry Ford is not a creator in the automobile business, but simply draws profit from the men who invented the gas engine. In modern industrial and commercial progress the railroad stands at the head. Have Jews done anything for the railroads of the world? The Rothschilds carried the lead in building the Great Northern Railroad of France, and the principal railway in Austria. Baron de Hirsch founded his fortune by establishing his railway system in the Balkans. Like many other Jews, he left all of that fortune to be spent in good work after his death. The German-Jewish banking house of Bleichroeder was the backbone of the Prussian railway system until the government took it over. The Bischoffheims built up the railway system of Belgium. The Pereires, also Jews, built the southren railway for Russia. Ask the ghost of E. H. Harriman how the Jewish firm of Kohn, Loeb & Co. enabled him to develop his lines making it possible to change them into real railroads to the tune of fifty thousand miles of trackage and twelve billions of dollars. Jewish enterprise that runs practically every manufacturing sewing machine in the United States, also started running the biggest locomotives of the world. Those Pereires that developed the railroads in south Russia also developed railroad systems in the north of France, and they were the creators of the Credit Foncier and Credit Mobilier, that became the chief pillars of financial strength in France. Men like the Pereires and others were not only "business men." One, Jacob Rodriquez Periere, was first to teach deaf mutes, which is not exactly a money-making enterprise. All of that family were earnest radicals. by the way, and making millions. did not, as usually happens, cure them of radicalism and original thought.

Is Man Immortal?

IF man is immortal there is no life beyond.

IF man is immortal he cannot receive life and immortality through the gospel (2 Tim. 1:10).

IF man is immortal he receives this life through Adam.

IF man is immortal there is no need of searching the Scriptures.

IF man is immortal he does not get it through Christ (John 5:11, 12),

IF man is immortal he cannot be converted (Matt. 15:19).

IF man is immortal he cannot be alienated from the life of God, because he has the life in him self (Eph. 4:18).

IF man is immortal he cannot be renewed in spirit (Eph. 4:23).

IF man is immortal he cannot grieve the Holy Spirit (Eph. 4:30).

IF man is immortal he cannot be saved by believing on Christ (Acts 16:31).

IF man is immortal he cannot be saved through faith (Eph. 2:8).

IF man is immortal then the Scriptures are written in vain.

IF man is immortal there is no need of a Savior.

IF man is immortal he cannot sin (1 John 3:9).

IF man is imomrtal it was useless for Christ to say, "Come ye blessed of my Father" (Matt. 25:34).

IF man is immortal all he has before him is an endless life of sin.

THE NEW Berean lesson outlines are ready for distribution. Price 15 cents. Lessons from this book are to be started October 1. If you have not purchased from your state Berean President order from Evelyn K. Harsch, 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

If you have not finished your other book, for the sake of uniformity in the work, will you please lay it aside and begin the new one on the first of October. This was done when the last books were put out and proved more satisfactory for many reasons that individual members can realize. None felt the sacrifice of the few cents in laying aside an unfinished book. Please help again by ordering your books now and beginning your lessons in October. Thank you.

We have a new department—The Relief Committee. The chairman is Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 193

Spruce St., Aurora, Ill. Further notice will appear concerning this department.

A GOOD REPORT

At the General Conference session held at Waterloo, Iowa, the following members of the NationalBerean Executive Board were in attendance: Leila E. Whitehead, President, Frank E. Siple, 1st Vice President, Clyde F. Randall, 2nd Vice President, Mrs. F. V. Blakeley, Rec. Sec., J. E. Hammond, Treasurer, Russell F. Zeller, Pres. Nebraska Bereans, Mrs. Lydia Railsback, President Indiana Bereans and Chairman Tract Committee, Leota B. Hanson, Chairman Literary Committee, and Mrs. Orpha Sanford, Chairman Relief Committee.

From an Executive Board made up of members from all parts of the country, nine forms a representative of which we are proud.

As soon as the Constitution was adopted, by which the General Conference became an established fact, a Berean Executive Board meeting was called to ratify this contsitution. This was done by unanimous vote.

May God bless this great step toward unifying the work of the churches, and let each Berean help in every possible way.

Our new Berean Treasurer is J. E. Hammond, South Side Station, Rt. 5, Omaha, Nebraska.

NOTICE: Watch for the announcement concerning Junior Berean lesson books. They are being prepared.

ILLINOIS BEREAN BUSINESS MEETING

THE 24th Anual Business Meeting of the Illinois Berean Society was held at Oregon, Ill., Aug. 12, 1921.

After the reports of the Secreary and Treasurer were given the reports of the various Societies, including one new and two reorganized societies were read. All of these reports showed regularity in meetings, attendance, and payment of dues. The Tract Committee reported more than one thousand tracts distributed during the year. Letters were read that had been sent by isolated members. Several of the isolated members have taken up the Berean work and report their lessons regularly. Sister Mildred and Helen Nell, who were baptized during the Bible School session this year, are planning on taking up the Berean work as isotated members.

The officers of the previous year were re-elected and are as follows:

Anna E. Drew, Dixon, Ill, ... President
Paul Hatch, Chicago, Ill., ... 1st Vice President
Leota Hanson St. Louis Mo., .. 2nd Vice President
Mabel Canode, Oregon, Ill., ... Secretary
Sylvan Richey, Martinsville, Ill., ... Treasurer

The following committees were appointed:

Literary:
Mrs. Bertha Smith, ...Altamont, Ill.
Elizabeth Ordnung, ... Oregon, Ill.
Walter Wiggins, ... Eldorado, Ill.

Program:
Zenas Murphy, ... Marshall, Ill.
Mina Knodle, ... Oregon, Ill.

Tract:
Mae Miller, ... St. Jacob, Ill.

Isolated:
Lyman Booth, ... Dixon, Ill.

Berean Social Meetings were held each evening during the conference session. The topics for the various evenings were as follows: Favorite Bible Texts; Favorite Bible Characters; Our Hope.

Unashamed

And now little children, abide in him, that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming (1 John 2:25).

WE LIKE to know the exact meaning of words, and so we ask ourselves what it means to "abide in him"? We turn to our concordance and it says "to continue," "to remain." We must continue or remain in Jesus if we would have confidence (or freespokeness, boldness) when he shall appear; knowing that no green, thrifty, fruit-bearing branch will be severed by the husbandman from the true vine, to be cast forth and wither, and be burned in the fire. "For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified. whereof the Holy Spirit is also a witness to us;" for did not that Spirit foretell long ago through the prophets "This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them; and their sins and their iniquities I will remember no more.. Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin." The past of our lives is blotted out.

We abide, "continue," or "remain" in Jesus if we hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, and have boldness to enter into the holiest "by his blood," by a new and living way which he hath consecrated for us through the veil, that is to say his flesh. And having an high priest over the house of God, we can "draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water," in baptism.

With al consciousness of guilt taken away, with a heart thoroughly embued with the truth," "with not a doubt as to our acceptance when coming to God through the blood of Christ," we can thus get into Christ and abide in him.

But we can abide in him, only as his word abides in us, for he says, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my father's commanuments and abide in his love." "Ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." "If a man love me he will keep my words, and my father will love him and make our abode with him." "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son" (2 John 9).

Jesus said, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God." That is what we are to do, if we want to abide in Christ. We must walk as Jesus walked, making no crooked paths, wandering not out of the way; for "whosoever abideth in him sinneth not," (or lives not in the practice of sin). "Whosoever sinneth" (or lives in the practice of sin) hath not seen him nor known him;" have never seen God as he is in the purity and holiness of his character, and therefore do not know him. Keep your fellowship with God and with his Son, Jesus Christ by holding fast to the truth.

But what about the word "confidence?" It is a good word; it means "trust" as well as boldness. I have a picture of two orphan girls, the older one looking upward with clear, shining eyes, represents faith; the little sister, nestling in her lap, represents c onfidence. I love the picture, for just such childlike trust becomes ours from abiding in Jesus; trust that makes us unafraid and unashamed.

David said a great deal about being unashamed: "O my God, I trust in thee;" he says, "Let me not be ashamed, let not mine enemies triumph over me. Yea, let none that wait on thee be ashamed. Let them be ashamed that transgress without cause." And again, "Let me not be ashamed, O Lord, for I have called upon thee; let the wicked be ashamed, and let them be silent in the grave. Let the lying lips be put to silence which speak grievous things proudly and presumptionsly against the righteous" (as the recanting Jews spake "grievous things proudly and presumptionsly" against Christ).

The Lord knoweth the days of the upright, and their inheritance shall be forever. They shall not be ashamed in the evil time, and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied. But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs: they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away."

"Let my heart be sound in thy statutes that I be not ashamed."

"I will speak of thy statutes before kings, and will not be ashamed."

"My testimonies have I taken for an heritage forever, for they are the rejoicing of my heart."

"Uphold me according unto thy word that I may live: and let me not be ashamed of my hope."

"Thou puttest away all the wicked of the earth like dross; therefore I love thy testimonies."

These words of David illustrate what I have clearly said, that if we would not be ashamed when the Lord comes we must make "the testimonies of the living God our heritage forever, must keep them unto the end, not turning back to "the weak and begarly elements of the world,." for those who thus "draw back into perdition" will most certainly be ashamed, but will find no place to hide, no city of refuge where they can flee unto and be safe. Our God is a God of love, but he is also a consuming fire, that no wilful sinner can escape. Little children, little sons, believers, abide in him. "Look to yourselves, that you lose not those things which you have wrought, but that you receive a full reward." Do not forget that he that keepeth the commandments of Jesus dwelleth in him, and he in us in like way. "And hereby we know he abideth in us by his Spirit that he has given us."

Another test of abiding discipleship is that you "bear much fruit." You have not been called just to save yourselves, but to save others. I have already alluded to this as one of the conditions of your abiding in the vine. Where are your fruits?

A Paper Representing The Church of God

VOLUME 73 CLEVELAND, OHIO, SEPTEMBER 13th, 1921. NUMBER 34

Helpless Disbelievers

Dark are the skies to the faithless,
  Bitter their hours of grief;
Heavy the blow that is struck by woe,
  To the people of no belief;
Having no God to turn to,
  Having no God to trust,
They are tossed about with the winds of doubt
  As hopeless as grains of dust.

They may laugh and sing in their summer,
  And scoff when their skies are fair,
But they wither and fade when their games are played
  And they come to the touch of care.
For nothing that man has whispers
  And nothing that man has said,
Can soften the grief of a disbelief
  In the hours when its love lies dead.

Life is but death to the faithless,
  For never a joy can last;
They have none to share in their black despair,
  Nor a hope when the storm has passed.
They are broken reeds in their sorrow
  Weak prey to the winds of woe,
For they've no belief that can conquer grief,
  No strength for the bitter blow.

Faith is the light in the darkness,
  Faith is the promise fair,
And none so stout he can do without
  The strength of an earnest prayer.
For whenever man comes to sorrow
  And whenever he bows to grief,
Let come what will, he can bear it still Sustained by a firm belief.—Selected by Brother Jesse Titman.

Are the British Israel?

IT IS with a feeling of very great inexperience that I have determined to put together a few notes which I have gathered from the perusal of the British-Israel subject. My idea in doing so is to condense as far as possible facts and thoughts gleaned after much reading, being convinced that we are the actual descendants of the patriarch Abraham, that those who may not have the leisure or sufficient facilities for procuring the necessary books may be able to share our delight in reading the Old Testament Scriptures (especially all the prophets) and join with us in giving praise and glory to our faithful God in these latter days.

"British" is a Hebrew word meaning "Covenant open." "Brit" is the Hebrew for covenant and "Ish" is the Hebrew for man." "Brittania" is Brit and anna, a "ship" meaning covenant with the ships.

At the end of king Solomon's reign, there is mentioned in the Bible a great revolution, as was prophesied in 1 Kings 2:31, and Israel, which had always been twelve tribes, was now split up under Rehoboam and Jeroboam. Ten tribes followed the latter, and two tribes Rehoboam. The ten tribes under Jeroboam fell into idolatry and were very soon allowed to be conquered by the Assyrians, and subsequently taken captive by them into Media, and other parts in that neighborhood. There were several migrations into Media between the seventh and eighth centuries B. C. Media is still a district situated on the west coast of the Caspian Sea (Russia), and we hear no more about them since then: they became swallowed up completly in the land of their captivity.

The two tribes of Judah and Benjamin remained in Palestine for about 100 years after the ten tribes (their brothers), and then, owing to their idolatry, they too were conquered and carried off, but to quite a different place, viz., Babylon, and many of them found their way back to Palestine (as we read in Ezra and Nehemiah), and were there in the time of our Lord, and were called "Jews." It is supposed that the peculiar look by which a Jew can always be recognized, only came to them after the crucifixion, owing to the curse which they put on themselves: "His blood be on us, and our children"; like Cain, who was marked because he slew his brother; for why is it that there are many Jews in New York and elsewhere who have no distinguishing look whatever in features from their neighbors, but have their geneologies to show tenaciously their ancestry? May it not be suggested these Jews were not in Palestine at the time of our Lord's earthly life, but had emigrated previously, our God arranging in his mercy that the whole tribe should not bear the curse. The Jews (or house of Judah as God's word calls them) have never been lost but have been poor, unloved, downtrodden, persecuted as we know, ever since.

Not being able to follow the history and doings of the ten tribes in their captivity, we must search next for the origin of the Anglo-Saxon. The Saxons were first heard of about 36 years after the last of the ten tribes had ben carried off to Armenia, Media, etc., etc. There is to be found in the British Museum an Assyrian papyrus which chronicles how there was a political upheaval in Media, and a people called Scythians (wanderers) held a meeting at which they decided to leave their masters, with whom they lived in great slavery, and would look for a country where no doubt they could worship the God of their fathers, which they had not done in their own land. They, therefore, set out, making their exit less noticeable, some via the north, some the south, and some through the centre of Europe. As they travelled their name was variously spelt Sacar, Saachi, Saachsen, etc., all from the Patriarch Isaac, and Saachs sens (Isaac's sons) united in our word "Saxon," the "chs" being pronounced "x" in Saac's sens. Thus is fulfilled God's promise to Abraham, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called" (Gen. 21:12).

One very powerful tribe, "The Eagles," came through Germany, and by perpetual speech and course of time the name Engles soon became "Angles," and "Anglo." The meaning of the word "Engle" is bull, which being the sign on their standard, was the cause of this tribe being so designated. In Deut. 33:17, the sons of Joseph are likened to a bullock and a unicorn, both of which are to be seen on our Royal Standard today; by study one may be excused thinking that these were the tribe of Ephraim. The meaning of England is "Engle land," or the land of the bull, hence our nickname John Bull.

The following facts will be co-incident if nothing more significant. It is thought that each of the twelve sons of Jacob took a sign of the zodiac for their standards . We find the lion of the tribe of Judah mentioned in Rev. 5:5. (There are nine lions, one unicorn, and a harp on our Royal Standard today). In the blessings of Jacob to his sons in Gen. 49:27, Benjamin is likened to a wolf, and King William of Normandy, 1066, who with his followers were called Northsmen, having come from Scandinavia had a wolf on his standard. As we have never been conquered since 1066, it is supposed therefore, that the tribe of Benjamin was the last of the tribes to arrive in these islands, and completed the union of Jacob, hence the United Kingdom, The Union Jack simply means the union of Jacob. Jack is English, Jacques, French, Jacobus, Latin; and Jacob Hebrew.

The first letter of the Hebrew alphabet is Aleph, and is similar to the X (St. Andrews cross). It is also the same in the Greek for the initial of "Christ." Then in the ancient Hebrew the last letter was formed X (our St. George's cross). It reminds one of "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord" (Rev. 1:8). The mark of the beast mentioned in Revelation is "Tau," and being like a counterfeit of the true sign, is formed X which we call the Latin cross, and where the mark is ever mentioned you will find it written thus.

Now put St. Andrew's and St. George's crosses one upon the other, you will see a perfect star is made and we read in Numbers 24:17, "There shall come a star out of Jacob," which cannot possibly refer to the star seen over Bethlehem where our Savior was born, as it goes on to say, "he shall smite the corners of Moab," etc.; but may very will be our standard. The Union Jack represents in an irrefutable way, that we are his own chosen people, the children of Israel.

The Danes, Gaels, Frisians, Jutes (Judes, Jews), Picts, Northsmen, Engles, Albanians, Celedonians and Dalriadians were all tribes of the Saxon stock, and have been traced back to Media (if not farther), the district lying on the west coast of the Caspian Sea, Israel's land of captivity.

In Genesis 49:17 Jacob prophesies that "Dan is to be a serpent by the way," and so one finds traces of Dan all through Europe, such as Danube, Denmark, Scandinavia. The ancient Hebrew had no vowels at all in the written language, so Duncan, Don-ald, etc., may easily be attributed to the name "Dan," according to sound.

The ancient Britons are the oldest inhabitants one hears of in these islands. They were here long before the invasion of the Danes or Saxons. It is thought that the word "Briton" is of Hebrew origin, the Hebrew word "Pry-Dain" meaning "offspring" and "Dan" (offspring of Dan), and by time and curruption of speech it was spelt as we have it now—Briton.

The annals and legends in ancient Irish history (Erse language) refer to the tribe of Naphtali and the "Tuatha de Danaan" (tribe of Dan) arriving there in the 12th century B. C. (In God's word, about the time of the book of Judges). All the territories of the tribe of Dan were on the sea coast of Palestine, and they took to maritiming, for one reads in Deborah's song (Judge. 5:17). "Why did Dan remain in the ships?" It also looks as if they brought the harp to Ireland. The figures represent guardianship. David played on the harp before king Saul. The Phoenicians were settling in the south and west of this island about that same time also. These same annals also give the information that the prophet Jeremiah brought with him, from Palestine. Tea Talphi, one of the daughters of Zedekiah, the king who had his eyes put out, as we read in 2 Kings 25:7. The legend says Jeremiah married her to Heremon, the king of Tara, who was already the offspring of Dan (Pry-Dain), and that he brought the stone, which is now resting in Westminster Abbey, for her to be crowned on. This stone is supposed to be Jacob's pillow, which he set up for a pillar next morning (Gen. 28:18). On it were crowned 54 kings at Tara (about 700 years), and then it was tapen to Scone Palace (Perthshire) after that, where it was about 300 years, until king Edward I had it brought to London.

The following are a few characteristics which God promised Abraham his seed should bear, and it is both our duty and privilege to see which nation bears these distinguishing marks the most. Abraham was promised in Genesis 17:2, 4-6 "I will make my covenant beween me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly and thou shalt be a father of many nations. And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee." And in Genesis 22:17, "Thy seed shall possess the gate of their enemies." etc. And to Jacob God said, "I am God Almighty; be fruiful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee" (Gen. 35:11). What other nation bears these characteristics except Great Britain and her huge colonies? They are a nation, and with her colonies "a company of nations." There is not another nation at present that even suggests that God has fulfilled his promises even partially. "The gate of his enemies" seems to point to one of the following places, all of which Great Britain possesses: Gibralta, Malta, Cyprus, Cape Town, Hong Kong, Peshawah, Falkland Islands, West Indies, Aden, Acre, Scotia, St. Helena, etc., etc.

I must now close, dear friends, with an earnest prayer to our God, that all who have read this feeble attempt to set forth his great faithfulness to us all these hundreds of years, when, so to speak, we were still in deep disgrace, may we richly blessed in their own souls. I would point out here that believing that we are the lost tribes of Israel (never really lost) will not in any way alter the fact that we can only enter heaven through our Lord Jesus Christ. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life" (John 3:36), and "him that cometh (Jew or Greek, Gentile or Barbarian) to me I will in no wise cast out" (John 6:37). F. L. C.

A Reply to 'Are British Israel'

IN MY article, "The Restoration of Israel," I incidently mentioned that 'Some believe that the Anglo-Saxons are the ten lost tribes, but Anglo-Israelism, as this theory is called, is contrary to the Scriptures, and antagonistic to Ezekiel's plain prophecies concerning Israel." An interested reader begs to differ with me, and has sent me the foregoing article written in defence of this doctrine, which calls for a reply. I shall attempt to answer, to the best of my ability, some of the arguments set forth in this article.

Some of this writers ideas and arguments are new, but others are the old ones generally used in support of this theory . We are at a loss to know why he does not sign his name, unless he thinks an anonymous article will permit him to escape the possible necessity of denfending his theory.

The prophet Hosea (3:4, 5) tells us that "The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image. After wards shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days." This plainly teaches that during the time the children of Israel are without a sacrifice or an image to worship, they are likewise without a king and without a prince.

Ezekiel declares that "It (the kingdom of Israel) shall be no more until he comes whose right it is," i. e., till Jesus the King of the Jews comes and it is given to him. How then can Anglo-Israelism be true which declares that Ireland was ruled by Israel's kingly line before Christ was born, and that the throne of David was then transplanted to England, and that Israel is now (at the present time) being ruled by her own king. This is certainly contradictory to the plain teachings of the Scriptures, and is incomprehensiwle to those who have studied this subject, using the Bible as their guide.

It is not while she is in strange countries that she seeks Israel's God, but it is after she returns to her own land. Many kings have ruled in succession over the British nation, but Ezekiel prophecies of only one person, "he whose right it is," and God "will give it him" (not them). But if it is by right King George's throne, then Christ has no right to it, and would be a usurper were he to claim his right to rule.

We are told that when the Messiah comes "The kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord," and that "all dominion (rulers) shall serve and obey him." He has been raised up to sit upon David's throne (Acts 2:30). "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David" (Luke 1:32). Does this not prove that he is the only heir, and not King George or any other person? Christ is the "he" of Ezekiel's prophecy, and proves that all others are imposters, as no one is promised David's throne but he that is heir thereto.

If Israel is already gathered as a nation of her own in what is known as the British Empire, then what does God mean when he says: "And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, they and their children, and their children's children forever" (Ezek. 37:25). "When I have brought them again from the people and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations; then shall they know that I am the Lord their God, which caused them to be led into captivity among the nations, but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there" (Ezek. 39:27, 28). Now it is plain to see, that Anglo-Israelism reverses all this; for when Israel (the Anglo-Saxons) is gathered she must be gathered, not from her enemies' lands but from her own land (the British Empire). And tell me, how would it be possible to gather the people comprising the British Empire along with the Jews into the little country of Palestine? And why indeed should they be gathered; they are as prosperous and contented as any other nation, are they not? In my article "The Restoration of Israel," I stated that the land promsied Abraham could be made to support a population of 5, 000,000. I am sure no one with any knowledge of the size of Israel's ancient land would have believed me had I said that Palestine could be made to support the Jews and England and her colonies with "their children and children's children forever."

Hence it is not surprising to learn that Anglo-Israelism teaches that Israel will never return to the land where their fathers dwelt. We believe this to be in direct contradiction to the plain and explicit teaching of the prophetic word. Moses, as the leader of God's chosen people. Israel, was instructed to warn them in these words: "If thou wilt not obey to do all the words of this law, that are found written in this book, then thou shalt be left few in numbers and plucked from the land whither thou goest, and scattered from one end of the earth, even unto the other, and among these nations thou shalt find no ease: and thy life shall hang in doubt before thee, and thou shalt fear day and night, and shall have none assurance of thy life" (Deut. 28:58, 62-66). This was spoken, not to the two tribes of Judah only, but to the whole house of Israel. And as all of Israel was to be scattered so when they repent they will all be gathered, not in Britain, but in their own land. Deuteronomy 30:4, 5, tells us that "If any of thine be driven out unto the utmost parts of heaven, from thence will the Lord thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee: and the Lord thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possesssed (Palestine, not Britain), and thou (all Israel) shall possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers."

Genesis 22:17 has been misquoted by our opponent. He makes it read thus: "Thy (Abraham's) seed shall possess the gate of their emenies." Seed is used here in singular, not plural, and refers to Christ, not Israel, and the verse reads correctly, "his" enemies, not "their" enemies. For the next verse says, "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed," which agrees with what Paul says in Gal. 3:16: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed which is Christ."

No mention is made in any Scripture of Great Britain in connection with Israel, but many tell us plainly where Israel is today and their condition; scattered among thee nations, dispersed among the heathen, scorned and persecuted. There is not a single Scripture that would remotely leads us to believe that Israel and Great Britain are one and the same. It is claimed by some authorities that the present royal house of Great Britain goes back in history through Scotland and Ireland to David king of Israel. If we trace from history the origin and ancestry of both Israel and the Anglo-Saxan race, we shall find that this claim is false. With this further evidence, we hope to remove from the unbiassed readers, any doubts as to the truth or falacy of Anglo-Israelism.

From Noah's three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japhet, descended the different nations of the earth. Japhet, the second son, had seven sons whose names were Gomer, Magog, Tubal, Meshek, Javan, Madai and Tiras. The oldest was Gomer and from his descended the Russians, Germans, Gauls, and Anglo-Saxons or Britons. Shem the eldest son of Noah, had five sons, namely, Elam, Asshur, Arphaxed, Lud, and Aram. History tells us it was Arphaxed who settled in the vicinity of the Euphrates River, and from him descended the Chaldeans. They were the ancestors of Abraham and of Israel. Scripture tells us that Abraham was a native of Ur of the Chaldees, (Gen. 15:7), and descended through Heber in the ninth generation from Shem, and was the progenitor of the Hebrews. So we find the Anglo-Saxons or British are descended from Gomer, the elder son of Japhet, who was the second son of Noah; and Israel is descended from Arphaxed the third son of Shem, who was the eldest son of Noah. This proves conclusively that they now are and always have been, two distinct and separate races, from the flood.

"To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20). In the study and discussion of such subjects as this we cannot spend more of our time and energies than is found necessary to refute these false doctrines. and show they have no foundation in the word of God. This we fully believe we have done, and is all we had hoped to do in this article. It is of much more importance that the people of God use their time and energy to reach the gospel (the "things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ") to a perishing world; "for it (the gospel) is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

The Greatest Thing

PAUL SAID that when miracles would cease three things would abide or remain. All three are greater than miracles, and the greatest of the three is love. It is the "more excellent" way than the chiefest miracle, "the best gifts" of the spirit, he says.

The casue of our love is God's previous love. "We love him because he first loved us." The woman who was forgiven much loved much, and Paul, the chief of sinners, wrote this epistle containing this gem on love. This woman was not forgiven because she previously loved and showed it in her attentions to the Master's needs. She did not purchase her pardon. He pointed to her love as the evidence, not the cause of forgiveness. Simon said, "She is a sinner": Jesus was proving to him she was a justified saint. He was not merely pronouncing pardon on her; he was arguing a fact to Simon. If we love properly our conduct will be perfect, since love works no ill to his neighbor.

How can I love my enemies? Must I feel toward them the same as I do toward my friends? No, Jesus loved John and one of the conditions David specifies for ascending into the hill of the Lord is that one must condemn a vile person. But we must love them. Love your enemies How? "Do good to them . . . bless them . . . pray for them." If they are hungry, feed them; if thirsty, give them drink, and visit them when in prison. God loves, so he "gave" (John 3:16).

Then if God would be love to his creatures they must be created needy, lower than he. They must be creatures. Can a God duplicate himself by creative act? So Adam is created naked. This leads to this difficulty: If love is to be expressed in service, how can a man love God, when he needs nothing (Acts 17:25)? John answers, he that loves God, let him love his neighbor. Hence by Jesus and Paul two great commands are often made just one, "Love your neighbor." If I minister to my enemy in his distress God knows by that I would do the same for him if he could have need, hence love to man is love to God and the two commands are one.

Love is the Christian's only law. "Is it right to dance, smoke, or go to the movies?" The only answer is love your neighbor. Whatever serves him is right; whatever deprives him, or neglects him, or injures him, is wrong. This is the only correct answer to all questions of right and wrong, and it will answer every such question clearly, because it is a thorough searcher, more so than the letter of any other law could be, or the spirit of it either, for love never says under all circumstances either, Thou shalt, or Thou shalt not. Her answer is Thou mayest, if it work no injury to anyone.

Whatever injures me, injures my neighbor, for it mars my service to him. "He that loveth not, knoweth not" that "God is love" (1 John 4:8). Hence if my love is imperfect it is because I do not fully know the Father. Then let me more appreciate what he does for me. If I am merciful to you let me think more of the threefold prayer in Gethsemane, the agony and the silence, and remember than when the Father gave me him he freely gave me all things. J. W. WILLIAMS.

"They Spake Often One to Another"

EDITOR RESTITUTION :

WILL YOU kindly allow me space for a few lines in the good "Restitution." I am glad to say I have learned the "truth," and have come out of darkness (the world) into the light (Christ) and liberty of the children of God. Brother and Sister Spindler and myself put on Christ, being baptized into Christ in his appointed way on August 11th by Brother Huggins, of Cleveland, Ohio.

I am so glad that God was so mindful of man that he made a way of escape from sin, that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life, if we continue faithful until death. I read so many good things in The Restitution. It gladdens my heart to think of the dear brothers and sisters that are interested in God's work and his kingdom, which is to be established on earth. May we enjoy his kingdom forever and ever. We read, Luke 13:28, 29, "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God and you yourselves thrust out. And they shall come from the east and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God." So many promises we have like this. David said on one occasion : "I (David) would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." I will now give space for more able writers than myself.

Your brother in Christ, awaiting the coming of Christ and his kingdom.

AMOS L. BECKHOLT.

The Starry Heavens

NOW I ENJOY going out of doors on a clear moonlight night and gazing up at the stars ;I never tire of them for my Father made and named them all and in some one of them is the place of his throne, to which every day of my life I look upward in pleading prayer. Often and often I wonder in which one of those resplendent constellations is his home, and the present home of our great High Priest and Savior Jesus, or whether the heaven of heavens is far beyond these.

The Pleiades is the axle and centre of our Sun and its planetary system, but it has still another and more stupendous journey to make in revolving around still another centre, with "innumerable hosts of such suns and systems," as I shall note a little later on.

It does us good to sometimes look into these things. It helps us to get acquainted with God and to understand how great and powerful and wise the being really is who gave us the Bible. If he made and upholds all these starry worlds, cannot he care for and fufill his promises to one little insignificant being such as I am ? What do you think of it Lawrence, Dorothy, Ethel ? I am sure he can ; that nothing is impossible with him except to tell something that is false, and so, I trust him expecting soon to get all that he has said shall be mine when Jesus comes.

You look at the sun. It does not seem very large, yet you know it mst be ; it is so millions of miles away. Astronomers tell us "it is more than a millions times larger than the earth," that it would take a railway train running thirty miles an hour, eleven years to go round it, and three hundred and sixty years to run the distance from the earth to the sun. They say the sun is six hundred times larger than the eight primary planets, the eighty-five asteroids the twenty-one moons, and the seven hundred comets would be, if they were all made into one great body.

And yet, large as the sun is, they assert that, it is only a mere speck in the magnificent starry empire of which it forms a part. Myriads of the stars being immeasurably greater than it. Sirius, alone (says Dr. Seis) gives out nearly 400 times as much light as our sun yet Siris is only a star of moderate size among the stars . . . We know he says, "that the sun turns on its axis as the earth turns, and that it is ever moving around some transcendently greater centre, just as the earth and other planets revolve around it as their centre. It takes the earth one year to complete its revolution around the sun, but it takes the sun eighteen millions of our years to make its revolution around the centre which it obeys."

I thought the Annus Magnus or Great Bear (28,827 years in duration) made by our systems of worlds moving around the Plieades was a long, long year in duration, but what finite mind can grasp one made up of millions of our little years ?

Truly God's universe is a wheel within a wheel and wheels within wheels, wheels within wheels of vaster and still vaster dimensions. "Who by searching can find out God ?" "What is man that thou art mindful of him, and the son of man that thou visitest him ?"

And yet though so far away, he is mindful of us ; he does visit us. He hears and answers the little child's petitions for a bit of colored wool, the widow's cry for protection, the minister's prayer for guidance, the publisher's call for means to carry on his work—though the sum needed be thousands of dollars— no upward look is unheeded. Millions of calls from the inhabitants of the earth to God, and millions multiplied by millions of calls from other worlds, constantly going up to him ; and not neglected or unheard ! It is marvellous. And yet, it can be easily explained, for the wireless telephones of heaven are well equipped by those who minister to the help of salvation, and who "do always behold the face of our Father."

It matters not if these tremendous systems, in which uncounted suns take the place of satellites of still immeasurably sublime orbs and thus on upward through system after system, to some supreme physical Omnipotent where the unsearchable Jehovah has his throne and from whence he gives forth his invincible laws to the immensity of his glorious realm (Seis). His eye is ever upon the righteous, and his ear open to their cry. Wherever may be their dwelling place.

A book that comes from such a being is worth having, worth reverencing, and worth obeying.

National Berean Society

Motto : Search the Scripture Daily Unity, Truth, and Righteousness

LEOTA B. HANSON .... EDITOR

106 South 2nd St., St Louis, Missouri

THE ANNUAL National Berean Conference was held at Oregon, Ill., August 12th, 1921. The Secretary's and Treasurer's reports were read and approved. The Senior Social Correspondence Department reported 1066 letters written during the year. They have 175 on their list. Answers received, 683. The Junior Department wrote 617 letters and received 515 answers. They have 187 on their list. The Literary Committee received 28 articles.

A total of 2612 tracts have been sent out by the Tract Committee for the year. There is a balance of $6.04 in the Treasury. The Corresponding Secretary has written 225 letters, received 150, and has a balance on hand of $4.17.

The Treasurer reports $295.68 received and $267.28 expended, leaving a balance of $28.42. The balance in the benefit fund is $25.10. The need for an organizer was very clearly brought out by Brother Siple. He demonstrated that an organizer could do more in one month than an organization committee could do in a year.

The three minute messages from the different parts of the country were very interesting.

Motions carried at the afternoon meetings were as follows :

1. That the National Bereans ratify the movement of the church of which it is an auxiliary for the forming of a National General Conference.
2. That the president be appointed a delegate to the General Assembly to be held at Waterloo, Iowa.
3. That the chair be empowered to appoint a committee to consider and decide upon the advisability and opportunity of employing a Berean Evangelist, and said committee be empowered to carry out this decision. Committee appointed Frank Siple, Lydia Railsback, and Clyde Randall.
4. Moved that a committee be appointed by the Executive Board to draft and publish outline lessons for children.

5. That the Relief Fund be transferred to a committee of one to be appointed by the Executive Board which should have charge of all funds for relief work.

The following officers were elected: President, Leila Whitehead; 1st Vice President, Frank E. Siple; 2nd Vice President, Clyde E. Randall; Corresponding Secretary, Evelyn K. Hausch; Recording Secretary, Nellie M. Blakely.

Orpha Sanford was elected Treasurer, but later resigned to take the chairmanship of the Relief Committee, because she is proficient and experienced in that line of work. J. E. Hammond, Omaha, Nebraska, was appointed Treasurer.

At the Executive Board Meeting the following standing committee chairmen were appointed: Literary, Leota B. Hanson; Tract, Lydia Railsback; Social Correspondence, Senior Department, Anna Perrine; Junior Department, Dorothy Lyons.

Organization, Fannie LeCrone, Chairman, Edna Anderson and Carl Broberg, Junior Lesson Books, Lulu Stillson, she to choose her own associates. It was moved that she be instructed to prepare from 50 to 75 lessons and 500 books be printed at the same price as the senior books, 25c. Clyde Randall and Lydia Raisback were empowered to appoint the program committee when place of meeting is decided upon. Printing of stationery authorized 2000 letter heads, 1000 blank same quality and size, 1500 society.

A Berean Message

Dear Bereans of the Church of God in Conference Assembled, Greetings:

AS IT is not permissible that I meet you personally, I feel I must send you a word of greeting for the good derived through our mutual fellowship and works.

The Bereans have accomplished a surprising amount of good in furthering the gospel cause through different channels; the bringing our scattered and isolated people together in love and unity in Christ and in touch with each other by recognizing each one as a necessary part of the great family of God. They have brought such into correspondence and searching of the Scriptures and into close communication with God through encouragement, prayer, exhortation, a cheering word, a kindly reproof, and earnest entreaties for a true loyal Christian every day life.

The Bereans have cheered the broken hearted and given the balm of love and sympathy to the bereaved. They have held open the door of hope to the sick and afflicted, of a future where pain, sickness and death is to be abolished, and remembered the aged, invalids, shut-ins, by a message of love and reading of religious literature. They have reached out to our young people and invited them to come in among us and study and learn of God through our Bible studies, thereby opening a way for them to learn the truths of God and escape the pollutions of the world.

They have welcomed into the household of faith, the newly baptized, urging them to be steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing they have accepted the highest call ever offered to mortal man, therefore the necessity of living to adorn that call.

Bereans, let us remember a kind word of encouragement given to our leading officers and committees is not in vain. It will show our appreciation of their untiring efforts in behalf of Berean management and progressive work, and will be to them an incentive to greater effort, therefore I will quote a few extracts from some of our correspondents.

"Your letter came duly to hand with leaflets enclosed. Thanks for your kindness. Praise and good wishes."

"Bless the Lord for the Berean Society which is love for humanity and walking in the footsteps of Jesus, going about doing good for the isolated brothers and sisters. I have received many kindnesses in reading matter and letters from them, and hope to meet them in Christ's kingdom."

"God bless the Bereans.I was glad to get your letter and tracts. I have read them and think they are good. How such little things do help one to live right and to love the brothers and sisters, and to think any one remembers me away up here in Canada where there is none of like precious faith. I wish I could make you see how much I appreciate these kindnesses and how I feel I have more brothers and sisters now in Christ than I ever had."

Again: "The Bereans found me isolated among strangers; they wrote me encouragement and love; admonished me to be faithful, for the same God is watching over me here as well as if I were among many. They instructed me in righteousness and found me work to do for Christ, and made me feel I was a part of the house hold, and the work I have to do in it makes me think of the words of Jesus: 'I was in prison, and ye visited me, was hungry and ye fed me, was sick and ye visited me.'"

I believe it is through these efforts that I am a live member of the church of God today, therefore Bereans, work on, pray on, write on, for the church and the world has never needed loyal soldiers of the cross to proclaim the necessity of living a pure Christ like life in spirituality, love, and expectancy of our Savior's appearing, and to herald the glad tidings of a better time coming, than now.

There's only one method of meetin' life's test;
Jes' keep on a striving and hope for the best
Don't give up the game and retire in dismay
'Cause hammers are thrown when you'd like a bouquet.
This world would be tiresome, we'd all get the blues,
If all the folks in it held just the same views,
So finish your work; show the best of your skill,
Some folks they won't like it, but other folks will.
If you're leading a Bible school, building a fence,
Do the most that you can with your own common sense,
One small word of praise in this journey of tears,
Outweighs in the balance 'gainst cartloads of sneers.
The plants that we're passing as common-place weeds,
Oft proves to be jes' what some sufferer needs,
So keep on a-goin'; don't stay standin' still,
Some folks they won't like it, but other folks will.

Ishmael and Esau Covenants

Number Two

WE SHALL now consider more definitely the covenant made with Esau and his seed. When Esau became conscious that he had lost Isaac's blessing, he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father: "Bless me, even me also, O my father" (Gen. 27:34). Isaac his father answered, "Behold, thy dwelling place shall be the fatness of the earth and of the dew of heaven from above. And by thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother; and it shall come to pass when thou shalt have the dominion that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck" (Gen. 27:39, 40). This covenant embraces a temporal rule and can continue until the Isaac seed shall prevail. We must remember that this is a national and not an individual one. There is wut one way to we accounted an Abrahamic seed, and that is, be obedient to the covenant conditions (Gal. 3:26-29).

In the covenant with the woman (Gen. 3:15) God began the election of individuals from the nations to become rulers in the kingdom that he purposed to establish over the entire earth. When this is accomplished thorns and thistles will have been burned up A righteous and immortalized race will fill the earth. To prove to the readers of this article the fitness of the Isaac seed we wish to allude to an allegory given by Paul and recorded in Gal. 4:22-31. In this allegory the apostle contrasts the two covenants. He writes: "It is written that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a free woman. But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the freewoman was by promise, which things are an allegory: for these are the two covenants, the one from the Mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar (Hagar). For this Agar is Mount Sinai in Arabia and answereth (is in the same rank, margin) to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children. But Jerusalem which is above (exalted) is free, which is the mother of us all."

The two sons of Abraham and Hagar and Sarah represent the two covenants. The Hagar, Sinai covenant, was "after the flesh." The Ishmael covenant embraced only the things of the flesh. He was exalted as a temporal ruler for the time of fleshly things.

When Paul wrote this the Sinai covenant had waxed old and "had vanished away." As Hagar and her son had been cast out so the Sinai covenant. This covenant was never intended to give men eternal life; it only covered their individual sins until the Messiah would be manifested The national sins were typically borne away in the service of the scape goat. This goat typified the Son or Lamb of God who literally bore away the sin of the world. All who died previous to this, died in bondage and require that one whose blood was more efficacious than that of bulls and goats should come and manifest the power of the only true God. The Agar covenant fully represents the force and extent of Ishmael covenant. The Sarah covenant is Jerusalem exalted, that is, beautified as the city of the living God. It will come through the freewoman who was never in bondage, but was the lawful wife of our father Abraham. Paul writes: "Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." We are Abraham's seed through the freewoman and were never in bondage. If faithful we will have our reward under the influence of the exalted Jerusalem.

Again the apostle writes: "He that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the spirit; even so it is now."

In conclusion, I wish to say that the covenant made with Abraham regarding Isaac superceeds all other covenants. This covenant was made after the power of an endles life; all other covenants after the law of carnal commandments. The promise of an endless life is to those who overcome The period of this life is our trial period for which we will receive commendation or condemnation. The next age will be an age of judgmnet for the left of the inhabitants, and not for the judgment of resurrected thorns and thistles who are nigh unto cursing; whose end is to be burned.

The One God

THAT THERE is great diversity of belief on this subject between theologians and students of the Bible, is a self-evident fact. The greater number of the former class holding the belief that the great God is three persons in one, and yet one personal being. The three they name as God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost. These three they claim to be equal in power, each equally existing eternally, having neither beginning nor ending, being uncreate. A class of "Bible students" most emphatically deny this proposition, claiming the Scriptures teach there is one personal ever-existing God, who only has life in himself, and out of whom are all things. It is to determine the truth from the word of God on this question that these pages are written.

Some may ask what difference does it make if one only acknowledges there is a great Creator, and reverence him as such. To this we reply: Without a true knowledge of God we cannot become his children, nor attain unto eternal life (John 17:3). "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." Again, we are told, those who know not God are cut off from life everlasting (2 Thess. 1:8; Psa. 79:6). Thus we see (to speak the words of another), "Knowledge of God is the basis of sonship to God." How necessary that we have a true knowledge of God! That theologians are in error in their teaching concerning God, we will show from God's word. With all their great educational insttiutions, they are ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.

Now we come to the word of God; and oh! let us come in the spirit of meekness, desiring only to know the 'truth, that it made us free (from error)—John 8:31, 32. If we do receive and continue in the truth, it will be unto us a shield and buckler (from error)—Psa. 91:4. Nature reveals to us that there is an intelligent Creator who works by law, but this is all. It tells us nothing of his being or his purpose in creation. To know God, we must come to the source of that knowledge—the Holy Scriptures. The first thing revealed therein is the absolute unity of God: "Hear O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord" (Deut. 6:4). Christ said in Mark 12:29, "The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord." To us there is but one God. Who is this one God? Paul answers: "The Father of whom are all things" (1 Cor. 8:6; Mal. 2:10; Eph. 4:6). Why does not Paul say, To us there is one God—God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit; these three are one? This is what the greater number of preachers teach. Paul knew no such "Triune Being." He plainly tells us that God is one, and that one God is the Father. Why Father? Because all things are of him (or out of him). "There is one God and Father of all, who is above all' (Eph. 4:6). If these are not sufficient then listen to God himself (Isa. 46:9) "I am God and there is none else; I am God and there is none like me."

Here are the words of an able writer, and deep student of Holy Writ: "The revelation of the Deity's unity, set forth in the Scriptures quoted, agree with the one great induction of modern science. Nature is seen to be under one law and one control throughout its immeasurable fields. There is no jar or conflict. The power that constitutes, sustains and regulates all is seen to be ONE. Cold freezes and heat dissolves in all countries alike. The power that draws the moon in circular journey around the earth; impels the earth around the sun, and drags even that stupendous and glorious body with all its attendant planets in a vast cycle with the rest of starry creation around the unknown centre.'"

One other thought in regard to the "one God." To quote from same author: "It is the popular habit when serious views of God are entertained at all, to concieve of him as a principle or energy in universal diffusion without corporeal nucleus, without local habitation, without body or parts." The Scriptures expressly teach the located existnce of God. "God dwells in light which no man can approach unto" (1 Tim. 6:16). Here is a localization of the person of the Creator. If God dwells in unapproachable light, he must have an existence there, which is not manifested in this "mundane sphere." Listen to Solomon's words: "God is in heaven, thou upon the earth" (Eccl. 5:2). "The heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's" (Psa. 115:16). "God hath looked down from the height of his sanctuary, from heaven did the Lord behold the earth" (Psa. 102:19, 20). Solomon, in his dedication of the temple frequently uses these words, "Hear thou in heaven, thy dwelling place." These Scriptures teach that God is a personal being, located in a place called heaven. As God is the source of all things, and this source must be a centre, as all power is manifested at its centre. The earth draws every object on it to its centre, and pulls the moon around it as well. The earth in its turn is attracted towards the sun and is drawn around it. And the sun itself, with the whole framework of creation, is drawn around a centre.

Hope

IN THE Hebrew epistle hope is called an anchor. The figure is expressive, for the anchor keeps the lives and cargo of all on board safe from destruction. What if the anchor should drift when the ship is near the rocks? Or what if the cable should part? The cable may be said to represent faith, because the promises of God are the basis of Christian hope, as we shall see.

Solomon shows that hope is made up of desire and expectation. There is desire in hope, as is evident from Proverbs 12:12. "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick, but when the desire cometh it is a tree of life." Here "desire" is a synonym for hope. And in Proverbs 10:28, "The hope of the righteous shall be gladness, but the expectation of the wicked shall perish." "Expectation" is a synonym for hope, thus showing in the two Scriptures that hope is compounded of desire and expectation.

The desire side of hope arises from our needs: we desire at least what we need. And the expectation side of hope arises from what God has promised. We may expect whatever he has promised, as is evident from such texts as the following: "In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie, promised before the world began." "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers." And in Hebrews it says that God, willing to show the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, and give them strong consolation of hope, confirmed the promise by an oath, that in these two certain expressions of his word, the heirs of promise might have strong assurance, so that here again, as in the other places, hope is made dependent on God's promises.

This shows the place of faith in hope, that when we grasp the promises in belief it supplies the expectation side of hope. But if either desire or expectation is absent there can be no hope. If there is desire without expectation, it is merely a wish; as for instance, if I lose a hand I cannot say I hope it will grow again this side of glory. I may wish it, but that is all. And if there be expectation without desire it is only fear: as for instance, if I see a storm coming my way, I do not say I hope it will come if I do not desire it. I expect it, but because I do not desire it, fear is the condition of mind. So I may not hope for what God has not pomised, for I have no reasonable expectation of it. And it is very doubtful if such a thing is even desirable since, "No good thing will he withhold." For instance, a certain hymn speaks of "a hope in heaven." Heaven has not been promised us, hence we have no reasonable expectation of it, and it is not desirable to go to a place so different from our former experiences, and where we and all others would be so different from our present selves as we are told people would be in heaven.

But "The hope of the gospel" is different. Eternal life, as quoted above as hoped for, is both very desirable and also strongly to be expected, since he has promised it and cannot lie.

Take "the hope of Israel." They have wandered homeless and persecuted for centuries. Is it not natural they desire Palestine for a homeland? And is it not to be expected since promised so fully and emphatically?

What a cheering thing is hope! How dreary the way and how dark the outlook without it! When you get the "blues," what you need is hope. Go to the promises of God. Trust in him, say with David, "Why art thou restless, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise him who is the health of my countenance and my God." Though the way is gloomy, it will brighten and I shall again see peace and prosperity

Shorten Your Line!

When I used to fish in mountain streams, if I had a short line and rod, I could direct it easily, and throw it into this or that pool as I pleased; but if I let out my line till it was twenty or thirty feet long, I could not direct it, but I was the victim of every floating stick, and jutting rock, and overhanging bough. So I have seen men wading down the stream of life, jumping from stone to stone, slipping on this rock, and falling into that pool, because their line was so long they could do nothing with it—a line that reached down forty years sometimes. Now, if you would avoid these difficulties, shorten your line! Let it reach over one day only; for "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." To the man who is living weeks or years in advance of the present, God says, "Go back, go back to your duties. Work while the day lasts, and take no thought for the morrow. I am master down here."

A Paper Representing The Church of God

The Dawning

Hark the grand celestial story,
List the anthems from afar;
See the light that now is breaking,
'Tis the rising morning star.

Just beyond the gloom o'er yonder,
There is a home that is secure;
The hope revealed in God's own promise,
Is forever lasting sure.

Soon our Lord in glorious splendour,
Will descend to earth once more;
Then his chosen will be gathered,
To that peaceful, happy shore.

There no sorrow ere will find us,
There no death can ever come;
All that reach that peaceful haven,
Shall forever be at home.

Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly,
Thou our all in all shall be;
Thy ever longed for coming,
We are waiting Lord, to see.

"My Father's House"

SERMON NOTES BY BROTHER J. H. THOMAS

1st. Give the popular view.

2nd. The popular view is based on the dogma that man has an immortal soul. Show why.

3rd. Show briefly but clearly that it is not a Scripture doctrine. The view grounded on that belief must be false.

4th. What does the passage teach? We answer it teaches that which the real intent and obvious meaning of the words convey, according not only to scriptural but modern use of language.

THE FATHER'S HOUSE

Show that "my Father's house" means my Father's family, or household, which is both the scriptural and modern use of the word "house."

Proofs: in Scripture David's house is David's family; the house of Jacob, the family of Jacob, hence we have expressions as "The whole house of Ahab shall perish" (2 Kings 9:8). Again, there was long war between the house of Saul and the house of David (2 Sam. 3:1), and the nation of Israel is called "the rebellious house of Israel" because the family of Israel. So my Father's house or house of God is the family of God.

Then we have "Thee and all thy father's house shall die" 1 Sam. 22:16); "I and my father's house have sinned." This is sufficient to show beyond a question what the Savior meant by the words "My Father's house."

The modern or present use of the language is the same; we speak of the house of Rothschild, the house of Tudor, etc. How strange that the language of Jesus should be wrested from its simple obvious meaning, "In my Father's family or household there are many mansions."

THE MANSIONS

Doubtless a difficulty in understanding the word "house" has grown out of its connection with the word mansions.

From our common use of the word Mansion there arises a difficulty to understand how there could be mansions in a family or house, but understanding "house' to mean heaven there was less difficulty. The popular view could see room enough in heaven for "many mansions," but it never ventured to say of what material they were built. Literal mansions in heaven was too material, and so the popular view has left it unexplained; hence it is like most of the popular views, vague and unsatisfactory.

What, then, are we to understand by this word "mansions"? There would have been less difficulty had the word been better translated.

The new Revision has made the correction, "abiding places.' The Emphatic Diaglott made the correction in 1865, "dwellings." "an abode."

The Greek word is "mone" and means " a place where one remains," a mansion, from the Greek "meno," to remain. The correct idea is a dwelling place, or an abiding place, as rendered in the New Version and Emphatic Diaglott.

Even mansion is simply a dwelling or abiding place, but it also has a sense of structure which is not needed in this case; hence a dwelling place is a better word.

Show why the translators chose the word mansion, instead of abiding, or dwelling place. Because they had heaven in their minds as the meaning of the word house instead of family.

We find, then, that the word mansion simply means abiding places. The passage would then read, "In my Father's family, etc., many abodes."

This too is the scriptural use of the language. Hence we have in Matt. 10:11 these words: "Into whatsoever city or town ye enter,. enquire who in it is worthy, and there abide till ye go hence." Again, Luke 9:4, "Whatsoever house (or family) ye enter. there abide." A worthy house or family becomes the abiding place of the disciples, so Jesus said to his disciples, "In my Father's house or family there are many abiding places, if it were not so I would have told you."

The modern use of language is the same. In the benevolence of our hearts we say to a homeless one "There is room in my family, come and abide with us."

The disciples had left all and followed Jesus, accepting him as the Messiah, the Son of God and King of Israel with no certain abiding place; for their Lord and Master, we are told, had not where to lay his head. Therefore he tells them that in his Father's house or family there are many abiding places; if it were not so I would have told you.

This was cheering news. He then adds, "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also.'"

"I go to prepare a place." I understand the true sense of this to be, I go to make the necessary arrangements for your entering into my Father's family, or to prepare a place for you in the family. It is not in the sense of constructing a building. Until Christ had perfected the work of redemption, in so far as offering himself as a sacrifice and entering into the holy of holies, no one could enter the family of God. It was the work of Jesus to open up a new and living way. This is clear from Paul to the Hebrews 9:23. Speaking of the tabernacle under Moses being purged with blood, he says: "It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens (Mosaic), should be purified with these (blood of animals). but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these: for Christ is not entered into the holy place made with hands, which are the figures of the true, but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us."

Now says Paul: Heb. 9:8, "The way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest while as the first tabernacle was yet standing, which was a figure for the time then present; but Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered once into the holy place having obtained eternal redemption for us." In other words, prepared a place for us in the family of God, or tabernacle not made with hands.

Again Paul says, referring to the sacrifices under the law in which God had no pleasure (Heb. 10:8, 9). "Then said he, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first,. that he may establish the second, by the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Christ once for all." So by the sacrifice of Christ the disciples of Christ, as are all believers sanctified or set apart, for the house or family of God. For, continues Paul, "By one offering he hath perfected forever them that are santified. Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated (new made, margin) for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh: and having an high priest over the house of God."

So we see the work of Jesus in going away to prepare a place. The way into the holy place or family, or house of God was not made manifest until Jesus offered himself and so prepared a place or way into the family, himself being a great high priest over the house of God; that is, high priest over the household of God. He is not high priest over a structure, but over the household of faith, which is the house or family of God. Hence, says Paul, "Moses was faithful in all his house as a servant . . . but Christ as a Son over his own house, whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence firm unto the end."

Again Paul in speaking to the Eph. 2:19 says: "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God, and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief cornerstone, in whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord, in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the spirit."

We see then that the building, habitation or house of God was a community of believers built upon the foundation named here. Not then, nor even now perfect, but as Paul said, "growing unto an holy temple in the Lord."

Jesus, as he said, went away, and the way to the holy of holies led through the valley and shadow of death the way to incorruptibility and life the high and heavenly estate led through the portals of the grave; but Jesus rent the veil, passed through the dark valley, burst the bands of death, and opened up a new and living way into the abiding place in the house or family of God.

But Jesus says, "If I go and prepare a place, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Here the question arises, if Christ has opened up a way into the family of God, does not that family dwell in heaven, and did not Christ come for his disciples at death ?

We answer: nothing is more unscriptural. First, the work of preparing a place is not completed. No individual has entered into the heavenly estate save Jesus. Second, the way into the holy of holies is by the new and living way the way that Jesus trod death and resurrection, or change from mortality to immortality. Hence says Paul, "If there be no resurrection of the dead, than those who have fallen asleep in Jesus have perished." Who will say the disciples have been resurrected ? If not, they have not passed into the heavenly estate are yet in the valley of death.

The apostle tells us that "David is both dead and buried." "Our life is hid with Christ in God." Moreover Paul did not himself enter into the heaven-born family at death for he says, "I have fought the good fight, I have kept the faith." But, says one "did you not show that the apostle and brethren were "the building or habitation or family of God"; and does not Paul say, "We have boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way" ? Yes, but we are "the household of faith." "We walk by faith and not by sight." "We enter in through faith in the blood." We are the family of God still in the earth state. Hence says Paul, "whose house are we, if we hold fast." The building yet to be tried by fire. Christ still our high priest, and does not come again till he comes to take the family to himself.

But will not that be to heaven ? I answer, no; for Micah says: "In the last days it shall come to pass that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills: and people shall flow into it; and many nations shall come and say, come let us go up to the mountain of the Lord to the house of the God of Jacob, and he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Hence the house or family of God is to be established in Jerusalem. "That where I am, there may ye be also." Explain where he will be.

The Restoration of Israel

Zionism a Fulfilment of Prophecy

ARE JEWS of use in the scientific world? Felician David, a Jewish musician planted in the brain of De Lesseps and Muhammed Ali the idea of the Suez Canal. A Jewish musician started th idea. a Jewish statesman, Disraeli, who never took the trouble to make any money for himself, had intelligence enough to buy the stock of the canal for England, thus earning great power and millions for his country. He also made his queen, Empress of India. Great statesmen are among Jews. Germany now recognizes as a mistake, her keeping Jews out of diplomacy. We have seen a Jewish scientist of highest class go to the great University of Chicago. Professor Michelson may be too busy to see you, but any book on astronomy will tell you that he is the man that taught the world how to measure the speed of light. All astronomers work in infinite space, using the 'foot rule' that he gave them. Dr. Isadore Dyer, dean of the medical school of Tulane University, is another noted Jewish scientist. He is credited with important discoveries in the treatment of leprosy and malignant skin diseases, and other discoveries of much value to the medical world.

"Is it true that Jews borrow ideas from others and are never intellectual pioneers ? Of all philosophers, the greatest is the Jew. Spinoza; certainly none stand above him. He has taught many of the world's ablest minds. What sort was he ? Read Sir Frederick Pollack's "Life of Spinoza." He said he had no time to make money. Spinoza had no time even to accept money. While writing books that are immortal he worked at his trade grinding lenses. He was not worth $50 when he died, yet he refused the fortune that an English disciple would have given to him, saying, 'Give it to your brother; he needs money.'

"Karl Marx, who disturbs the dreams of many prosperous gentlemen. was a Jew. That may not be in the lancuage of our day 'a boost' for his race, but it shows that they do their own thinking. Trotzky, who could walk from a sewing machine on the east side of New York to a 50 per cent interest in the dictatorship of Russia, is another Jew who shows power of 'adaptation to environment.'

"Have Jews physical courage? Ask the prize fighters, any of the gentlemen whom Mr. Benjamin Leonard has stretched in the course of his career. Better still ask the pages of history. Read of 600 Jews burned alive at one time in Strasburg, any one of whom could have saved his life by denying his religion. Not one would deny it. Does that show courage? As those 600 died, so tens of thousands and hundreds of thousands have died in the horrors that have perpetrated for centuries in the name of Christ, the son of a Jewess.

"In ancient laws you may read that the Jews were 'the property' of the king. Sometimes he protected them. They could make money; he needed it, and knew how to get it from them, Nearly always he had a Jew for his physician, and great heads of the church also had Jewish physicians, although ordinary Christians were not allowed to employ them. Widows, orphans, aliens, Jews, lunatics and later the printing press were under the control of the monarch. Jews and the printing press combined have done a great deal to put the monarch out of date. Jews have been leaders always in courageous, radical thought. That is why the czars butchered them. They outlive the czars.

"Are Jews then so perfect, better than others? By no means. Their ancient superstitions and laws are in some instances worse than our own, in some instances better. They probably have as many defects as any other race, perhaps more, because they are more highly complicated. More things go wrong in a twelve cylinder engine than in a one cylinder machine. Intelligent men, studying a block of ore in a mountain, or a block of human being in history, ask not how much gold is in that block. The Jewish mental block assays very highly, and history proves it. Hatred of Jews and ignorance concerning them that marked the Middle Ages disgrace any man in this age, and are especially unworthy of such a man as Henry Ford."

Noah by his preaching of righteousness and his obedience to God, condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith" (Heb. 11:7). In Peter's day there was a world that needed a stronger condemnation and a greater punishment. It was a world filled with wickedness, that had forsaken God, and rejected the last and greatest of all his prophets. So great was its wickedness that the Lord said: "Fill ye up the measure of your fathers. Upon you shall come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel" (Matt. 23:31-39). The catastrophe came. Their "sun is gone down while it was yet day." Their house was left desolate. Darkness covers the land. The people are wanderers among the nations. But not forever. "Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself, for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended" (Isa. 60:1-3, 20). The whole chapter is well worth a careful study, depicting as it does in beautiful figurative language the future glory of the nation ofIsrael. Well therefore might the apostle Peter, in looking beyond the darkness of Israel's light to the day when "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover th sea" (Isa. 11:9), exclaim: "Nevertheless, we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." The promise of the God of Israel is: "For behold, I create new heavens and a new earth, for behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy" (Isa. 65:17, 18).

It is surely difficult to believe, to some of us the thought is inconceivable, that after the nation of Israel is restored to its land, and reconciled to its God, that after the nations are blessed and walking in the ways of God, that after God's kingdom is come and his name hallowed, that after sin and suffering and death are swept away, that after the earth is restored to more than its pristine beauty and glory, the command is to go forth that all is to be destroyed. Yet this is what our Adventist friends would have us believe and teach. Nay, rather let us believe that God has not created the earth in vain, but to be the habitation of man in his redeemed and glorified state, and that in the culmination of his purpose "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the glory of the Lord" throughout the unending ages to come.

The time will come when the appeal of Isaiah will be heeded: "O house of Jacob, come ye and let us walk in the light of Jehovah." Then it will be Jacob's God whom the nations are increasingly desirous of knowing; and it is through Israel's history that Jacob's God is revealed. It is the God of Jacob whom they will seek. He will then teach them his ways; for out of Zion shall go forth instruction. They will walk in his paths; for they will put his teachings into life, even to the abolishing of war. The mountain of Jehovah's house will be exalted above the tops of the mountains. Then will be seen the fulfilment of the vision of Isaiah, in which he beheld all the nations streaming up to the mountain of God, even to the house of the God of Jacob, saying to each other as they go: "Let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths." Then will that future era which the prophet foresaw, of universal peace and prosperity, so longed for by all, be realized. This appears to some as nothing more than a beautiful dream, incapable of realization; but instead it is a practical, hardheaded plan conceived by the Almighty God. The time will come when all will see how great was his foresight, how unerring his judgment.

We do indeed believe that Israel has still a mission in the world; but its great end is not a selfish one, not its own glorification but that of the Eternal One, who has commissioned him to bring good tidings to the peoples of the earth. Such a mission, even were it no more than a self-created aspiration, would almost suffice for a reson why a Jew should be proud to be, and remain—a Jew.

Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning!
Joy to the lands that in darkness have lain!
Hushed be the accents of sorrow and mourning;
Zion in triumph begins her mild reign.

Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning,
Long by the prophets of Israel foretold,
Hail to the millions from bondage returning;
Gentiles and Jews the blest vision behold.

Lo, in the desert rich flowers are springing,
Streams ever copious are gliding along,
Loud from the mountain tops echoes are ringing;
Wastes rise in verdure and mingle in song.

See from all lands, from the isles of the ocean,
Praise to Jehovah ascending on high,
Fallen are the engines of war and commotion;
Shouts of salvation are rending the sky.

Swell the glad anthem, our Savior is reigning,
Rejoice, risen saints, and praise with glad tongue,
Carry the tidings to nations repining;
All join the chorus with love's noblest song.

STERLING P. GROVES.

Does It Matter?

DOES IT matter what we believe so long as we are sincere and upright in our dealings with our fellow men, and heed the dictates of an educated conscience? Will not God accept such as being the best they know, and overlook any errors of the head, if the heart and conscience approve? the same being what our venerated religious instructors instilled in our hearts and minds? How reads the inspired word in reference to these questions?

Jesus' admonition is, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me" (John 5:39). "Holy Scriptures are able to make wise unto salvation through faith" (2 Tim. 3:15). "Without faith (Greek, the faith) it is impossible to please God" (Heb. 11:6). "Thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name" (Psa. 138:2). "He that believeth not (the word of) God, hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son" (1 John 5:10). "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law (which is the word of God), even his prayer (praise) is abomination" (Prov. 28:9). "The true worshiper shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship him" (John 4:23). "Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me; and to him that ordereth his conversation (deportment) aright will I show the salvation of God" (Psa. 50:23).

Man-made creeds compiled from traditions which falsify the true gospel hope set forth in God's word caused vain worship. "Though we or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed' (Gal. 1:8) "Howebit in vain do they worship me teaching for doctrine the commandments of men" (Matt. 15:9; Mark 7:7). "For the leaders of this people cause them to err; and they that are led of them are destroyed" (Isa. 9:16).

Though we have the zeal of a Saul and the eloquence of an Apollos, if we are not taught in the perfect way, our hope and expectations are delusive and will not be realized. Since there is but one gospel of salvation, one Lord, one faith, one hope (Eph. 1:13; 4:3, 4), let us adopt as our motto: Prove all teaching by the Scripture, and hold fast only to that which stands the test.

If God regards the praise of good and honest, but incorrectly taught people, as an abomination, how diligently careful we should be to examine, compare, and prove all teaching, no matter how well we may esteem and confide in the teacher, and hold fast only to that which is proved to be scriptural.

Change in Publication

THE BOARD of Directors, after mature consideration have decided to publish The Restitution as a monthly magazine in future, instead of the present form. Many reasons could be given for the change, but the ones pertaining to its literary nature are the most important. A weekly issue is too often for a religious paper, for the frequency of publication tends to degenerate its subject matter. The shortness of time between issues often forces the Editor to use any copy at hand, whether it be good or bad. After careful observation of other weekly religious publications, together with our experience with The Restitution, we are convinced that they soon deteriorate into light, insipid literature after the manner of a newspaper; obituaries, reports, news items, personal mention, and other indifferent things finally monopolizing valuable space that should be used in helpful exhortation to godliness and thoughtful exposition of God's word. In a monthly magazine all such indifferent things are easily reduced to simple announcements, and God's word is honored and glorified rather than the trifles and "news" that are of only local interest.

To serve these high ends—to make The Restitution of more literary worth, its subject matter more scriptural, its standard of excellence higher—our next issue will appear as a forty page magazine. Upon receipt of its first monthly edition we request every reader to write us his estimate of it, with any helpful suggestions or constructive criticisms that may occur to him.

Thanking every reader for his co-operation in the past in sustaining The Restitution, and asking his continued support in the future,

Your servants for Christ's sake,

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Managerial Notice

The Board of Directors met on Thursday, Oct. 6th, to consider the best means of carrying on the work of preaching the truth through The Restitution; and after carefully weighing the pros and cons of the case it was unanimously decided to change the paper from a weekly to a monthly magazine. This will reduce the cost of publication and at the same time provide as much reading matter as four of our present size papers.

We propose to make it more interesting to our readers by publishing articles appertaining to the simple gospel truth and exhortations; also we wish to dilate more on unfulfilled prophecy, by which we shall endeavor to hold the attention of our readers to the soon coming of our Lord. We believe the change of policy will enhance the value of our paper both spiritually and financially, and we invite our readers to co-operate by sending either original or selected articles that will tend to the upbuilding of the household of faith, and keep us in close touch with the things concerning the kingdom of God, and its fulfilment.

The paper will be in the ordinary magazine form, and a year's numbers can be bound up into a convenient size and be a valuable asset to our bookcase.

We realize how valuable The Restitution is to our isolated members, and we believe that a monthly edition will be of greater service to them, inasmuch as we can provide longer and more complete articles for their perusal and study. We shall still continue a communication column, but we propose to eliminate personal notices, as we do not deem them of sufficient interest to the majority of our readers to warrant their insertion. We also propose to allot a limited space to be used as a "Young People's Page," which we feel the younger generation is entitled to, and thus help to qualify them for the more arduous duties of a mature Christian life.

We have been commanded to "occupy till I come," and we feel that this change of policy will better enable us to obey the Master's mandate.

We now commend ourselves and our efforts to God, and pray that his blessing may rest upon us, and give the increase to our labors in his vineyard.

A. E. GRIFFITHS, Mgr.

Communication

"They Spake Often One to Another"

IN THE Restitution of August 16th, Brother Groves writes on the efforts being put forth by the brethren of Oregon, Ill., and elsewhere. He says, "Its defects are very noticeable, and its ommissions still more noticeable:" yet he commends the effort being made and admits we stand in need of such an effort. Then if we do why not all join hands and put forth a united effort standing on the best creed ever given to man, the Bible; set aside all desire for vainglory and do all to the glory of God. The brother says if there are any who do not know the principles which separate us it is their duty to find out. But still he did not tell us what they are. It all seems to be a creed, and I believe we will all accept the creed given by inspiration of God. It seems to me the call went out to all to come to the General Conference or send someone or write your views; it seems that there was the place to settle differences and if we did not heed that call perhaps we should have done so. But dear brethren if there is false doctrine being taught condemn it; if not let us not be a stumbling block in the way of any worthy cause, but pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into the field, for the field is white to harvest, but the laborers are few, and it is only a little while until he that shall come will come and will not tarry. Let us be children in malice, let all malice and evil speaking be put away from us, and be kind, tenderhearted, forgiving one another even as God for Christ's sake forgives us.

Will someone give us an explanation of Heb. 12:5-8: How are we chastened of the Lord? It is important that we should understand when we are chastened of him

Your brother in hope of the soon coming kingdom,

W. L. ROBBINS

Prayer and Praise

MY DEAR SISTERS:

My thoughts for tonight on Bible Lesson number one is: "How God communicates wisdom and knowledge to man." The only way an understanding of the Bible can come to us is to search the Scriptures daily and ponder over it diligently and prayerfully. Now to my thought: the greatest enlightnment in the Scriptures is by prayer. Christ tells us to ask and it shall be given unto us. Knock and it shall be opened unto you; seek and ye shall find. "Continue steadfastly in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving, withal praying for us that God would open unto us a door of utterance to speak the mystery of Christ. for which I am also in bonds, that I may make it manifest as I ought to speak." "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering, for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed.' "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain, and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. And he prayed again, and the heavens gave rain and the earth brought forth her fruit." "Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say rejoice. Let your moderation be known unto all men; the Lord is at hand. Be careful for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God, and the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ."

We can truly sing with praise, "What a friend we have in Jesus, oh what peace we often forfeit, all because we do not carry everything to God in prayer." Let us be truly thankful for the great privilege to carry everything to God in prayer. With hearts full of faith let us each study our Bible diligently and prayerfully, and the Lord will give us understanding in all things.

Be not Weary in Well Doing

"AND LET us not be weary in well doing for in due season we shall reap if we faint not" (Gal. 6:9). The Greek word for "weary" here is "ekkakio," meaning "to faint, despond, be greatly harrassed," as if the well doing were becoming a hard thing; something almost impossible to keep.

"Faint" is a still stronger word than weary: it means to have all our powers relaxed, like one who drops to the ground in the harvest-field. We are to do neither of these things, nor are we to deceive ourselves into thinking that we shall reap aught but what we sow. If we plant seeds that will blossom into the fruits of selfish desire, we cannot hope to have the enduring fruits of well doing, but corruption or destruction instead.

And the word "sowing" implies giving of our means, see 2 Cor.9:6: "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." Excuses for not giving that may seem valid to the eyes of our friends will not pass with God. He sees everything, knows everything. He can count. There is no use of our trying to hide the amount of our resources from him; it will not work, as Ananias and Sapphira found to their sorrow. Not one of us would want to incur their guilt.

There is joy in faithful stewardship, joy in doing good as we have opportunity to all men. One man in a church who deals on the square with God can soon change the whole atmosphere from cold indifference to fervent heat because joy is catching. Well doing more full of warmth than a well fed furnace in winter time. And if one man in a church can set the whole membership aflame, how much more can many men and many women do by uniting their efforts? When one gives it stirs the heart of another to give, and his giving the heart of still another, until the whole machinery is set to moving in marvelous harmony.

And that is God's order. He has made the financial question a very important matter. The individual, the church that is not honest with God in money matters is a dead factor. We must give and keep on giving. The stream of money must flow continuously. Let it stop and the same thing will happen that happens to the river whose waters cease to move: the money will become corrupt and life-destroying, just like the waters of a dammed up stream.

For giving is an imperative part of our worship. In giving we acknowledge our obligation to him and to our fellow men. In giving we praise God for his mercy and love to usward. In giving we thank him for all that he has given us in the present life and for the far more precious things that he has promised to give us in the future. Let us get it into our heads that we cannot worship God acceptably if we leave this part of the worship out. The church is the pillar and ground of the truth. She upholds the truth and keeps it moving by giving as much as by her teaching and manner of living.

Let us not "despond," let us not be "greatly harrassed" in well-doing, but keep on sowing for in due season we shall reap not only the golden sheaves of saved men and women, but the promised everlasting life.

O how I thank God for the cheerful givers! Through them we shall soon reach the goal.

The One God

Concluded

THE writer from whom we quote says: "The suggestion that this unknown Centre is the source of all power is in significant harmony with what the Scriptures reveal concerning God. Just here someone asks the question 'If God is located at the centre of the universe, how is he every where present, as many Scriptures affirm?" This will be scripturally answered later."

We will now consider Jesus, the Son of God not as many teach, "God the Son." We will esteem it a favor if any one will tell in what book, chapter or verse of the Bible are found the words, "God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost." If Jesus was really God he was equal in power and life with the Father. But listen. "My Father is greater than I" (John 14:28). This one positive statement is enough for one who believes God's word. This is only one out of many words of our Lord that so far as being equal with the Father, he is dependent on the Father for life and power. "As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself" (John 5:26). "The Father which dwelleth in me he doeth the works" (John 14:10). "I cast out devils by the spirit of God" (Matt. 12:28). "I can of mine own self do nothing" (John 5:30). "The Son can do nothing of himself (John 5:19). These testimonies are sufficient to show that God only hath power and life in himself. He can give this power and life to whom he will. As Jesus is the Son of God by begettal, he inherits this power through God his Father (Matt. 1:18; 3:17; Luke 1:35).

Now we will proceed to prove from God's word that the Holy Ghost is not God, but the spirit of God. "My spirit shall not always strive with man (Gen. 6:3; Neh. 9:30). God in his personal substance is spirit (John 4:24). In this sense the Father and the Spirit are one. Yet there is a distinction as to the form in which they are presented to us for our apprehension. We find that God is located in a place called heaven, in light that cannot be approached; of the Spirit it is said to be everywhere (Psa. 139:7-12). We also see in the Scripture the Spirit presented to us as the agency used by the Father in the accomplishment of his designs. "Thou sendeth forth thy Spirit" (Psa. 104: 30. The Spirit of God (not God the Spirit) moved upon the fact of the water (Gen. 1:2) In God's dealing with Israel we find these words. "The spirit of the Lord is upon me" (Isa. 61:1; Luke 4:18). When the enemy shall come in, the Spirit of the Lord shall life up a standard (Isa. 59:19) In writing the Scriptures, holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit (2 Pet. 1:21; 2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Sam. 23:2). If God is located, how is he everywhere, beholding the good and the evil (Prov. 15:3; Job 34:21; Jer. 32:19 ? This is answered in Psa. 139:7-12. Here we see it is the Spirit of God which is diffused over all the universe, not the actual personal presence of God everywhere at once. See the sun whose rays of light are diffused over a large part of the earth at once, but the orb itself never leaves the appointed place in the heavens.

In a work like this it is impossible to consider but a few of the messages of Scripture bearing on this subject. The few we here present teach the oneness of God. That out of this One, are all things. That God is the one creator of all things. God is the Father of all men that believe his word and are baptized into his only begotten Son, Jesus Christ. No one can come to the Father only through his Son. We wish to ask, if these separate elements are yet one, why should one of these elements be called the Father? Because he created all things and brought into existence the Son by a miraculous conception through the power of the Holy Spirit. Here the Scriptures teach the three, two as personal, bodily beings, and the third as a Holy Spirit which was an unseen power, that when given from God to man, this man could perform miracles through this unseen power. God and his Son are both spiritual beings. God is at least 4000 years older than his Son, but not older than then the Holy Spirit, and the Holy Ghost is not a personal being but an unseen power belonging to God. In the sense that light is the power of the sun, and it is through this unseen power that he creates, upholds, and sustains all things.

We will now consider a few of the passages brought forth by the believers in a triune God. The only one that so teaches is found in 1 John 5:7, and this is unanimously renounced by Bible critics as a spurious interpolation upon the original text. It has been entirely omitted from the revised version of the New Testament. C. J. Scofield, himself an ardent believer and teacher of a triune God, says of this verse: "It is generally agreed that 5:7 has no real authority and has been inserted" (Scofield Reference Bible, page 1325). Those who say the Holy Spirit is very God and a personal being, rely on some texts as John 14.16, 17-26. They rely on the word "he" and "his," claiming that these words prove conclusively that the Holy Spirit is a personal being and very God, styling it "God the Spirit." But we have already shown by Scripture that God is one, and the term "God the Spirit" is not of scriptural origin, but is always termed the "Spirit of God." How, then, can we harmonize this personification in these Scriptures? Look at Proverbs 8:1, 2; 9:3. Here we find wisdom personified. But no one will claim that wisdom is an actual person. Also notice that Peter uses the neuter gender "it" when speaking of the Spirit of Christ (1 Pet. 1:11). Let us beware lest we are found worshipping other gods (Exod. 20:3). In a work of this size we can only refer to a few passages bearing on the subject, but all can be harmonized with the teaching of the word that there is one God, who works by his Holy Spirit.

Now we will briefly examine a few of the texts relied upon by Trinitarians to prove that Jesus existed co-eternally with the Father (John 17:5). How did Jesus have glory with the Father before he was born of Mary? The glorification of Jesus was a purpose with the Father before the world was (1 Pet. 1:20). He was ordained before the world was, but was manifested at the end of the Jewish age (ordained or appointed). Ordained to what? Verses 18 and 19 of same chapter answers. We read in John 1:1 "In the beginning was the word" (Logos—purpose in the mind of God 14th verse, "The word or logos was made flesh." The purpose or plan of God became an absolute fact, when as Peter says, Jesus was manifested at the end of the Jewish age. Rev. 13:8 "The Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." In the purpose of God, but literally not until thousands of years after the earth was formed. So the saints were chosen before the foundation of the earth, in the purpose of God, but not literally pre-existing before they were born. Paul explains this in Rom. 4:17, "Calling things that are not as though they were." Because they are in his purpose and he seeth the end from the beginning. In the same way we are to understand Christ's words, "Before Abraham was I am. Abraham rejoiced to see my did he see it ? Afar off. Not literally, for he died did he seeit ? Afar off. Not literally, for he died before the birth of Christ became a fact (Heb. 11: 13; John 8:42; 16:28). The literal facts of these Scriptures are: He was begotten of the Holy Spirit, born a babe in Bethlehem grew to manhood, apparently unknown until anointed for his work with the Holy Spirit at his baptism at the age of 30 years. All that is taught is that his origin was from heaven through the work of the Holy Spirit upon the seed of Mary.

Here we must close. Enough has been written to show that there is one God (not two or three), out of whom are all things: that he dwells in heaven in unapproachable light; that the Spirit of God is not a personal God distinct from the Father, but the instrumental power of the Father, radiant from his presence and filling all space, one Lord Jesus (not "very God," co-equal and co-eternal with the Father), but was constituted "Son of God" by preternatural begettal through the power of the Holy Spirit and afterwards filled with the Holy Spirit of God at his baptism in the river Jordan, and thus became a manfestation of God through the flesh (Matt. 1:23; 3:16).

This tract can be had 2 for 5 cents; 25 cents per doz.

More Faith

PAUL SAID that when miracles should cease three things would remain with the church, faith, hope, and love; and it is our purpose to contribute a few thoughts on each of these three very practical matters of Christian life.

The apostles said to their Lord: "Increase our faith." His answer to them is just as good for us, for we, too, need more faith. Judging from the statement of James that by works Abraham's faith was made complete it appears that as we proceed in Christian experience we grow in faith. The reason is evident from the Master's answer as to how to increase in faith; that it, is by humility.

He first answers that if their faith was as a mustard seed (which is the least of all seeds), that is, if they had the least possible faith, any faith at all, they could move mountains and trees at their word. Since, if we have any faith at all, we have at least faith as a mustard seed, why cannot we move trees and mountains ? Because faith comes by hearing the word of God, and if we hear what 1 Cor 13 says, we listen to clear declarations that miracles should cease at the completion of the revealed Scripture. Then faith in this latter chapter forbids working miracles by such words of miracles promises to them then, even if we have faith as large as a cabbage head. For instance, how could John 14:26 have any bearing on us who never heard him speaking words to be brought to our remembrance ? But it did to them. Luke 24:8, after showing the the wonders of faith, he proceeds to answer their request how to have more faith. It is in form of a parable, being the last of a group of ten parables beginning at Luke 14: 25, because then the multitudes were present, and Matthew says he always spoke to the multitude in parables.

The Master in the parable is evidently Christ, the slave representing the disciple the two commands to serve by plowing or feeding cattle, then wait on the Master at supper, nicely stand for the two all-inclusive commands of love to God and man. The evening represents the close of the disciple's period of service. Then he asks the question in the parable whether the master thanks the slave, and he answers his own question negatively. Then the lesson of the parable: "So likewise you, after you have lived lives of faultless and complete service in perfect love to God and man, are humbly to say, We deserve no thanks, for we are unprofitable servants, and have done only what we owed." This is humility, the lesson of the parable. And since the parable is his answer to their request for more faith, we learn this principle: Humility produces faith, and pride results in imperfect faith, doubt, or unbelief.

The foundation of the humility of the slave lies in this, that the master was out of pocket for his slave to the extent of the purchase price, and until his service had amounted to that price he would be an unprofitable business investment. The parallel to this part of the parable is that Christ has been out an expenditure to purchase us, amounting to his own spotless life given to redeem us from bondage to our former master; and will a full Christian life of even flawless service (if that were possible) be sufficient to repay him for his supreme sacrifice ? All we can do will ever leave us unprofitable to him. We are not worth what he gave for us; we are unprofitable. Contemplation of Gethsemane and Calvary will keep us duly humble, and faith will result.

This is the Lord's answer to us as we seek greater faith. And this is the answer of the general teaching of Scripture. Solomon said: "Give me neither poverty nor riches, lest I be full and deny thee, or lest I be poor and steal and take the name of my God in vain." He thus teaches that denial of God in unbelief is caused by pride that results from prosperity.

This reveals the reason for the present [illegible] in religion. Prosperity resulting from invention and co-operation and other economic causes produces pride, and it produces low faith, and consequently men are irreligious, or only nominally so. The old time zeal is gone. This is predicted as due in our times.

This also reveals why religion is now espoused more by women than by men. Women are physically more helpless than men, more humble, and hence have more faith. Commercialism is the god of the age. This also reveals the philosophy of a child's trust. Children believe anything they hear. Why such faith ? Because they are helpless, physically and mentally. They know nothing but what they are taught, hence believe any teaching.

David also gives pride as the cause of infidelity in Psa. 10:4. Jesus [illegible] it in John 5:44. The pride of the pharisees was their self-righteousness in the law. One hundred-twenty are recorded for Christ at the close of his ministry. And the pride of the world today is rapidly heading for the conditions similar to the flood and Sodom which Jesus said would exist at his coming. This also shows the reason he said, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith in the earth ?"

Notice some illustrations of the working of this law of faith. Nebuchadnezzar, in the pride of Dan. 4:30, was a stranger from God; after seven years of humiliation see his perfect faith in verse 35. Job in his self-righteousness pleading his cause, contradicting the charge of his three friends, gave way to grat humility in 40:4, 5; 42:3-6. Notice his perfect faith, similar to Nebuchadnezzar's in 42:2. Israel in humiliation of trouble in Egypt cried to God in faith; the same Israel in the land of milk and honey forgot God and found any old idol sufficient. The whole book of Judges is the same.

Infidels in peace and prosperity blaspheme God; when sick or dying they pray. Hell torment leads to tears of contrition. So will wrecks, storms, and mine disasters.

A great ship leaves port under the bostful cry, "She cannot be sunk." Few life boats on board. The wireless messages about icebergs disrgarded. They dance and carouse and have a hilarious time. The crash comes. Cards and bottles forgotten. The dance ends. The band ceases such music and starts up "Nearer my God to thee." Why nearer ? Trouble has show man his puny helplessness, and the humility finds a prayer of faith.

Why not learn before driven to abject fear and dire need ? "Why should the spirit of mortal be proud ?" And "What hast thou that thou didst not receive ? and if thou hast received it why dost thou boast, as if thou hadst not received it ?" He also asks, "Who maketh thee to differ from another ?"

The reason humility gives faith is that when we quit trusting in ourselves we find a larger Lord to worship. And so the reason pride forbids faith is that he who thinks himself sufficient for all his needs will neither trust in nor pray to a greater god than himself. But what a helpless savior and god is a man !

The infidel, as David and Solomon analyze him, is a small fellow. David says, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God;" and Solomon says, "He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool."

Shall we not in the bloom of youth and the peace of prosperity yield our gratitude and prayer to him who gave us all, and seek to serve him well? In such a course lie peace, prosperity, happiness, and salvation. So do not forget when we need more faith we need greater humility.

"Millions Now Living Will Never Die"

Russellism Answered and Refuted by the Holy Scripture

I WAS privileged very recently to read a booklet written by J. Rutherford and published by the Interna- Bible Student's Association. Mr. Rutherford was a student of the late Pastor Russell. He, like his teacher, deals in "catch subjects.' The announcement has a tendency to interest a class who are looking for a great reward at but little cost. After the subject has been discussed the hearer often goes away empty or thoroughly disgusted. Pastor Russell always depended on his subject, "To Hell and Back Again," or a great show of advertising. We have talked with some who have heard and who were well versed in the Scripture and their judgment was that his methods to draw a crowd was about all there was in his lecture. In these last days higher critics and a false theology have so disturbed the minds of men that they seem ready to receive any theory which will release them from a future punishment and assure them a future existence. This is just what such a theory does.

"Millions now living who will never die" must be the earth's inhabitants. To us this is a new born theory to advocate universal salvation. The old theory based upon the attributes of the Deity, died of itself. This new theory, hitched up with God's covenants with Abraham and David gives it a scriptural coloring. The promise that Abraham's seed will bless all families of the earth is greatly enlarged, and exaggerated. This covenant was and is conditional. Paul reveals the conditions in Gal. 3:26-29. Faith in the seed (the Christ) and a baptism into his name are conditions that make us Abraham's sed. After having gained this blessing through much tribulation, we are assured that eternal life will be given to millions now living without even asking for it. Is it justice to say that God subjected his Son to the torturing pains of a crucifixion and then let millions gain the prize without even an effort. The leaders make a great display of their scriptural knowledge in giving a very poor analysis of their texts. They also misapply their Scriptures.

They give the trumpet an uncertain sound. It does not require a prophet's eye to see that the present world is in a period of calamities. If you will take an account of calamities now happening, such as auto, airplanes, railroad, mine and explosive disasters, you are able to see where you are. These are but the shadows of the coming great crisis. These are but local happenings, yet they call for human sacrifice of life.

The same spirit is leavening the nations on the earth. The Irish uprising will cost thousands of lives and probably the extinction of the Irish people. The India provinces are ripening for the last days. Is there a place on earth where peace is found? Verily, no. They are spirits of devils working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and the whole world, to gather them to the battle of the day of God Almighty (Rev. 16:14). Local disturbances and calamities will multiply and spread until the great conflict will come. The first world was overflowed with water and perished; the world that now is by the same word is kept in store reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men (2 Pet. 3:6, 7). All Bible students must see the disasters and calamities now existing. If you will study this chapter carefully and prayerfully, you can see that peace is beyond the calamities alluded to. It has been Jehovah's rule to save the remnant as a seed.

Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord. He alone was righteous. He therefore peopled the present world. A remnant of Israel was saved as a seed for the coming kingdom. The minority of the people, not the majority, were saved. Why reverse this order and apply it to Jehovah's dealing with the present generation? Only the wild fancies of man can do this. Nineteen hundred twenty-five is the date when the wholesale salvation of the human family will begin, they say. If the resurrection of the sleeping saints and the changing of the living ones take place then, we see a period of tribulation for a portion of the earth's inhabitants. The mystery of iniquity will ripen and through local disasters and calamities will be destroyed by the brightness of his coming. There is no evidence that a remnant will be saved. It is an unrighteous seed, and the Lord can make no future use of it. They are briars and thorns, and will be burned. This will be a political-ecclesiastical nower. This is "that old serpent, which is the devil and satan." The body is dead and the spirit is held in reserve until "the little season," when it will again attempt an uprising when the end will come. They will assemble with the Gog power spirit and will be destroyed with fire from heaven. When this power was bound, another power was congregating in Palestine for the Armageddon battle. "I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle." The Lord has judged the saints and appears before the city with his saints, and demands the surrender of the city (Psa. 24:7-10). This is the Gog power that has come up for a spoil. Judah is there and will fight at Jerusalem.

Our Lord will save the tents of Judah first. He will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined and will try them as gold is tried (Zech. 13:9). There will be but a sixth part of the Gog power saved in the great battle before Jerusalem. This battle will inaugurate the seating of David's son on his throne. The Gentile nations have not been destroyed yet. The judgment of the nations will follow the above event.

There is another event that we must mention in this connection. In Dan. 12:1 we have a great trouble alluded to. There shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time: at that time thy (Daniel's) people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the books. Danel was told, "Go thy way: for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. Thou shalt rest and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." The tribulation of Daniel's people must not be considered as being that of the tribulation of the mystery of iniquity spoken of by Paul. That power is the result of the apostasy. When Jehovah sets his hand the second time to gather his people from among the people wherein they were scatterd, it will be with a mighty hand, and a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out. He will bring them into the wilderness of the people; and there will he plead with them face to face. He will cause them to pass under the rod, and bring them into the bond of the covenant. He will purge out from among them the rebels, and them that transgress against him. This event can not take place until Jesus has received kingly authority and has begun his reign over Israel. A third of Judah (Zech. 13:9), and the called out spoken of in Ezek. 20, will constitute the purified subjects with which Jesus will begin his kingdom. The apostles will be seated on thrones and rule over the twelve tribes. See Ezek. 37:15-28.

Thus far there has been but few favors granted. God's fury poured out has been the rule. There has been but two blessings bestowed, viz., the resurrection of the sleeping saints and changing of the living ones and the saving of Israel out of Jacob's trouble (Jer. 30:7, 8) Jehovah will now extend peace through the kingdom. No great part of the millions now living will be saved, as the world will meet with judgment after judgment which will check wickedness until the remaining inhabitants will learn righteousness. The spirt of the world today is to continue war, which means destruction. The present conditions will continue until the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow into it. The kingdom has been established on a peace basis. Every element has had its trial period and been recorded according to works. The coming world will constitute a trial period for inhabitants then living. There can be nothing but tribulation during Gentile rule. The righteous seed must grow to produce a righteous race. It is a snare to believe and teach that "millions now living will never die." These millions instead will be scourged and tried and some will come up through great tribulation,, having washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb (Rev. 7:14). When Jesus comes the door into the kingdom will be closed as God will cease to take out of the Gentiles a people for his name. All the millions now living will be subject to Gentile rule. The spirit of peace will no longer brood over the earth's inhabitants until the kingdom exercises authority (Isa. 2; Micah 4). These conditions will constitute a search for the word of God. It will be a famine not for bread, but for the word of God. No great blessing can be given until the instrument by which Jehovah has purposed to use to accomplish his work, has been perfected. All Bible students agree that the kingdom will be that power. The kingdom under the authority of Jesus and the saints will destroy all Gentile rule, and then peace will be extended to the inhabitants of the earth.

There are three things yet to be accomplished before any class can be blessed. We have the assurance, since the resurrection of Jesus, that in time Jehovah will do all things well. The saints must be raised and the living changed and Israel gathered and purified, and the kingdom set up, before a blessing can be extended. "Millions now living will not die" can not precede the reign of Jesus. He is Abraham's seed who will possess the gates of his enemies, and bless all families of the earth. This does not mean all of all the families. "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." Not all of Abraham's family will be blessed through this seed. To Ishmael and Esau were given an earthly blessing. Each was made earthly rulers. This blessing included only temporal things. To become an earthly ruler was their ambition. The blessing of eternal life can never be extended to this part of Abraham's family. Eternal life and kingly authority belong to the Isaac seed, and will come to them through perfect obedence. When these things have been accomplished Jesus will begin the judgment of the nations through the administration of the saints who will exceute the laws sent out from Mount Zion and Jerusalem (Isa. 2:1-6). Jehovah has at all times had "times and seasons;" so will he have in the coming work. It is unreasonable to think that all will be accomplished in a whirlwind movement. Such has never been Jehovah's way of accomplishing his purpose. Should the resurrection of the saints take place in 1925, there is much to be done before the kingdom can be established. The incidents under the seventh seal have been far advanced before the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdom of our Lord (Rev. 11:15). As James has written, "Be patient, brethren, until the coming of our Lord."

Another Debate

Herry Tick.—And so you think man is composed of two parts, soul and body?

Ortho Dox.—Yes.

H. T.—Which is the real man, the soul or the body?

O. D.—The soul is the real man. The body is only the house that the man lives in.

H. T.—Was Jesus Christ composed of two parts, soul and body?

O. D.—Yes, certainly.

H. T.—Which was the real Christ?

O. D.—The soul, of course.

H. T.—When Christ was crucified, did his soul die?

O. D.—No it did not. How do you think an immortal soul could die?

H. T.—Then it must be all a mistake about Christ dying for sinners.

O. D.—Oh no. his body died for sinners.

H. T.—What kind of sinners?

O. D. Why, just sinners, I guess—any kind.

H. T.—But you divide men into two parts. I want to know which part of man it was that Christ's body died for?

O. D.—For their bodies, I reckon.

H. T. But you argue that man's body is not the real man, and that Christ's body was not the real Christ. It seems, then, that the house Jesus lived in died to save the house that man lives in, but Jesus himself did not die, and man himself is not saved. What are you going to do about that?

O. D. You mean old thing. You are getting me all tangled up. Boohoo! "Foolkiller."

The Earth, the Man, the Glory

Each Adapted to the Other and to Glorify God

WHEN THE lower or inferior creation was finished, and the earth brought to that state of perfection making it the fit abode for an intelligent and responsible race of beings, Jehovah Elohim consulted together and said: "Let us make man in our image and after our likenes; and let him have dominion over the fish of the sea, and the fowls of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and every creeping thing that creepeth on the earth." Evidently that dominion because of intelligence; otherwise if by true force or physical strength, then a lion or an elephant might have been selected.

That man might be part of and identified with the earth, he was formed of dust. "So God created man in his image, in the image of God created he them"; and God blessed crated he them"; and God blessed them and commanded them to multiply and fill the earth; and gave to them authority to subdue and rule over all things on the earth. From subsequent Scripture we learn that it was God's purpose that the earth should be filled with a righteous and obedient people who should form characters pleasing and acceptable to Deity.

Character can be acquired only under test. That man might have the opportunity of forming character God gave to him a simply law or commandment. A law viewed from a philosophical standpoint, which would be easy to keep; simply refraining to eat of the fruit of a certain tree, at the same time warning them that the infraction of the law would result in death. A continued fealty would continue life. We are not informed what length of time it would have required to form and maintain a character acceptable to Deity in order that he might bestow the divine nature, and clothe with immortality.

We have the account how that the false reasonings of the serpent begat in Eve a doubt of the wisdom and benovelence of the Creator, and that death would result from disobeying. Also begot an ambition to make a short cut to equality with the Elohim. Believing the serpent, disbelieving God, she took of the fruit and did eat, also gave to her husband. Adam was not deceived. He knew and believed that death would ensue, but his love for Eve caused him to deliberately choose to share the fate that his ambitious and unbelieving wife had incurred. They had incurred the penalty of which they had been forewarned, and sentence was pronounced, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." All the days that Adam lived were 930 years; and he died. The death sentence contained no provision for a future life. But Jehovah had evolved a scheme whereby he might be just and yet the justifier of all who by faith in his word accept his plan of salvation and conform to his requirements, might be brought forth from the death state, and given eternal life. This he prefigured in the slain animals, the skins of which were used to cover their nakedness; and the blood was typical of the blood of the Lamb of God that should take away the sin of the world. We are not told what instructions were given to Adam, or what part he took in receiving the covering of skins to replace the fig leaf device adopted by Adam and Eve to hide their nakedness; but we are led to infer that much such information was given and contained in the promise that the seed of the woman would crush the serpent's head, the vitality of the sin power, even though his heel should be bruised in the conflict. Evidently Eve understood that she would be the mother of a son who would save from death, as indicated when she exclaimed when Cain was born, " I have gotten the man from the Lord." Thus we are made to know God's purpose to fill the earth with a righteous race produced from the first pair, demonstrating that the purpose of his creation was not a failure, nor had been frustrated by the disobedience of Adam and Eve.

But man is so prone to follow the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eye, and the pride of life, that it has taken long years of selecting and training to produce here and there one of the faith who would walk in God's ways, as did Abraham. The required number has not yet been taken out. But the individual seed promised to Eve, to Abraham, to David was brought forth in due time, lived the perfect life required by the law, made the one great atoning sacrifice, even the blood offering of the everlasting covenant through which the Father raised him from the dead, and constituted him the life giver to all who would accept him as their Savior, and render the necessary obedience; and to whom it is promised, "They shall be kings and priests to God,, and shall reign on the earth;" subduing it to the righteous rule of the Son of God by begettal, the son of Mary by birth, to whom (Mary) the angel Gabriel had said: "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Then shall be brought to pass the Scripture testimonies which declare the stability of the earth, and the perfection and glory that will obtain when the inhabitants of the earth are all righteous and immortal, and equal to the angels.

"One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh, but the earth abideth forever" (Eccl. 1:4). "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea" (Hab. 2:14). "Thou hast established the earth, and it abideth" (Psa. 119:90). "The world is also established that it cannot be moved" (Psa. 93:1).

"The earth which he hath established forever" (Psa. 78:69). "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to another people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever" (Dan. 2:44). "Who laid the foundations of the earth that it should not be removed forever" (Psa. 104:5). "And the Lord said, I have pardoned according to thy word; but as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord" (Num. 14:20, 21). "He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among the princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory" (1 Sam. 2:8). "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Hab. 2:14). "His name shall endure forever, his name shall continue as long as the sun, men shall call him blessed. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things. And blessed be his glorious name forever, and let the whole earth be filled with his glory, Amen and Amen" (Psa. 72:17-19).

We do not find anywhere in the Bible the doctrine indicating that the earth is, as it were, an incubator to people heaven; but on the contrary we read: "But the meek shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace." "For they that be blessed of him shall inherit the earth." "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever" (Psa. 37:11, 22, 29). And Jesus taught: "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth". (Matt. 5:5).

Questions for Fellow Helpers

1. Are you always at work?

"Be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord" (1 Cor. 15:58. R. V.).

2. Are you a weary worker?

"And let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not" (Gal. 6:9, R. V.).

3. Are you ready to endure hardship?

"If we endure we shall also reign with him" (2Tim. 2:12, R. V.).

4. Are you working for God's approval?

"Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed" (2 Tim. 2:15,R. V.).

5. Are you a zealous worker?

"Who gave himself for us that he might release us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a people for his own possession, zealous of good works" (Titus 2:14, R. V.).

6. Are you ready to do anything your hands find to do?

"Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God our Father which loved us and gave us eternal comfort and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts and stablish them in every good work and word" (2 Thess. 2·16, R. V.).

Public Prayer--Our Attitude on "Amen"

AGAIN I SAY unto you, that if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them. (Matt. 18:19, 20).

AT THIS season of the year we observe men and women addressing themselves to the citizens of our cities, whether they are at work in the factory or office, upon the streets or at leisure in the parks, or at their homes. In their hands they hold a printed form, beneath the headings are blank lines upon which you are requested to sign your name. If you comply with their request then the authorities consider you as indorsing the candidates seeking political office. In other words, you agree to all the candidate stands for, and by signing your name it is equivalent to saying "Amen."

This morning the writer was deeply impressed by the spirit and sentiment expressed by Brother Huggins in his opening invocation. As he thanked God for crowning our lives with mercy and lovingkindness, our mind recalled the sweet words in Psa. 36:7: "How excellent is thy lovingkindness, O God! therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings." And then as he prayer that God would pardon our sins and negligences, that God would preserve us from being carried away by anything that might dishonor his name or word, and finally his voice trembling with emotion he asked God to watch over us, keeping us together in the sweet bonds of love, unity and fellowship, that we may realize the indwelling of God's sweet spirit and disposition, confirming our faith and hope in the way of everlasting life, leading us in the way that will bring honor and glory to his name, he concluded by requesting these favors through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ our Savior.

Beloved, this has set me to thinking. Is God listening to us to see if we are endorsing our brother's prayer? How can we prove to him that we are agreed if we keep silent?

What does "Amen" really mean? The dictonary says "so be it," or more exactly, "so shall it be." To God then every one who says "Amen" we are saying, "Lord, let it be so." The Psalmist in Psa.106 exhorts the people to praise God, reviews the people's rebellious ways, and then calls upon God to be merciful. Now listen as he concludes: "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting, and let all the people say Amen, Praise ye the Lord."

Beloved, go into any Jewish synagogue and after this Psalm is read listen and see if silence will be the response. Nay, beloved; it will as some writers declare of the early church that the sound of this grand "Amen" was "like the rolling of thunder or the breaking of the waves of the sea."

I thought that if every one in that large audience this morning had only said the "Grand Amen" in the spirit of "Lord let it be so," what a mighty inspiration would have seized Brother Huggins as he read the morning text, "And the Lord said unto Moses, wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward" (Exod. 14:15); and as he concluded his sermon by quoting Rom. 8:35-39 it seemed to me the people upon the street would have caught the spirit and inspiration of the word as like thunder they would have rolled forth, "Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Open your concordance, look up all the references to the word "Amen;" it will be a revelation to you especially Deut. 27:15-26. Read the history of Israel and notice how God has caused to come upon them both blessings and curses to all which the people said, "Amen." Do you think God is any different today? Nay, read Mal. 3:6: "For I am the Lord, I change not, therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed."

I understand why Paul was so careful in exhorting the church to pray in the spirit and with the understanding. Why? He tells us: "Else when thou shalt bless with the spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say, Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?" (1 Cor. 14:16). Brethren, we must pray intelligently. Brother Huggins in his sermon quoted Eccl. 5:1, 2 with much force, especially the second verse: "Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter anything before God; for God is in heaven, and thou upon the earth, therefore let thy words be few."

Do we realize that God holds the church responsible for what a brother says in his prayer as to whether we indorse it or not? If we are silent then God knows we are not in agreement with the brother; if we say "Amen," then we are, and God will grant our request if we are agreed.

Again, Brother Huggins warned us to be careful in our prayers that we do not use vain repititions. So you see what a responsibility rests upon the church. A brother after leading in prayer, if there is no response, should think over soberly what he has said, and learn to weigh well his thoughts and words while praying to God.

Read Psa. 65:16. The prophet describes God as "God of truth," which is literally, "The God of the Amen." Well who is the Amen? Rev. 3:14 will tell us; it is Jesus: "These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God." If then Jesus is the Amen of God, every promise God ever made concerning him has been or will be completely fulfilled. When, then we pray in public for God to do thus or so, be careful that your requests are in harmony with the plans of God as revealed in the prophets and now being executed by his Son, "The Amen of God"; or in other words, God's Amen to our prayers and requests.

Now you understand what Jesus means in John 6:44, 45. God draws us to Christ because in him only can our prayers and requests be granted. This is confirmed in John 12:28-33.

Paul clinches this thought in 2 Cor. 1:20: "For all the promises of God in him are Yea, and in him Amen," or "so shall it be." Hence the necessity of the word of God dwelling in our hearts. "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you" (John 15:7). In conclusion, let us hereafter listen closely and follow a brother or sister in their prayer if in public. If the prayer is in harmony with the teaching of the word of God, let us tell God so by our hearty Amen; if otherwise, silent; and God will bless us for our loyalty to him and our faithfulness to each other. "Let us then pray with the spirit, and pray with the understanding also."

Will The Papacy Regain Its Political Power?

FRANCE HAS recently renewed its representative to the Vatican, after an absence of about fifty years, caused by the interference of the Vatican in the education of the youth in France.

Italy has had no representative at the Vatican since 1870 when Italy took possession of the states of the church; but rumor is that an arrangement is being made that will give Italy a representative at the "Holy See."

And many prophetic watchers are expecting to see the papacy regain civil power in the near future, basing their expectation on Rev. 17:12 which reads: "And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast."

The papacy has not ceased to use every means at its command for the restoration of its civil power lost in A. D. 1870. It seems to be the very nature of the papal system to grasp for power in church and state.

Self exaltation is ingrained in its constitution. The papacy first appears as a horn, after and among the ten horns on Daniel's fourth beast, which all agree is a symbol of the Roman Empire.

It is the last symbol to arise in the empire, answering to the condition of the empire of today; first pagan, then Christian, and now papal.

The first act of the horn was to pluck up three of the ten horns "by the roots," and why did he act so?

The three horns were Gothic horns and in religion Arian; therefore they were rooted up by the papacy.

The horn in the prophecy is called "a little horn," and a civil power he has always been "a little horn.' And if he regains civil power, his power will be so small as not to be noted in the prophecy. His rule as a civil power is 1260 years (Rev. 13:5).

The hour in which the kings reign with the beast is the sum total of their reign, for John says, "which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast."

The ten kings arose mainly in the fifth century, by the breaking up of the empire into ten divisions by the incursions of the northern invaders and then after that arose the little or papal horn, after and among the ten, and "plucked up three of the first horns by the roots."

Then for the time being there was only seven of the ten horns left, but the inference is that three other horns favorable to the doctrine of the trinity, took the place of the three Arian horns that the papal horn plucked up by the roots. Now history testifies to the fact that, from the sixth to the sixteenth century the pope reigned among the kings, exalting some and pulling down others.

Ten seems to be the average number of the kings but probably sometimes more, and sometimes less.

The fact appears to be that the "hour" in which the kings reigned with the beast is an indefinite period of time, covering the whole period in which the horn reigned with the kings.

An "hour" in symbolic prophecy when joined with years and days must be understood as the 12th or 24th part of the day, the day representing a year.

Now to say that the kings reigned with the beast for "one hour" literal time is not common sense, and when standing alone, as in this case, it is definite time.

Christ says: "the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth" (John 4:21-23). The "hour" here is not ended yet, but is longer than the "hour" the kings reigned with the beast.

In Rev. 3:10 we read: "Because thou hast not kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all in the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth." The future only will reveal the length of this "hour."

Commencing with the resurrection it will last until the kingdom is fully established, and the time of trouble "such as never was since there was a nation" will be passed.

The saints like Noah and his family will be safe in the ark, or in Isaiah's chambers, until the seven last plagues have exhausted the wrath of the Deity.

The word "hour," like the word "time," expresses an indefinite period of time; an era; an epoch. The hour cometh—the time cometh; the hour of temptation: the time of temptation.

In Rev. 17 as in other Scriptures there is no mention of two periods of time in which the kings reign with the beast; they reign "one hour" with the beast.

The fact revealed in Rev. 19:19 that the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, make war against him that sat upon the horse, is no evidence that the kings reign, or that the beast reigns a second time; because the reign of Christ is to be without end (Luke 1:33). Notwithstanding this, at the end of the 1000 years there is a rebellion against his righteous rule, but fire from heaven devours them; and in the former case the beast and the false prophet are cast into the lake of fire.

In Rev. 17:16 we read: "And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the harlot, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire."

These kings first agree and support the beast, but later "hate the harlot," and why hate the harlot? Evidently because the harlot claimed the right to interfere in their affairs, and to be lord over the kings. If Luther had not had friends among the princes, Rome would have reduced him to ashes.

In the providence of God, the invention of printing did more to break the iron yoke of the papacy than any thing else. When men begun to read and use their reason, the papacy was doomed to perish, as Paul says, "Whom the Lord shall consume by the spirit of his mouth and shall destroy by the brightness of his coming." And among all the kings that eat the flesh of the "harlot," Napoleon cut the most; he handled the pope without gloves, and did more than any other man to break the dark pall of papal superstition that hung over Europe.

And in A. D. 1870 Italy finished the work by taking possession of Rome and what remained of the states of the church. Then was the prophecy fulfilled. "And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the harlot, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire" (Rev. 17:16).

Ever since 1870 Italy has had no minister at the Vatican, but it is said that the pope and the king are in favor of a settlement of their quarrel. The king needs the aid of the Catholic party to help govern the rebellious Italians, and may grant some favor to the pope in return for his support; but if so, it will be too small to be noted in the prophecy, as only big events are noticed there.

Psalm 23

1. THE LORD is my shepherd, I shall not want.

2. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures (margin, pastures of tender grass).

3. He leadeth me beside the still waters (or waters of quietness, or waters of rest). He restoreth my soul (life), he guideth me in paths of righteousness (margin, straitness) for his name's sake.

4. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death (margin, deep darkness), I will fear no evil; for thou art with me (Heb. 13: 20). Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me (Psa. 119:75-77; Mal. 2:6).

5. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies (see Sam. 17:27-29); thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

6. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and (after that) I shall return unto the house of the Lord forever (see Variorum Bible).

How often has this Psalm been the favorite study of those who love God's word! It so beautifully, so simply and clearly expresses the thoughts of each individual believer. Each one feels the Psalm was written and inspired expressly for his benefit. Like the Lord's prayer in the New Testament, every word and every sentence is redolent with meaning.

The Psalm begins with the words, "The Lord is my shepherd." The emphatic use of the personal pronoun surely indicates choice. David knew much concerning the gods of the heathen round-about Dragon, Baal, and Ashtaroth; and this very knowledge gave emphasis to his statement. He knew they were many and helpless, and that in truth there was no God save the Holy One of Israel (Psa. 61: 22; 2 Sam. 7:22; Psa. 86:8-10; 89:6-8). How often we find him claiming the Lord as his God (see see Psa. 31:14; 104:33; 118:28; 49:14; 67:16).

King David rejoiced in expressing his appreciation of the Lord his God by appropriate names, such as "my Rock," "my Shield," "my Fortress," "my Defence," "my Deliverer." He was a man of war and looked out upon life from that standpoint. Yet even in his life occurred times of peace and quietness when he could speak of Jehovah as "my God with his mercy," and say that "his mercy endureth forever" (Psa. 106; 107; 118; 136).

This 23rd Psalm is almost entirely expressive of some of these wonderful names ascribed to God, not through the heat of battle and strife, but the result of calm, deliberate reflection of past and present events.

JEHOVAH RAPHE, "The Lord is my shepherd." God has protected him from the lion and the bear.

JEHOVAH JIREH, "I shall not want," for the Lord will provide not only green pastures, but pastures of tender grass. How much one is here reminded of the 1st Psalm and 3rd verse, of the tree planted by the rivers of water.

JEHOVAH SHALLOM, "he leadeth me beside the still waters, or waters of peace." "For thus saith the Lord thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel, I am the Lord who teacheth thee to profit; which leadeth thee by the way thou shouldst go. Oh, that thou hadst harkened to my commandments, then had thy peace been as a river and thy righteousness as the waves the sea"

(Isa. 48:18; also see Isa. 66:12). And what is the result of this treatment of the sheep by the shepherd? "He restoreth my soul" (life). Each night as we retire to rest life might well be reckoned forfeited, but he restores it, gives it back in the morning, a constant reminder to us of that great future time when "joy cometh in the morning," the morning of the great awakening. And why does he give it back to us each day? Surely it is that he might guide us in paths of righteousness for his name's sake (see Psa. 25:11; 79:9; Jer. 14:7).

JEHOVAH TSIDKENU. David, like many before him and many who followed after, learned that paths of righteousness sometimes led through the "valley of deep darkness," even the valley of the shadow of death; but he, like them, could say: "I will fear no evil, for thou art with me." How beautiful the promise in Isaiah: "When thou passeth through the waters I will be with thee, and through the rivers; they shall not overflow thee; when thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned, neither shall the flame kindle upon thee; for I am the Lord thy God; the Holy One of Israel thy Savior" (Isa. 43:2).

JEHOVAH SHAMMAH, "The Lord is there," aptly expresses the thought especially if we bear in mind Heb. 13:20 we get additional help.

David also learned while passing through trial to find consolation in God's judgments as represented by the rod, and comfort in the promises of God as represented by the staff (see Psa. 119:75-77). To the present day Christian the "rod" might very well indicate the Old Testament law (Gal. 3:24), and the staff the New Testament gospel.

Earlier in the Psalm David acknowledges his wants are supplied. Now he says his "cup runneth over," and he is confident from past experience that God, who has shown goodness and mercy hitherto, will continue to do so all the days of his life. But David did not stop there, for following this statement we get one of the many proofs that he believed God would give him by resurrection another life, a life without end, for he joyfully adds: "And I will return into the house of the Lord forever."

August Report

Sermons at Omaha and Palmer, 17. Money received, $142.76. Total expense, $10:40. Amount due on order, $41.56.

I AM in the midst of the Nebraska State Conference and have so much to look after, my report will be brief. This is the time of the year that we are most of us busy preparing the work for the coming year, and it is very important, and the results will depend upon the zeal we put into the work, and our zeal is in proportion to how much we love the truth. Then we should try to increase our love for the truth, that our zeal might be such that would prevent the lagging of the work.

The past year I have received help from many sources, unsolicited, that has helped me to go forward with the work unhindered; and I wish to thank these dear brothers and sisters for their kind remembrance, and in my yearly report, you will see what has been done and how your money has been expended. There certainly cannot be many more of these annual reports, but what remains, let us with united effort and godly zeal do our best. Again I thank all the noble brothers and sisters who have helped with their means, and kind words of encouragement and prayers. May God add his blessing, and may you all have a home in his everlasting kingdom.

In these times we must be prepared to meet all kinds of trials; let us meet them with godly zeal. This is the 37th annual conference. I have never missed one. I must now get to work on my annual report. Again I say, may God bless all his faithful children.

Help the Helping Fund

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager to supply the needy ones. It is also a means of rendering tithes to God by helping to defray the cost of printing the paper.

Those whose circumstances are such that they cannot afford to pay for the paper should notify the manager and if they are desirous of receiving it, it will be cheerfully sent out of this fund.

Editorial

General Conference

THE GENERAL Conference convened in Waterloo, Iowa, Aug. 28 to Sept. 4, 1921. Brethren and sisters attended from seventeen states and one province, while one church and ten conferences were represented. From a voluminous report, which is well written and interesting, but which it is impossible to publish in full in a monthy magazine, we extract the following summary of biblical truths which the Conference agreed to "affirm by print and voice; and also such other truths as are in harmony therewith," namely:

(a) That "there is one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all."

(b) "That Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day acording to the Scriptures."

(c) "That all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness."

(d) That "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

(e) "That there shall be a resurrection of the dead."

(f) "That Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many," "as our high priest he now sits at the right hand of God;" and "unto those that look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin, unto salvation." And, that when he shall come in his glory, "he shall sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations."

(g) "That as many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."

(h) That all who are new creatures in Christ Jesus "should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them and rose again."

Shut In

GOD SOMETIMES shuts his people up to absolute trust in him. He takes every prop away. He leaves not a single door open whereby they can escape from trouble or danger save by his agency. He did this with the Israelites when they had reached the end of their third day's journey out of Egypt. They were marching by the longer of the two routes that led to the Holy Land, and if they went on instead of keeping their feast and then returning to Egypt, they would still keep this road to the eastward around the north end of the Red or "Weedy" Sea; or at least this is what they expected they would do. But to their utter amazement they are told to "turn and encamp at Etham." This was in a direction directly away from the goal of their hopes. What could it mean? Could they press on a few more hours in the direction they had been going they would soon be out of reach of pursuit by the Egyptians, as their chariots could not make any speed when driven over the dry, yielding sand of the desert. But here they were; a mountain range on their right, the sea on their left with no way to cross its six or eight miles stretch, and their angry task-masters bearing swiftly down behind them.

What else was there to do but to "stand still and see the salvation of God?"

Jamieson, Fausett and Brown think the Israelites at this stage were totally unarmed, no person in Egypt being allowed to own weapons of any kind unless he were in service. They suppose that this weaponless condition of the people and their lack of training in the art of war, is what caused their fear; for as to numbers they far outranked their foes.

But the cloud, that mysterious, majestic cloud in which the angel of the Lord abode, was still with them and their fears are calmed for lo, it moves from the front to their rear, and stands as a wall for their protection, and shut in though they were with no loop-hole of escape save in God, their despairing rebellious cries are hushed and they obey the command to "go forward," right toward the sea; and see Moses stretch out his hand with the lifted rod and the sea divide!

Oh it is a blessed thing to sometimes be thus shut in; shut up to absolute dependence on God. To move forward then is to see the foe go down in the battle of the Lord to find ourselves across the sea singing a glorious song of triumph like unto that which Moses sang.

Joshua, Gideon, David, Jehoshaphat all had similar experiences to that of Moses, and so had others in the history of Israel. And they trusted and went forward.

Job trusted in God when everything was swept away. David trusted, when but a vagabond on the face of the earth. Read the Psalm and note how often he repeats the word "trust." In the 3rd Psalm he says: "Lord, how are they increased that trouble me! Many are they that rise up against me. Many there be which say of my soul, There is no help for him in God. Selah. But thou, O Lord, art a shield for me, my glory and the lifter up of mine head."

And in probably a hundred or more instances he speaks of the trust of our fathers in the Lord, of his own trust in the Lord's mercy and faithfulness, and exhorts us to put our trust in that same faithful God.

But why am I writing this? Because we, in regard to The Restitution, were shut in, as it were, in a place where there was no way of escape save to go forward and trust in God to divide the sea. We have done so and the experience has been a blessed one.

Speaking about my work to some friends the other day, instead of rejoicing with me they scolded, saying, "You have no business taking such work upon yourself; you are too old, and if there is no one else to do it, let it go undone."

But, dear ones, I would not have missed the happy experience I have had in doing it, for anything. The realness, the nearness of God for one thing. It has been "you and I," with me when we talked together about it, we have been partners together, I have "cried to the Lord with my voice, and he has heard me, out of his holy hill, Selah, and has helped me."

I have not felt that I was begging for money, but only that I was joyfully showing you just what you as faithful followers of Jesus, want to know; how you can best serve and please him and what great things you can do by upholding the truth. Our work is going on finely, thanks be to God. Do not be discouraged; the end is in sight. "Offer the sacrifice of righteousness and put your trust in the Lord" (Psa. 4:5). "He that trusteth in the Lord, mercy shall compass him about" (Psa. 32:10). "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed" (Psa. 37:3). "What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee" (Psa. 56:3). "I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress, my God, in him will I trust' (Psa. 91:2). "Trust in him at all times" (Psa. 62:8). "Trust ye in the Lord forever" (Isa. 26:4).

What The Church of God Believes and Teaches

WE TEACH that men can be saved only by an intelligent belief in the gospel (Mark 16:15, 16; Matt. 13:23; Rom. 116-19).

2. The gospel consists of the good news of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ (Matt. 4:23; Acts 8:12).

3. The kingdom of God will be a literal kingdom, established on the earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:27).

4. The kingdom proper will consist of the twelve tribes of Israel, who will be gathered from all nations, whither they are now scattered; and, after the rebels have been purged out, will be planted in the land of Palestine (Ezek. 20:38; Amos 9:15).

5. The dominion pertaining to this kingdom will embrace all Gentile nations on the earth (Dan. 7:14; Rev. 11:15; Isa. 60:12).

6. Jerusalem will be rebuilt in splendor, and be the "city of the Great King," the capital of the world (Matt. 5:35; Isa. 62:7; 66:13; Jer. 31:38,39).

7. The nations then in existence will consist of mortal men and women, as at present. They will go up, representatively, from year to year, to worship the Lord, the King, at Jerusalem (Isa. 65:17-25; Zech. 14:16).

8. When the kingdom has been established, the nations will learn war no more, but live in peace one thousand years (Micah 4:1-4; Rev. 20:1-5).

9. The rulers of the kingdom shall be immortal, yet tangible, and will consists of Jesus and his brethren. These kings will be those who will have been redeemed by the blood of Jesus out of every nation (Rev. 5:9, 10; Matt. 19:28; Rev. 2:26, 27; Zech. 14:9).

10. Before the twelve tribes can be fully restored, and before the Gentile nations can be subdued and blessed, Jesus must return to Jerusalem to sit on David's throne (Luke 1:32, 33; Rom. 11:26, 26; Acts 3:20-26; Psa. 72:: Ezek. 37).

11. The glorious reign of Jesus and his brethren will continue one thousand years over mortal nations. At the end of that time all sinners will be rooted out of the earth, and from that period the earth will be inhabited by a race of immortal beings (Rev. 20:4; Prov. 2:22; Psa. 37:20-34; Matt. 5:5; Rev. 21:4).

12. Deity will be manifested in each approved saint, as he now is in Jesus, which multitude of saints, with Jesus as the Chief, will constitute the One Name, which is to rule the kingdom and dominion for one thousand years (Exod. 3:13-15; 6:3; John 17:20-26; 3:5, 6; Psa. 67:1-4; Zech. 14:9.

13. Man is a creature of the dust—out of the earth—and by reason of sin is death doomed (1 Cor. 15:47; Gen. 2:7 Psa. 103:14; Job 4:17).

14. Death is the extinction of life; and man in death is unconscious, and dependent on resurrection for a future life (Gen. 3:19; Psa. 6:5; 146:4; Isa. 38:18; Eccl. 9:5, 6; 12:7; 1 Cor. 15:16-23).

15. Man in his present state, being destitute of immortality, if he remains in ignorance of the way of life, will forever end his existence in death (Psa. 49:12, 14, 20; Isa. 26:14).

16. Those who comply with the conditions will obtain immortality at the resurrection (Rom. 2:6, 7, 16; 1 Cor. 15:51-57; John 5:25, 28, 29).

17. Men and women whose hearts have been purified by the belief of the things of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus, if they desire in all honesty the inheritance of eternal life in the kingdom of God, are proper subjects for an immersion in water into the One Name (John 3:5; Rom. 3:5; Acts 8:12).

18. In the One Name they have Christ as their Advocate and High Priest, who will, if they are faithful, intercede for them, and through whom, they will obtain the great salvation (1 John 1:7-9; 2:1; 1 Tim. 2:5; Heb. 3:1).

19. A godly life, by obeying all the commandments of Christ, must follow baptism to insure an entrance into the kingdom of God (Rom. 2:6, 7; Rev. 2:10; John 15:14; Rev. 22:14; Matt. 24:13).

We reject the following doctrines as unscriptural: That man has an immortal soul; that there is an immortal devil who tempts man to sin; that the punishment of the wicked is eternal torments; that there is an eternal existence for the wicked; that the righteous go to heaven when they die; that man consciously exists in death; that the Bible is only partly inspired, or that inspiration has allowed errors to be made in th Bible; that there is future probation for the dead; that Joseph was the father of Christ; that the Son of God personally pre-existed; that Christ's nature was immaculate; that God is three persons; that the Holy Spirit is a person; that God is not a being, but only another name for nature; that the kingdom of God is the church; that the gospel is nothing more than the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ; that Christ has already come; that Christ will not come till the close of the thousand years; that the resurrection of the wicked is confined to apostates; that the law of Moses, including the seventh-day observance and the eating of meats, is binding on believers of the gospel; that sprinkling is scriptural baptism; that infants should be baptized; that people in ignorance, i. e., those who have not heard believed and obeyed the gospel, will be saved unconditionally; that morality and sincerity will save men without the gospel; that faith alone will save without obedience to gospel requirements; that we cannot believe the gospel without the direct influence of the Holy Spirit; that men are predestined to salvation or condemnation unconditionally; that a knowledge of the truth is not necessary to make immersion valid baptism; that the righteous dead are mortal when they come forth from the grave; that the earth or all its inhabitants will be burned up; that the Anglo-Saxons are the lost ten tribes of Israel; and that there will be no restoration to Palestine of the childrne of Israel.

"To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20).

The reader is respectfully requested, for his own sake, to turn to all the texts of Scripture above given, and see if the above is not in perfect harmony with the Bible. If Scripture teaches these things, what a glorious future there is for this earth and for all men and women who believe and obey the gospel.

Ecclesial Communications

"They Spake Often One To Another"---Malachi 3: 16

ANSWERING THOSE who have commented on the non-appearance of The Young People's Page, we beg to state that on May 16th in a general communication addressed to the Editor of The Restitution, we remarked that while we, each week, religiously mailed him copy for the page, said copy was at times printed throughout the general pages of the paper, and that on a few occasions the page had been squeezed out entirely, and that as it took every moment of our time not devoted to business and the church to prepare the copy we thought it advisable to use our time in some other avenue of work. Up to this writing, Aug 8th, Brother Brown never has acknowledged our letter, so we feel justified in stating that he is not concerned. Brother Huggins, to whom our letter must have been forwarded, sent us two letters such as you would expect a Christian gentleman to write; we thank him for them. We felt, and still feel, that the general readers were not interested owing to so few replies sent in concerning our offer to establish a "Bible Question" department. Hence the non-appearance of the page. We trust the above "explanation" explains without creating in the minds of anyone that we feel angry, for we are not. Whatever we have done, was done for, and in the name of him who is our wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption. In the future whatever we do will be done in the same cause. We never have sought our own glory, and by the help of God never shall. We have been enjoying a vacation by working hard. When we resume, we don't know at just what, we hope and trust we will be better able to serve on account of our rest and the change.

We thank you, and trust that our heavenly Father will bless our efforts —yours and mine—in attempting to serve and honor him.

Your brother, sending full Christian love,

ALEXANDER D. DONALDSON.

EDITOR RESTITUTION:

HAVING RECEIVED a number of letters urging me to come to Gallimore Gap, N. C., for meetings over the 5th Sunday in July, we made arrangements to have Sister M. F. Cook to stay with the children and left home July 27th; arriving at Gallimore in time for service Thursday evening, July 28th. We found the brethren had remodelled the old church house where my father Elder E. M. Anderson, had preached 40 years ago On Saturday Brothers E. W. Durham, M. O. Williamson, James Pack and Harper Stone of the Guthrie Grove church in S. C. came up and helped over Sunday.

On Monday morning we met at the river and baptized B. A. Taylor, his daughter Nora, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Case, Mary Case, and Georgia Case. Brother and Sister J. G. Case were formerly Adventists, but upon learning the truth they accepted baptism. Brother Taylor has heard the truth for 40 years, but was very slow in obeying. Brother and Sister L. C. Patterson, who were baptized many years ago, united with the church, making eight aditions during the meeting. The brethren at this place are very much alive. They meet every Sunday for Bible study, also every Thursday night.

On Tuesday morning we left this place for Traveller's Rest, S. C. where the brethren have built a new house since our last visit one year ago when we baptized 14 at this place. We began meeting here on Aug. 2, and closed Aug. 6 Mrs. F. Sentill and Mr. Geo. Radford were baptized into Christ as a result of this meting. On Saturday Aug. 6 we left this point for Guthrie Grove, S. C. The church where we lived before moving to Ohio. On Sunday Aug. 7, the church had a children's day. Words cannot describe this day. However I may say it was the best children's exercise I ever attended. That evening we began a week's meeting—the best meeting I ever took part in. On Sunday Aug. 14, we met at the water and after careful instruction baptized Miss Ossia Hammonds, Laura Hammonds, Beulah Hammonds, Lena Bowen, Walter Bowen, and Adell Chandler, wife of Brother Frank Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Morgan, Annie Kate Durham, Dora Whitt, P. J. Finlay, Tom Martin, E. Finley and Sadie Smith. There were others to be baptized but failed to get ready. Brother A. W. Durham will baptize them in the near future. The meeting came to a close Sunday evening.

Since our wife fell asleep we have been unable to get away from home for work before these meetings. Our eldest daughter's health not being good we saw that the care of the household was too much for her. Then, too, we were anxious to let her continue her studies in high school. So we were confronted with the proposition ofkeeping her out of school, quit travelling and preaching outside of Virginia, break up the home, scatter the children or select one to take the mother's place in the home, so we could continue our work. Not being willing to break up the family or quit the Lord's work we called on Elder A. W. Durham on Saturday Aug 13 to unite us in marriage with Sister Lula Chandler, who has been a faithful worker in the Guthrie Grove church for the past several years. Now we hope to be able to continue in the field, keep the children in school and relieve our daughter of so much care. We have known Sister Anderson for the past 25 years. The brethren in N. C. and S. C. are anxious to have us continue our work every fifth Sunday. To do so will require $40 travelling expenses. As the brethren are poor they would appreciate some help from any one who is anxious to spread the truth. So any one who is willing to pledge some money for this work every fifth Sunday may send their pledges to us, and if we can get expenses we shall try to keep up this work.

P. S. Arrived home Wednesday Aug 17 and found my daughter, Millie had been at the point of death, two doctors attending her. They want an operation. She is some better. J. H. A.

DEAR RESTITUTION:

THE NORTHWEST Conference of the church of God met at Felida, Wash., July 21-24 inclusive.

Thursday evening Brother Darby talked to us on "Our Responsibilities in the Plan of Salvation," and continued the discourse Friday afternoon. Brother Corbaley gave us a series of sermons on the Signs of the Times, speaking four times.

Saturday morning at 10 o'clock our annual business meeting was held. The Secretary's report was read and accepted. The committee on resolutions appointed were A. W. Darby, Grace M. West and J. H. Wolfe.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President	J. W. McIrwin
Vice-President	J. W. Wolfe
Secretary	Grace M. West
Treasurer	Ed. McIrwin

The Constitution of the General Assembly was read and laid on the table until Sunday afternoon. Sunday P. M. the discussion was taken up again and it was moved and seconded that we adopt the Constitution. The motion was lost. It was then moved and seconded that the Secretary be instructed to write the Assembly and explain the reason we do not adopt the Constitution, but if they will mail us their completed Constitution, accompanied by their articles, we will act on them. Carried. Treasurer's report read and accepted stating the amount on hand is $117.47.

A report of the work being done by the church at Corvallis was read, and it was moved and seconded that the Felida church give the Corvallis church a vote of thanks for their work during the past year.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolutions drawn up by the committte were read and accepted.

Resolved, that we render to God our sincere thanks for his tender mercy and care during the past year, and for the opportunity of asembling ourselves together again.

Resolved, that we extned to Brother J. W. McIrwin and family our tenderest sympathy in the loss of a loving companion and mother and our condolence to the brotherhood in the loss of a faithful sister in Christ.

Resolved, that we extend to the brethren and friends of Felida our thanks for their generous hospitality and loving care during our stay here.

Sunday morning Brother Darby talked on "God's kingdom and Our Obedience;" Sunday P. M. Brother Corbaley on "The Resurrection of the Dead," and in the evening again on "The Signs of the Times."

WALLACE WOLFE, Pres.
GRACE M. WEST Secy.

DEAR ONES of the Household of Faith:

It has been some time since I last wrote you, and now I feel that a few lines from me is due you.

By this time you may have forgotten that I am the secretary of the "Isolated Fund." I must admit that I should have given you a report each time we drew on that fund, but not always was the report of work done given me, so I could not comply. I have finally come into a knowledge of the most of the work done. We often get appeals from someone who wishes to be baptized and some other special work that the individuals are not able to pay for. So we have responded to most of these calls, and the result has been, that not only the ones asking for baptism were baptized, but a goodly number of others.

We have found by experience that when anyone is sent to baptize one under special call that the one who is sent always holds a few meetings, and in this way many have heard the truth, and a goodly number baptized. We must remember that these never would have heard the truth in any other way, at least it appears to us that this was the Lord's way in getting the truth to those people.

Many come to a knowledge of the truth from various circumstances; some by reading tracts, others by talking to some believer or by reading The Restitution sent by some friend, or in some way out of the ordinary way of hearing some minister preach. Some times they become interested through some of these various ways, then move away to themselves, and in after years, it all comes plain to them that they ought to be baptized; so they write to some friend and make their wishes known, and finally it reaches us, and how glad we are when we obtain this knowledge to know we have a little fund to draw upon and can comply with these requests.

As I said before, a goodly number of such calls have been responded to, so the money that you have given to this fund has ben faithfully kept and dispensed. While I am writing I might say we have a request from a young lady who says she is 22 years old and has been studing the Bible and thinks she understands the gospel and wants to be baptized, but says she is not able to bear the expense, so we will have to send someone to do the work. So brethren, let us be faithful and not forget this fund. Send us whatever you feel disposed to, so we may at all times be able to respond to these calls. The treasury has never been empty since we started, and we have always been able to respond to every call so far. So let us keep it going. The Lord is soon coming. Will he find us faithful at our post, and not have regrets over neglected work?

Your sister in the one faith,

ROSE STORJOHN,

The National Berean Society

Leota B. Hanson, Editor, 106 South 2nd Street, St. Louis, Missouri

AT THE annual National Berean Conference a new department was added to the Berean work— a Relief Department.

This is an important department, and I feel sure all the young people and older ones as well will be interested in this and will want to help in every way they can.

The object of it is to more closely unite the house hold of faith by helping the needy in time of trouble. It is such persons this committee with your assistance will attempt to find.

In James 1:27 we are told what pure religion is. Prov. 21:13: "Whoso stoppeth his ears to the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, but shall not be heard."

We find by reading many Scriptures if we turn away from the appeals of those who are in need, or even neglect through lack of interest to look up their cases, we thus neglect the Savior.

Will the Lord bear in mind acts of kindness? Read Heb. 6:10; 2 Cor. 9:6; and Luke 6:38.

In order to carry on this work we must have financial help. Some of our young Bereans are practicing the tithing system. Luke tells us in the 6th chapter, 38th verse, give and it shall be given unto you, good measure, pressed down and shaken together, and running over.

We hope that no serious appeals will come to us, but let us be prepared. We know not what a day may bring forth.

I am hoping this work will develop in a much larger way, and that is to establish a home for our aged members. Now, don't let someone say, no need of this; God will provide for them. We cannot sit with folded hands and wait for him to do it. We must have works as well as faith.

Those who are young and strong can help now in this, and others who have passed the greater number of their years and have been blessed with this world's goods can help wonderfully in this work. The only bank deposits made now that you will see any result of in the kingdom age will be those you have made in the bank of kindness.

Please send donations and communications to Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 193 Spruce St., Aurora, Ill.

Acceptance with God

ACCEPTANCE BY SACRIFICE.

(1) Acceptance was often testified visibly by fire, as doubtless in Abel's offering (Gen. 3:24; 4:4; Heb. 11:4); in Aaron's first offering after the erecting of the Tabernacle (Lev. 9:24); in Gideon's offering (Judges 6:21); in Manoah's (Judges 13:19, 20); in David's (1 Chron. 21:26); in Solomon's (2 Chron. 7:1); in Elijah's (1 Kings 18:38).

II. ACCEPTANCE OF THE POOR AND RICH EQUALLY.

1. The first, second, third, and fourth chapters of Leviticus set forth this equality fully. The Levites' tithe of the tithe was reckoned to them "as though it were the corn of the threshing floor or the fulness of the winepress" (Num. 18:26, 27). Samuel's humble offering of one "sucking lamb" (1 Sam. 7:9) was far more acceptable to God than the opulent sacrifices of pride and hypocrisy; as in the New Testatment the poor widow's mite was preferred before the profuse offerings of the rich (Mark 12:43, 44; 2 Cor. 8:12).

III. SACRIFICE OF A SWEET SAVOR.

1. Sacrifices in many Scriptures are spoken of as "a sweet savor unto the Lord." Instances: Noah's sacrifice on the new earth after the flood (Gen. 8:21); Aaron's ram and wave-offering (Exod. 29:18, 25); the Levitical offerings (Lev. 1:9, 13, 17; 2:2, 9, 12); etc.

2. Compare with the sacrifices of sweet odor "the sweet savor" of spiritual offerings: the gospel ministry (2 Cor. 2:15); the love and liberty of the church (Phil. 4:18); and Israel's offerings in the future (Ezek. 20:40, 41; 43:27).

3. Frankincense mixed with offerings, or placed upon the shewbread, probably was an intimation in symbol of divine acceptance. Fragrant in perfume, it shadowed forth the offering of faith, perfumed with the incense of the Savior's merits (Eph. 5:1, 2). "An offering and a sacrifice": both a peace offering and a sin offering.

IV. MANY TERMS EXPRESSIVE OF ACCEPTANCE.

1. "Accepted in the Beloved" (Eph. 1:6). The word here translated "accepted" is "charitoo" in the Greek, and means "to make gracious or acceptable" (Young). The word is akin to charity, grace—graciously accepted.

2. "Known of God," recognized by him (Psa. 1:6; 1 Cor. 8:3; 2 Tim. 2:

3. "Approved."' Examined, endorsed, accepted (1 Cor. 11:9; 2 Tim. 2:15; Rom.16:10).

4. "Favor" (Prov. 12:2; Cant. 8:10; Psa. 106:4); "finding grace" (Gen. 6 8); "well pleasing" (Col. 1:10; 3:20; 1 Tim. 3:22; Heb. 11:5); "well done" (Matt. 25:21, 22); etc.

5. Divine acceptance and welcome to a penitent sinner is beautifully told in the parable of the prodigal son (Luke 15:20-32).

Discussion On Universal Salvation

Alpha Affirms; Omega Denies

FELLOW CITIZENS:

IT WILL of course be expected that I should say something in reply to the speech to which you have been listening, before proceeding with my regular congeries of propositions. My opponent has been endeavoring, during the greater part of his address, to rivet the charge of infidelity upon the cause of Universalism—the cause for which I am contending. The congregation will just look at the charge, whilst I, in one word, expose its fallacy. My opponent, as you are aware, believes that Christ will only save a part of mankind whilst I believe in Christ as much again as he does! This is certainly a new plan of testing infidelity! The man who believes in Christ the most is the greatest infidel! My friend looks upon Christ as a part of a Savior, yet he is the believer and I am the infidel! I see several gentlemen sitting back there, some of them Calvinists, and some Armenians; and they appear to be exceedingly interested in my opponent's arguments. Gentlemen, by your permission, I will put two of you together, and make a first rate Universalist! The Calvinist believes that Christ will save all for whom he died; and the Armenian believes that he died for all. Hence, all will be saved! Now I will leave it to the audience to judge, whether I am an infidel, when I believe in Christ as much as both those gentlemen put together. (A laugh!)

But my opponent endeavors to justify the dogma of endless damnation; and a miserable defence he has made! He tells me to calculate the exact amount of punishment due, for sins committed against God. I will inform the audience that man is a finite being, and all his actions are like himself, finite in their character. No man can commit an infinite offence, hence the injustice of inflicting infinite punishment. Punishment should always be proportioned to the sin for which it is inflicted; and as sin is finite, punishment must be also; actions in time can in no case, extend in their effects into eternity. This is my doctrine exactly; sin belongs to this life, and does not extend into the future state at all. Hence punishment belongs to this life, and will in no case extend into eternity. Whenever a man's body dies, then the very fountain and foundation of sin is destroyed. Sin originates in the flesh, belongs to the flesh, and is not in the least attached to the soul or spirit. This being incontrovertably true, it follows that whenever the flesh dies, the individual is free from sin. The apostle testifies the same thing. "He that is dead, is freed from sin" (Rom. 6:7). Hence, whenever a man leaves this fleshly, sinful state, he has nothing to do but to regale his spirit in the elysian fields of the paradise of God! How transcendently sublime is the faith of universal salvation!

But how mighty the contrast, between this and the soul-benumbing dogma of endless perdition. Many in the belief of this doctrine, have become religious maniacs, and have gone into eternity, in the act of committing suicide! What a horrible death for any rational being to die. And look also at the cruel persecutions that have been conducted by the believers in that wretched doctrine. Look at the hundred and thosands who have fallen victims to death, under the withering influence of the dogma of endles damnation. My heart is chilled when I think of the myriads who have been hurried into eternity, by the wicked and cruel doctrine of partialism. None have ever been guilty of such barbarous and outrageous conduct, except such as were believers in that heart-withering sentiment!

But my opponent is strong in the faith that those who die in their sins are lost forever! But this must land him into a difficulty, from which he cannot possibly escape. There is no man perfectly free from sin in this life. The greatest saints die in their sins, to some extent; and consequently the whole race of Adam will be eternally lost! The only perfect freedom from sin is in the ordeal of death when the mortal flesh, this "body of sin, is put off."

But I will carry out the argument on the design of punishment, introduced in my last speech. Or, at least, I will give my positive testimony upon that point, and then call upon my opponent to refute it if he can. God says to the children of Israel: "Thou shalt consider in thy heart, that as a man chasteneth his son, so the Lord thy God chasteneth thee" (Deut. 8:5). Thus the chastisement of the Lord is compared with the chastisement of man; and what father, possessing the feelings that should rule in the breast of every parent, would punish his son with ceaseless perdition? But this is not all the testimony direct upon this point. The apostle Paul has placed this position beyond th reach of controversy. "My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him; for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons, for what son is he, whom the father chasteneth not? Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence; shall we not much rather be in subjection to the Father of Spirits and live? For they verily for a few days, chastened us after their own pleasure; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness. Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous but grievous: nevertheless afterwards it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness" (Heb. 12:5-11). This is as positive as testimony can make it, that God punishes only with regard to reformation, that the subjects of his chastisement might be partakers of his holiness; and he here emphatically testifies, that it is "for our profit," and that it will yield the "peaceable fruits of righteousness." This is the true and scriptural design of all punishment. The chastisement is not only inflicted in order to reform the sinner; but God in his benevolence places punishment before men as a motive to deter them from the commission of crime. I could present several other considerations in confirmation of this position; but I will preserve them until I hear how my friend will endeavor to evade these already adduced. As I said before. I wish him to have all chance possible to grapple with my testimony, and dispose of it, if he can; and if he cannot, I hope he will posess the spirit of candor and honesty, enough to confess it. He may now try his hand again, and the audience will watch the movement of the waters!

OMEGA'S FIFTH REPLY

FELLOW CITIZENS:

WERE IT not that my opponent would make capital of it, I would honestly confess that I know not how to dispose of his last speech; not because the arguments which it contains are unanswerable, but because it is the most perfectly heterogenous tangleation of incongruities and contradictions that I ever heard in so short an address. If I can succeed in untwisting and disentangling its innumerable perversions, and sophistical twistifications, in three times its length, I shall have done more than I now expect. we shall try, however, to be as brief and as systematical as possible.

In the first part of his speech he endeavored to escape from the charge of infidelity, and I did not at all wonder that the audience should be diverted at the funny little twist he took! He says he believes in Christ twice as much as I do, because he believes that he will save all, and I believe he will only save a part. Hence he concludes that I am more of an infidel than he is. Very cute indeed! But stop a little: it is just as much infidelity to believe that Christ will do what he says he will not do, as to disbelieve everything he says! But my opponent did not think of this. He believes that Christ will do what he has repeatedly said he will not do. I might argue, on the same principle. that I was still more of a believer than he, and contend that Christ would take all men to heaven in their sins! He would object to this, and charge me with infidelity for believing a thing which is so manifestly contradicted by reason, common sense, and the Bible! But why, my dear sir, do you charge me with infidelity, when I believe in Christ so much more than you do? Look at it if you please! Neither does it follow, because I do not believe that Christ will save all, that I hold him only as a part of a Savior. Supposing a physician, with medicine sufficient to cure every case of sickness that might occur, should locate in this town; and suppose a half dozen men, out of sheer negligence, or contempt for the physician, should refuse to take his medicine, and consequently die: could it with any propriety be said that the man was only part of a doctor?

But my friend proved his doctrine by putting a Calvinist and Armenian together. One believes that Christ will save all that he died for: and the other believes that Christ died for all, and hence all will be saved. This I confess is a powerful argument! Well: Armenianism teaches that one sin deserves endless damnation, unless this punishment be shielded off by forgiveness. Universalism teaches that forgiveness in no case shields off deserved punishment: hence as all have sinned, if you put an Armenian and Universalist together, you have universal damnation!! Again, a Calvinist believes that those who die in their sins will be eternally lost. My opponent affirmed in his last speech that there were none, not even the greatest saints, who did not die in their sins. Hence, put my friend and a Calvinist together, and you have a universal damnation. So much for that argument.

But as we are now upon this point, let us inquire into this matter of the greatest saints dying sinners! He first states such to be the fact, and in the next sentence he contradicts himself, by saying that the moment the body dies, sin is put off, and the individual is perfectly freed from it! Thus, instead of dying in his sins, death is nothing but a leap out of sin and all its contaminations into the presence of God! But this idea, that no man can be perfectly free from sin till death, is most preposterous and absurd. Cannot a man die forgiven? Certainly; if he attend to the means which God has appointed, before death. When God forgives a man's sins, is the man yet a sinner? This is truly a singular idea, that God cannot forgive a man's sins, but that there will be some sin left unforgiven! Let us hear how Paul agrees with this doctrine. "And you being dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses" (Col. 2:13). Suppose God should forgive a man all trespasses (which he certainly would, if he forgave any,) and the man should then die, what would become of my opponent's theory? Universalists will not contend, but that Christ was perfectly pure, and died without sin. Now what says John? "When he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is: and every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself, EVEN AS HE IS PURE" (1 John 3:3). But how is this to be done? John answers: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just, to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from ALL UNRIGHTEOUSNESS" (1 John 1:9). Thus, if a man should confess his sins, in all sincerity of soul, before death, God would forgive "all trespasses" cleanse him from "all unrighteousness," and he would die uncontaminated—"pure, even as Christ is pure." Such are the characters referred to by the Revelator: "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me write: Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord," (Rev. 14:13); that is, according to my friend's logic: "Blessed are the dead that die in their sins," for all men die in their sins, whether they die in the Lord, or out of him! The apostle is speaking of those ancient worthies who walked with God, says: "These all died in faith" (Heb. 11:13); that is, they all died in their sins! What an interesting commentary my opponent could write on the New Testiment if he should set himself about it. Christ says: "If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins" (John 8:24). Alpha says, ye shall die in your sins anyhow, whether you believe on Christ or not; for the greatest saints die sinners! Solomon says: "He that justifieth the wicked, and he that condemeth the just, even they both are an abomination to the Lord" (Prov. 17:15). And I would say to my opponent: "thou art the man!" He condemns the just by saying that the most just man that ever lived, dies in his sins; and he justifies the wicked by making out, as you have heard him do, since the commencement of his discussion, that his sins were all according to the will of God—that he was an involuntary agent, and consequently not to blame for anything he did, and that sin should be no injury to him in the outcomé, as it should be overruled for his good! Thus, as certain as Solomon has told the truth, my opponent is an abomination to the Lord, because he both justifies the wicked, and condemns the just.

But another argument is presented: sin belongs wholly to the body, or to the flesh, and is not at all attached to the soul or spirit; and hence, when the body dies, or the flesh returns to the dust, sin ceases, as a matter of course. Let us first examine the premise that sin has nothing to do with the spirit, or that the spirit in the worst sinner remains uncontaminated. "Having these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit" (2 Cor7:1). It appears from this that the spirit gets contaminated by sin, as well as the flesh. "Do ye think that the Scripture saith in vain, The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth to envy" (James 4:5). If the spirit in a man "lusteth to envy" it is sinful; "for where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work" (James 3:16). But if this should be denied, and it be contended that the lusts of the flesh are the only things that are sinful, and that they cannot affect the soul: we answer in the language of Peter: "Dearly beloved, I beseech you, as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul (1 Pet. 2:11). Paul offers up a singular petition, my opponent's doctrine being true: "I pray God, your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless, unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Thess. 5:23) If there can be no blame attached to the soul and spirit, then two-thirds of the apostle's prayer was perfect nonsense! If the spirit canont be unholy, why does Paul make this remark? "The unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that she be holy, both in body and spirit" (1 Cor. 7:34).

Solomon does not agree with my opponent, for he came to the conclusion that "the soul of the wicked desireth evil" (Prov. 21:10) Neither does Ezekiel: "Behold all souls are mine, as the soul of the Father, so also the soul of the son is mine; the soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezek. 18·4). Neither does the prophet Micah: "Shall I give my first born for my transgression, the fruit of my body, for the sin of my soul?" (Micah 6:7).

Such are a few of the testimonies sustaining the position, that sin is connected with, and has its seat in the soul. Truth is an action that does not originate in the soul, or that is not first resolved in the heart, before being carried out into practice, is not recognized by the laws of God or man, as either good or evil. The more the spirit or soul has to do with an evil act, in premeditating, planning, resolving, etc., the more heinousness is attached to the crime. But it is most unaccountably strange that God should inflict all punishment for sin, accord-to my opponent's creed, upon the soul, or the conscience, when nothing was engaged in the practice of it except the body! Why not punish the part that is guilty? This, however, is not the only absurdity conected with this theory. My opponent believes that Christ came to save all men from sin. But he cannot save the souls or the spirits of men from sin, for they are perfectly uncontaminated, and pure from its defilements! He cannot save the body from sin; for my opponent believes, as does a majority of his brethren, and as I heard him assert last Sunday, that the body returns to dust no more to rise. Hence, Christ is neither to save the soul nor the body from sin; and as there is nothing else to be saved, it follows that my opponent does not believe that Christ will save men from sin in any sense! But if the spirit, being separated from its polluted habitation, can be understood as a salvation from sin, then Christ coming to save men from sin, was to kill them, and separate their souls from their bodies; for my friend teaches that no man can be freed or saved from sin, until death! Hence, as Christ did not kill any body, but just let them die as they always have done, he did not therefore save any one from sin, and consequently came for nothing at all!

Suffering

SUFFERING, IN this world, is both remedial and penal. When it is rightly received it is remedial. When it is resisted, it becomes penal to him who resists, and admonitory to the spectator.

Suffering is the jarring of the faculties of the mind one upon another, and it never will cease till they are all tuned to harmony. There are two ways of escaping from suffering: the one by rising above the causes of conflict, the other by sinking below them; for there is quiet in the soul whenever all its faculties are harmonized about any centre. The one is the religious method; the other is the vulgar, worldly method. The one is called Christian elevation; the other stoicism.

VOLUME 74 CLEVELAND, OHIO, DECEMBER, 1921. NUMBER 2

The Deacon's Thanksgiving

Old Deacon Bedell was the cheeriest man
You'd meet with in many a day,
He'lowed that the Lord had a pretty good plan
For running the world, and he'd say,
"I'm thankful that things are about as they are—
They could be a mighty sight wus—
An' the things we've complained of the loudest so far
Have proved to be blesin's to us."

When others lamented the draught he'd reply,
It's better than having a flood.
An' we ought to thank God when the weather is dry
That we don't have to waller in mud."
Yet when it was stormy he'd never complain,
But say with immutable trust,
"The Lord in his goodness has sent us the rain
To lay the discomfartin' dust."

When adversity smote him it fell like the dew
On the mountain's impervious crest,
For his simple philosophy held to the view
That everything worked for the best,
And for others' misfortunes he always could find
Such sweet consolation to give,
It seemed that he envied the halt and the blind,
The lives they were destined to live.

One day he was caught in a threshing machine,
It cost him a leg, but he said,
"That's getting off cheaper than some I have seen,
I'm thankful it wasn't my head."
And always thereafter he stumped on a peg
Or patiently went with a crutch,
Declaring, "I'm savin' a lot on that leg—
My socks only cost half as much."

When his end was approaching he said, with a smile,
As they folded his hands on his breast,
"I've worked pretty hard a considerable while,
An' I'm thankful to get a good rest."
So he went through the world strewing smiles on his way
And the neighbors surviving him tell
That no matter what happened, it seemed every day
Was thanksgiving for Ezra Bedell.

Immortality or Annihilation: Which?

By Rev. H. W. Frost, Director China Inland Mission

THE FOLLOWING discussion is the culmination of a somewhat lengthy correspondence between Brother R. H. Judd and Rev. H. W. Frost, of China Inland Mission. We had at first intended to publish the correspondence, but concluded after mature consideration that although interesting it would encroach too much upon our limited space while adding nothing to what is contained in the discussion itself.

IT IS SAID in the Scripture that God made man in his image and after his likeness (Gen. 1:26, 27). An attribute of the divine nature is immortality. Is it not likely then that man was made immortal?

2. It is declared that God breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life, and that man became a living soul (Gen. 2:7). No such language is used as to the creation of the beasts (Gen. 1:24, 25). It is said that God created them, but it does not say that he breathed into them the breath of life; it is said that they are souls (Gen. 1:21, 24; 2:19; 9:10, 12; Rev. 8:9; 16:3); but it is never said that they have spirits as well as souls. In view of the fact that the word sets forth a special divine act in the creation of man, and declares that man— converted and unconverted— has, in addition to a body, both soul and spirit (Rom. 8:16; 1 Cor. 2:11, 12; 5:5; 2 Cor. 7:1; Eph 2:2; 1 Thess. 5:23; Heb. 4:12; James 2: 26). is it not reasonable to conclude that the gift to man of the spirit made him to differ radically from the beast, and particularly in possessing spirit life, that is, immortality?

3. No beast has ever possessed God-consciousness, nor has any ever expressed by act of worship or service the least degree of God-relationship. But man—saved and unsaved—has acknowledged God and has sought to worship and serve him (Gen. 4:1-5; Rom. 1:19-23, 32, etc). Does not this reaching out after God by saint and sinner alike arise from the fact that each, in contrast to the beast, has a spirit-sense; and does not this further prove that the spirit in seeking to worship and serve the immortal One has within itself the sense of immortality?

4. Adam, after the fall and after he died spiritually, did not at once die physically (Gen. 3:6-19; 5:5). Also Cain, though born, spiritually dead, did not at once pass out of physical life (Gen. 4:5, 16). Also, countless numbers of men, who have never had one least spark of spiritual life, being born spiritually dead (Psa. 51:5). have not only lived on indefinitely, but also have outlined by many years those who have had spiritual life and had such in abundance. It is evident, then, that having spiritual life does not give or increase physical life, and that not having spiritual life does not destroy or decrease physical life. Is not this a proof that the presence or absence of spiritual life has no connection with continuance of being; and does it not indicate that the divine law of spirit-life in this respect which is in force on this side of the grave, is also in force on the other side?

5. From first to last in the Scripture, divine judgment and punishment are held up before men as both a warning and deterrent in respect to the committing of sin in this present life, it being declared that every sin will be punished (Ezek. 18:4; Rom. 5: 12), and that the degree of punishment will be in proportion to the sin committed (Deut. 2:16; Matt. 10:15; 11:55). If there is no life beyond the grave, or beyond resurrection and judgment, how can punishment, particularly proportionate punishment, be meted out, and, therefore, how can the fear of judgment deter any man from present sinning? As to this last, would it not be true that the Epicureans, whom Paul condemned (Isa. 22:13; 1 Cor. 15:32), would be right, and could not all men in this case adopt for their creed and code of living their frivolous and blasphemous saying, "Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die?" In short, if annihilation were true, would not God find it impossible to punish sins according to the deeds done in the body, and would not the average unspiritualized man prefer to enjoy the pleasures of sin in life with oblivion at its close than anything else which he, in his natural state, could conceive of?

6. It is said by some annihilationists that the soul after death is conscious and in suffering until the resurrection. It is said by others that the soul continues to exist after death but is not conscious, and does not suffer up to the time of the resurrection. It is admitted by all that there is a resurrection for all the unjust, which is scripturally correct (Dan. 12:2; Matt. 13:49; Acts 24:15; Rev. 20: 12-15). But again some say that after the resurrection and judgment, the unjust are immediately annihilated; while others declare that subsequent to these there will be a period of conscious suffering, its length and degree being in proportion to the sins committted in life, and that annihilation will only follow after this experience is past. It is evident from these statements that there is not a full scriptural agreement among the annihilationists; and it is also evident that the main agreement existing between them is found in the two beliefs that, first, there is a resurrection; and second, there is an annihilation. As to these two beliefs, these queries arise: if the soul is to be annihilated, why then is there a resurrection, how can an incorruptible and indestructible body—such as the resurrection body, in the nature of the case, must be (1 Cor. 15:55)—afterwards be corrupted and destroyed? Moreover, supposing there is a period of conscious suffering, shorter or longer, either before or after the resurrection, what beomes then of the basal argument of annihilationism to the effect that physical death destroys the soul and makes immortality impossible?

A REPLY TO REV. H. W. FROST

THE ABOVE title is not of our choosing. Mr. Frost deliberately uses the term "annihilation" even though his attention has been called to our repudiation of it. He is well aware that "Conditional Immortality" is the title we have chosen, and that it is descriptive of our belief. His designed refusal to use it though his correspondence was commenced under that name, not only shows considerable lack of courtesy, but is indicative of the weakness of a cause that is obliged to seek support by such methods.

SECTION ONE

Mr. Frost quotes Genesis 1:26, 27 as proof that man was made in God's image and likeness. To this we cordially agree, for the word of God says so. But when Mr. Frost utterly fails to distinguish between things that differ, and infers that an "attribute" in the sense in which he uses the word, and in which it is commonly understood, is the same as "image" or "likeness," we feel that he starts his whole argument on wrong premises. If the argument is valid for one attribute, it is so for all, and man can claim to be omnipotent as well as immortal. What proves too much very frequently prove the opposite. It is significant that this particular "attribute" is singled out by the word of God for the express purpose of telling us that "God only hath immortality," and imparting the injunction to "seek for it" (1 Tim. 6:16; Rom. 2:7). Not only is it true that Scripture nowhere states that man is immortal, but it is equally true that Scripture definitely denies that man is immortal by positive declarations that he is mortal (Job 4:17; 2 Chron. 14:11, margin; Psa. 9:30; Isa. 51:12). In these passages, and many more, the Hebrew is "Enosh," viz., MORTAL MAN.

We cannot help noticing the uncertainty of language which pervades the conclusions arived at by Mr. Frost as he sums up each section of his argument; indeed, it will be seen that conjecture enters largely into his entire treatise. Compare his words, "Is it not likely," with those of Isaiah 51:12: the former is halting, doubtful, and querulous in tone; the latter is bold, fearless and emphatic.

SECTION TWO

This section has been considerably altered by Mr. Frost. In his first manuscript he actually said regarding the creation of the beasts, "While they are called souls (Gen. 1:21, 24; 2:19; 9:10, 12; Rev. 8:9; 16:3), they are never called 'living souls,' and the word 'living' is cognate with the word 'spirit.'" Seeing he has withdrawn these statements, we will not comment on them; indeed, no comment is necessary to point out their illogical and unscriptural character.

Yes, it is true that God breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life, and that man became a living soul (Gen. 2:7); but it is not recorded that man became an immortal or ever-living soul. The man became what he was not before. He was a man without life; by the act of God he became a living soul.

We are agreed, that the language used in Scripture regarding the creation of man is more detailed and specific than the creation of the beast, and the reasons are obvious: man is the object and cause of divine revelation, the one who was to have dominion over the works of God's hands. The China Inland Mission Director's next remark is, however, ambiguous in the extreme. It may mean one of two things: It may mean "the breath of life was denied the animal creation; or it may mean "the breath of life" was not imparted by breathing. Probably both meanings are insinuated, for he says, "it is said they are souls" and quotes in proof, Gen. 1:21, 24; 2: 19; 9:10, 12; Rev. 8:9; 16:3, adding, "but it is never said they have spirits as well as souls." To deny that the animal creation have spirit as well as soul is a flagrant but common theological error, but we are amazed that a writer and Bible student of Mr. Frost's reputation should adopt it. That animals are possessed of "the breath (or spirit) of life" is frequently asserted in Scripture, and if Mr. Frost does not know that fact we would refer him to the followng passages, and ask him to very specially note the last two: Gen. 6:17; 7:14, 15, 21, 22 (R. V.); Eccl. 3:19, margin. The mode of its being given to them is a mere detail. As they were both created by God, and both (man and animal) were given the same "breath of the spirit of life" (Gen. 7:22, R. V.) it would not be an illogical conclusion—though we do not affirm it—that in each case it was imparted in a similar manner. Mr. Frost cannot say it was not! Has Mr. Frost noticed that we have no record as to how Eve received "the breath of life?" Has Mr. Frost also noticed that correctly speaking it is "the breath of the spirit of lives" (plural), viz., "the breath of the spirit of life" common to ALL lives, the lives of all flesh? It is strange indeed that anyone should quote James 2:26 and 1 Thess. 5:23 as proof that man possesses a spirit which the beast does not. Reference to the margin of the former passage should awaken some thought, and the Revised Version of the latter passage shows very clearly that even man cannot be "entire" (in the living state) without the body, soul and spirit or breath of life. That "Ruach" is the Hebrew and "Pneuma" is the equivalent word in the Greek, is a well established fact among Bible students; and it is admitted quite freely, as also evidenced by translation, that both words are variously translated according to the connection in which they are used; but in all of these there still remains the basic idea that the spirit of life is necessary to their realization. "Ruach" in the Old Testament is in some instances rendered "mind" (Gen. 26:35; Prov. 25:11), and in others, while the translation is "spirit," the sense is "mind" (Num. 14:24). Other senses of the word are courage (Josh. 5:1), power (Num. 11:25). The same is true of its counterpart pneuma in the New Testament: and undoubtedly these meanings are intended in some of these passages quoted by the "Rev." Mr. Frost. For instance, 1 Cor. 2:11; and 2 Cor. 7:1. The mind is clearly the thought. But the fact that man has a mind is no proof that he is immortal. Psa. 146:4 sufficiently settles that point.

SECTION THREE

If Mr. Frost thinks that believers in Conditional Immortality consider that man is no higher in the scale of life than the beasts, he makes an exceedingly grave error, for do not the Scriptures clearly state that man was to have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living being that moveth upon the fact of the earth ?

Though Mr. Frost does not actually make this charge, it is so frequently adopted by the advocates of natural immortality as to require a rejoinder, and to the believer of the word of God no better reply can be given than that already quoted from Gen. 1:28. The Creator has set an immeasurable distance between man and the beast in the scale of life, and the living man is given dominion over all that lives on his domain; but why this difference should be a proof of immortality seems itself to need proof. Is it not a fact that some people seem to fail to recognize what really constitutes proof? We cordially agree with Mr. Frost that God has endowed mankind with what he calls "a spirit sense," and a desire to reach after God in adoration and worship, and we agree with him that so far as can be known no beast has ever shown these qualities, or the least degree of God-relationship; but even that fact is no proof of immortality possessed. What it does prove, and all that it proves is, that the Creator has given to man, what he has not given to the beast.

It cannot be denied on the other hand, that to the beasts have been bestowed faculties which defy the ingenuity of man to comprehend. Is that proof of the immortality of the beast? The logical enclusion of Mr. Frost's argument would affirm so! It is a strange paradox, adapted by nearly all writers of that stamp, that desire for a thing is proof positive of its present possession. If such were a fact, hunger and poverty would no longer be a spectre to many souls. The Director of the China Inland Mission is perfectly correct in using the neuter gender ("itself") when speaking of the spirit of man, for Scripture testifies throughout, that it is not the man (for the "man was formed of the dust of the ground"), but the spirit of man, that which is given and belongs to him while living.

SECTION FOUR

This section abounds with loose phrases and verbal gymnastics. Although Scripture references are given, one searches them in vain for the views advocated by the Director. He implies the personality of the spirit of man in the previous section, yet he opens the very next statement with the remark that Adam "died spiritually." Surely if death to Adam's body meant that Adam's body was dead, then if Adam "died spiritually," his spirit must have died! The account in Gen. 3:6-19 says nothing at all about Adam dying "spiritually," but verse 17 in the passage quoted, clearly defines the penalty to be natural, physical death; and Paul's statement in Heb. 9:27 is unquestionably an inspired corroboration of that fact: besides the words "surely die" occur in at least some twenty other passages. and every instance physical death is the death intended. That death, literal physical death, was the threatened penalty to Adam, no honest man can deny, and to state otherwise is not only playing fast and loose with plain grammatical language but gives to the infidel and the scoffer the very opportunity he desires. The solution of the difficulty that Adam did not die "in the day" is capable of several good answers; answers that will appeal to any unbiased mind as being reasonable and in accord with fact. The "grand difficulty" in the passage centres upon the little word "in." The Hebrew preposition "be" translated "in," is rendered 13 different ways, one of which is "after." When prepositions are translated we choose from the varied renderings the one which is thought to convey the true idea of the writer. If the translators had used the latter word ("after") it would have harmonized with the facts, and made the matter plain. Num. 28:26 is given as an instance where the Hebrew preposition "be" is rendered by both "in" and "after" in the same verse. The marginal rendering "dying thou shalt die," clearly implies that the natural mortal nature of Adam would be allowed to take its course, and that the opportunity to immortality would be taken from him. See Gen. 3:22, 24.

Presumably Mr. Frost's idea of "spiritual death" is borrowed from Paul's remark that a woman living in sin "is dead while she liveth." But Mr. Frost can hardly deny that Paul's famous saying was both figurative and prospective, and that such language can only be properly understood by its basic meaning: actual loss of life; death in its primary and natural sense; otherwise Scripture testimony regarding the second death is invalidated by Mr. Frost's assertion that Adam dies twice (first a spiritual, then a natural death) before his resurrection. Not only so, but Mr. Frost's assertion completely reverses the scriptural order, viz., first the natural, afterwards that which is spiritual (1 Cor. 15:46). Again the assertion that Adam died spiritually implies that he previously had spiritual life, else it would be impossible to die spiritually; yet Mr. Frost would be among the first to declare that the "saved" alone are possessed of spiritual life. Mr. Frost is so confused by his own ideas that he cannot escape from the veritable perplexity which he displays in his use of language regarding "spiritual life" and "spiritual nature."

His remark about Cain being "born spiritually dead," and others who had spiritual life in abundance is but a further illustration of his perplexity

When Mr. Frost says that "having or not having spiritual life does not increase or destroy physical life, is proof that spiritual life has no connection with continuance of being," he shows an amazing lack of discernment, for it must be evident to the least thoughtful that spiritual life cannot exist when one who possessed it does not continue in being. Moreover in Section 2, Mr. Frost has already stated that man converted and unconverted has both soul and spirit; yet in this section he tells us that Cain and others were "born spiritually dead." In spite of such an extraordinary statement we have elsewhere Mr. Frost's statement that although "born spiritually dead," Cain is held accountable and is suffering and will suffer through age long eternity the torments of an eternal hell. Well we say, "let us fall into the hands of God rather than the hands of man." The simple statements of the grand old Book are still the anchor of our faith and hope and stand out in bold contrast to the specious arguments of frail humanity.

SECTION FIVE

Mr. Frost says: "From first to last in Scripture divine judgment and punishment are held up as both a warning and a deterrant in respect to the committing of sin in the present life, it being declared that every sin will be punished (Ezek. 18:4; Rom. 5:12). and that the degree of punishment will be in proportion to the sin committed (Deut. 2:16; Matt. 10:15; 11:55)."

It would scarcely be believed that a writer who is contending for natural immortality and conscious everlasting suffering would quote Ezek. 18:4 and Rom. 5:12. The former passage tells us in no unmistakable language that the punishmnt of the soul (or person), who continues in sin in this present life, is death; and Rom. 5:12 says precisely the same thing differently expressed. Three references are given in support of his statement that Scripture declares the degree of punishment will be in proportion to the sin committed. Deut. 2:16 says, "the men of war were consumed and dead." Matt. 10:15 reminds us of the fate of the land of Sodom and Gomorrah, which were destroyed—the destruction of the people doubtless accompanied by much suffering before death overtook them. Matt. 11:55 is probably intended for 11:23 and 24. The reader must judge as to whether there is any obvious connection between Mr. Frost's statement and the references adduced, and whether they are consistnet with what Mr. Frost contends for.

The closing remarks of Section 5 are not worthy of a fair minded debater . Mr. Frost is well aware, very well aware, that Conditionalists who accept the Scriptures of truth, have never contended that there is "no life beyond the grave," nor have any of them ever essayed to assert the time allotted between the resurrection and judgment and the second death. To say that God would find it impossible to punish sins according to deeds done in the body if annihilation were true, is nothing more than a bold attempt to throw dust in the eyes of the reader. It depends entirely as to when the final death or destruction of the individual takes place. Mr. Frost knows that, and a careful reader cannot but be struck with the slippery wording of the remarks of the Director of the Inland China Mission. Paul truly and rightly, condemned the Epicureans, but Paul never once taught the God-dishonoring doctrine of eternal conscious suffering. He boldly declared that "those who obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power. Mr. Frost will require to alter the dictionary before he can annul such emphatic language.

SECTION SIX

This section is a most important part of the argument. In the beginning an attempt is made to take advantage of differences existing between various bodies of Conditionalists, though Mr. Frost must be aware of the fact that some of these very same differences occur in a greater or lesser degree among his own people. The Bible teaching, irrespective of what any class or person may say, is that "the dead know not anything" (Eccl. 9:5. 10).

Two questions are asked by Mr. Frost;

1st. If the soul* is to be annihilated*, why then is there a resurrection ?" No great acumen is required to see that there is an unbounded difference between raising a person to judgment and the second death, (which may in itself involve varied degrees of suffering), and raising a person from the dead (though Mr. Frost does not really believe they die at all) to judgment and everlasting torment! Why raise a person to endless suffering? The very thought is inhuman, and it is ungodlike and unscriptural; for we are told, "He will not always chide, neither will he keep his anger forever." The annals of heathenism cannot surpass in horror his awful teaching of endles sin and endless suffering, and it is surpassing strange that men and women of otherwise blameless lives actually seem to find pleasure in upholding such a doctrine.

2nd. And, "If there is a resurrection, how can an incorruptible and indestructible body—such as the resurrection body, as in the nature of the case, must be (1 Cor. 15:33)—afwards be corrupted and destroyed?" The teaching rendered in this question is not new: Rev. R. A. Torrey, D. D., publicly advocates it in the columns of "The Christian Herald," but in spite of that, one stands aghast, amazed and astonished at the awful daring and subtlety of such a question. It shows the length to which even a professing Christian can go when he is determined to uphold a given doctrine at any cost. The cost may be more than they count! The very chapter which Paul begins by "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel, the good news"—the very chapter where Paul says, "If Christ be not raised your faith is vain," these so-called teachers of the word apply to the wicked who have no faith, to those they themselves adjudge worthy of eternal suffering. That the wicked are raised with indestructible (for once they use the word in its natural sense) bodies, in order that they may be able to endure eternal torment, is that the good news? Is that the gospel? For shame that any man should so wilfully distort the word of the living God! They say (as a member of the same mission said in my own home), "The dead are raised incorruptible," applying that glorious promise to just and unjust alike! How any man dare apply that glorious chapter to any but the righteous is beyond comprehension! One sentence alone is sufficient to destroy, yea, to annihilate such a contention; for it is worthy of no other name. Can it be said of the unjust that they are "raised in glory?" Can it be said of them that they "bear the image of the heavenly?" Indignation is not unrighteous that rises up in strong and solemn protest against such blasphemous doctrine. Beaten at every turn, they seek to undermine the foundation chapter of the Christian hope. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will be a Father unto you"--and he has--that is my experience.

*We should say person.

*We should use the word destroyed as being the more scriptural term.

Regarding the last question in Secion 6, it is somewhat difficult to get the writer's meaning clearly, but once more Mr. Frost is compelled to use the word "destroy" in its dictionary meaning, though in the very next section strenuous efforts are made to the contrary. That the second death does destroy both body and soul cannot be denied in face of our Lord's statement in Matt. 10:28 Nothing "becomes" of the basic argument, for it remains true that the second death makes immortality impossible, for the obvious reason that no resurrection is predicated from it.

Judgment and Resurrection : Article No. Three

I FEEL THAT I owe the readers of The Restitution an apology for the long interval between this and the two articles which have preceded it on this subject; but circumstances have been such that my time has been too limited to do much writing of any kind. So please excuse this delay, and turn back and re-read the two former articles and you will get the connection. Jesus says: "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto (Greek, eis) a resurrection of life; and those that have done evil unto a resurrection of condemnation" (John 5:28, 29).

MEMORIAL GRAVES

(1) The word mnemeios translated graves is the plural of mneme, which is defined, "Remembrance, memory, record of a thing" (Liddell & Scott).

Then it is all that are in memorials that shall hear and come forth; not those who are in the grave, whom "thou (Jehovah, God) remembereth no more" (Psa. 88:5). Those coming forth are remembered by God either because of their goodness or their evil doings, and come forth unto life or condemnation.

RESURRECTION "UNTO"

(2) But when one comes into a thing or place, has he reached that place? Mortal resurrectionists must, to be consistent, answer no. Why? Because they contend that the dead, all that are to come forth, are mortal, and must be tried or judged before they reach either life or condemnation. The book makes it, "Those that have done good or those that have done vile." They come forth unto their predestined future condition on account of what they have done in the past from the time of their coming forth, and "come forth unto" (eis) their destined condition. Acts 2:38 taches that we must "repent and be baptized, . . . eis the remission of sins." Now if we comply with the conditions prescribed here what is the result? We have reached remission of course, and hence when "eis" is translated, it still brings us to the destined point of promise contained in the conditions prescribed.

But some one may take us to Col. 1:13 as per the Diaglott, and say here you get yourself into it; for the word "for" here is translated from "eis," and the kingdom is still future after a change is made for it; but when they do that they jump from the frying pan into the fire, because if God has here changed us for, in order that we may reach his kingdom, then it will not be necessary for a decisive judgment after resurrection for him to decide who he has changed, and hence if this text helps the mortal emergenists one way it kills him in another, and still leaves his theory unsupported. But the change for, at least in order to, and that makes it reach the point it points to, and does not point out new conditions not named in the text. Some scholars tell us that the Greek words for king and kingdom are interchangeable, and sometimes the one used for the other, and point out Dan. 7:17 as one of the instances where king is used for kingdom according to the Septuagint or Greek translation, and Mark 11:13; Matt. 3:2 as two examples on the other side.

Then the proper translation of Col. 1:13 may be: "Translated us into the king--his dear son;" and when we read so often of being in Christ the evidence is overwhelmingly in the favor of such translation. We are baptized into Christ; Jesus went into the city; some are to be cast into the lake of fire; some enter through the gates into the city; some enter into the kingdom; all of which is from the word "eis," and certainly they have reached those things when they have entered into them: and if such be the case, then when one comes forth eis the resurrection of life, he has reached resurrection, and that leaves no room for decisive judgment after he comes forth out of the ground.

"TO"

Again, "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life and some to shame and everlasting contempt" (Dan. 12:2). Here we will notice the word "to" They awake to something; the nxet verse uses the same word also "Them that turn many to righteousness." Two verses ahead of this we read, "And he shall come to his end."

Now when he comes to his end, if he has not reached it, when will he? and when one turns a person to righteousness, that person has reached that state; and when one awakes to everlasting life he has as much reached that as in the other two cases, and hence righteous people awake immortal, or Daniel was ignorant of the usage of his words, and made one word teach two or three different ideas in the same breath. They are asleep in the dust of the earth, and awake from that sleep to everlasting life, and that makes the immortalization take place with the awakening; for as soon as they are awake they have reached the life, or they would not be "to" it.

Again, will not the disobedient who awake be as much ashamed at the moment of their awakening as after that time, a day, or week, or year, and the "to" brings them to the shame and contempt without any interval, which is more proof that the awakening "to" brings the everlasting life right up to the moment of awakening. "He shall judge the living and dead at his appearing and his kingdom."

How judge the living? First kill and then judge them? No, no;, but judge them alive. When must he make the dead alive to judge them? If the dead are made alive to be judged then he will judge all living, and no dead; but that the righteous dead at least are judged before resurrection, is evident from the fact that they are deemed worthy of that resurrection, and the age to come (Luke 20:55) Worthiness here is what makes us worthy at the resurrection to eternal life, and if found in him, at death we die in him, and are already accounted blessed.

FAVORITE TEXTS EXAMINED

Of all texts used to prove that the dead come out of the ground for decisive judgment these are the most quoted; and it is thought by most mortal emergentists that they are the argument settlers and give good reasons why they should twist the sowing mentioned by Paul in 1 Cor. 15 to the coming out of the ground instead of going into it. But do they teach what is claimed for them? If so then Paul's logic is contradictory, or we must twist it as mortal emergentists do. But let us hear the texts, and see what is the exact statements contained in them.

(1) "But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall stand before the judgment seat of Christ. As it is written, as I live saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God" (Rom. 14:10-12).

The tenth and twelfth verses here quoted are used by mortal emergentists to prove that judgment must follow resurrection; while the eleventh is used by universal resurrectionists as proof that all mankind must be brought to judgment in the future; and it seems that if the texts teach a judgment after resurrection the universal resurrectionists have the better of the argument; for Paul first says we (Christians) shall stand before the judgment seat of Christ, and then gives us a reason why such is to be, and that is because 'every knee shall bow to God, and every tongue shall confess to him." The conclusion then is, "so that every one of us shall give account of himself to God." If the reason is not contained in verse eleven, then I can see no reason why it is introduced, and why the conclusion is reached so quickly after it is quoted. But the question comes up: will every knee and tongue be revived that it may have the opportunity to literally bow, and confess to God? If so, then we have proof that we (Christians) also will have to stand before him. On the other hand, if the world is not in the futre to pass decisive judgment on, then the proof is to the contrary for the church; for the one is used to prove the other shall stand before the judgment seat. Now we know that at least most mortal emergentists believe with us that only the enlightened of mankind are amenable to future judgment of any kind, and hence must place the unenlightened in the eternal sleep spoken of in Jer. 51:57. But if all are to be awakened, as a small number of mortal emegentists contend, then Jeremiah states falsely concerning some; and either horn of the dilemma spoils the theory of its advocates. Then, when shall we all stand before the judgment seat of Christ? If all are to stand there, and a part are destroyed never to be awakened before the judgment that is to take place at the second advent, then others can also have decisive judgment passed upon them before the day of executive judgment.

We have seen in previous articles how clearly the Scriptures teach that men's destinies are sealed in the present life, and Peter declares, "The time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God; and if it first begins with us, where shall the ungodly and sinner appear?" If judgment began at God's house in the apostolic age, and the apostles stood up, did they not stand before the judgment seat of Christ? Again, if we must be raised that our destiny be decided, then the ignorant also must, for the moment in which God decides a certain class are not responsible he decides another class is responsible; and the reason of their responsibility is because, they are enlightened, and the others are not. But this same Paul says, "The wrath of God is revealed (not must be in the future, but is now revealed) from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness" (Rom. 1:18).

If it is true, as this Scripture states, then God's wrath is revealed against those who hold the truth in unrighteousness, then their destiny is sealed now, and a future decisive judgment would be unnecessary. Again, the wrath of God could not be revealed against a class of people, before said people, or at least enough of said people were known to exist, that there were such people; for if God foreknew before it was decided that such class would exist, then the decision would have been made before their creation, and instaed of a future judgment we would have one long since past. We conclude then that decisive judgment is now going on, and when our probation here is ended God sends us into the grave as one who is termed "dead in Christ," and will awaken us as such; while those not in Christ whom the wrath of God is revealed, will not be awakened as the other class. We must abide in Christ according to his own statement, which proves we can sin ourselves out of him, and the dead who die in the Lord are called "blessed," which proves that future judgment is not needed to decide who are the blessed.

Again, we are told that when Jesus comes, "There shall be two in the field: the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left" (Matt. 24:40, 41). Who will be those taken—good and bad alike and together? Let Jesus answer: "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other" (Matt. 24:31). True, those mentioned in the two verses first quoted are living when he comes but his elect not only includes the living saints but the dead ones as well; and they are gathered unto him by the angels. That fact alone proves that there is not to be a sorting out of the disobedient after they have met Christ. It is not possible to deceive the elect, and hence, no one of the elect that is gathered will be holders of God's truth in unrighteousness. Thus it is conclusive that the gathered are the righteous, and not a mixed multitude. This agrees with Paul's statement: "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not go before them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout (the same sounding of a trumpet as Jesus mentioned at the gathering of the elect), with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so (just as we meet him) shall we ever be with the Lord"

THE JUDGMENT SEAT OF CHRIST

Our next text reads, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things in body, according to that he hath done." The Greek "phaneree" is defined "to make manifest, to make known or famous; pass., to become so" (Liddell & Scott).

The same word is used in the next verse (11) and translated twice, "made manifest." One can be made manifest before the judgment seat of Christ, and yet not personally be present there. Jesus says, "The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son" (John 5:22).

This is positive proof that the Son is judge. But when? "As I hear I judge; and my judment is just" (John 5:30). This shows by the words "my judgment is," that it is now going on, and hence we need not place all judgment in the future. Our text declares that all are made manifest at Christ's judgment seat that we may receive according to that which we have done whether good or bad. If we have done good what do we get? "The resurrection of life" (Jesus; if we have done evil, what? "The resurrection of condemnation," John 5:29). Then it is clear that the being made manifest is before resurrection.

GIVING ACCOUNT

(3) Another Gibralter text with mortal emergentists is this: "But I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment" (Matt. 12:36). If we must be brought face to face with Christ, and give a verbal account of every idle word we have ever uttered, there must be time allowed for such to take place. Now according to Revelation there are 144,000 sealed from the tribes of Israel. Allowing only the same number from the Gentiles we would have 288,000 righteous persons that must give account of every idle word ever spoken by them. Then we have the apostates, and enlightened rejectors. Allowing half as many of them as the saved we would have another 144,000 or a total of 432,000 to be judged. Now who could give account of every idle word he has ever spoken in ten minutes? Not many, but we will make that the time for each. Then we find we have 4,320,000 minutes it would take to get an account from this number of people. There are 1440 minutes in a day, and 4,320,000 divided by 1440 would give us 3,000 days; 3,000 divided by 365, the number of days in a year, will make eight years and eighty days for judging the small number we have allowed, which we hope is much too small; and we know the ten minutes would not begin to be enough time. But this would make the day of judgment pretty long for mortals to live "standing," or gathered at one place. There would have to be both food and water there, or the resurrected mortals might die again. But Paul says, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." If this is true, and both dead and living are judged during the eight years we have allowed, then the change cannot take place before the judgment is ended. But the change is to come at the sounding of the last trumpet; "for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shal be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." When does the trumpet sound—after the gathering of the saints or before? Jesus answers: "Then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the one end of heaven to the other" (Matt. 24:30, 31). This shows that the angels are sent to gather the elect with the sounding of the trumpet, and hence proves what Paul states, "the trumpet shall sound and the dead shal be raised incorruptible." "We shall all be changed." When? "In the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." How are the dead to be raised at the last trumpet? "The trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible." Then we have the trumpet sounding, and the angels sent forth to gather the elect, the living saints changed, and the dead raised incorruptible. The living are changed "in a moment" of time, in "the twinkling of an eye.' The angels could not gather the dead saints before they are raised; and as they are gathered at the sounding of the trumpet, and while Christ is coming toward the earth, we conclude that they are not gatherd before judged, and the only judgment that then takes place is executive, or the carrying out of decisive judgment. The living and dead in Christ are caught away together to meet Christ, and hence when the trumpet sounds, in the twinkling of an eye, both the living and dead saints are made incorruptible, and not some time after that.

But some have contended that the saints will not meet Christ in the literal clouds, in the air above the earth, and in a very valuable work otherwise, a certain writer, now dead, gives a complete lecture on meeting Christ in the air. We find that when he went away "a cloud received him out of their sight." Was it a literal cloud? If not, why not? There is no reason to suppose otherwise. The angels declared, "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1:9, 10). Both Paul and Jesus are in agreement with the statement of the angels (Matt. 24:36; 1 Thess. 4:17), and in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established. So then there can here be no dispute concerning where the saints met Jesus, and the when is at the sounding of the trumpet, which is going on while the angels are gathering the elect; the time also that the dead are raised incorruptible, and the living changed—all of which takes place in a very short period of time, "the twinkling of an eye." No time to decide destinies here.

But I can almost hear one asking, "What about your text then?" We answer in the words of the Diaglott, "Men shall be responsible in the day of judgment." With this translation all is clear; for we are responsible for all our acts to God.

There is dew in one flower and not in another, because one opens its cup and takes it in, while the other closes itself, and the drops run off. God rains his goodness and mercy as widespread as the dew, and if we lack them, it is because we will not open our hearts to receive them.

God's Word Extoled

DEAR SISTERS:

TO UNDERSTAND God's word we must search the Scriptures with an honest and contrite heart, believing we shall find, so that we may let our light shine to attract those who do not believe.

God assured Daniel from the first day that he set his heart to understand, his words were heard (Dan. 10:12). You see in that way we are recompensed for our trouble.

We read that none of the wicked shall understand, because they do not love God, and will not listen to the truth; therefore they refuse to come to the light for moral rather than an intellectual cause. On the other hand, the wise shall understand, because they love God (2 Thess. 2:10).

Dear sisters, we are told to ponder the word diligently and prayerfully. The Psalmist got his understanding and wisdom from God's word. God gives wisdom, but "through thy precepts we get understanding" in exactly the same way Daniel was made wise (Dan. 10:12). Christ imparted understanding to people by giving them instruction (Matt. 15:10). He was angry when his disciples did not understand what he said (Matt. 15:16). So we must use the means to enlighten our minds.

We read that God will enlighten our eyes, and that we will be made wise (Psa. 19:7, 8). Daniel was not satisfied with the knowledge he got; he went to school three years to obtain more. I believe that is our errand here this evening to learn more of God's word, and not to be ashamed to speak the truth wherever we go. If we be ashamed of Christ, he tells us, he will be ashamed of us at his coming. May God help us to be ready for that coming.

Obituary

Death in Adam; Life in Christ

ROSE MARIE ADAMS was born Dec. 24th, 1901, died Oct 5th, 1921, aged nineteen years, nine months, and ten days. She was united in marriage to Robt. E. Anderson, Dec. 28th, 1920. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband and infant son, three sisters, one brother and mother. She with her mother, husband, and three more were baptized by the writer Feb. 24, 1918. She graduated from the Union High School May, 1920 class.

The funeral took place from the Estel undertaking parlors of Marshalltown. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer to a large audience composed of relations and friends. May God bless the bereaved husband and mother. Truly the church has lost one of its most valuable members. The boys of her class were the pall bearers, and the girls acted as flower girls. She was laid to rest in the Dillon Cemetery to await the summons of the Master.

Sleep on, dear sister; till we meet,
In God's own time at eJsus' feet;
We miss you sore, but in patience long
To greet you soon with the angelic throng.

Editorial

A Monthly Magazine

WE ARE glad that the management of "The Restitution" have decided to make the paper a monthly rather than a weekly visitor. We believe it is a step in the right direction that will greatly enhance the literary value of our paper. It means that we have taken The Restitution out of the newspaper class into a position in which it can make a real contribution to the truth's literature.

In the complex life which the majority of us lead, not as a matter of choice, but by compulsion; for modern life is becoming more kaleidoscopic, and filled with a multitude of details that tax our energies and our time to the very limit, the weekly paper is too often thrown aside with a mere glance over its contents.

If there is an article there that appeals to the reader he will perhaps set it aside and say I will read that the first opportunity I have: but before he gets to it another paper has arrived, and his attention is diverted to the new issue and before he is aware of it he is treating his weekly paper, which has meant so much labor and thought on the part of its producers, as he does his daily newspaper. With the monthly magazine on his table for thirty days he takes it up from time to time until he has completed the reading of its contents. One of the greatest problems of writers, teachers, editors, and publishers today is to get the thoughts, ideas, facts, etc., which they wish to present to their readers, to them in such form and volume as will be acceptable to their readers; and what is more to the point, within the limits of their time and mental energy. The surest cure, the most positive remedy for a terrible disease, is made worthless if given in doses that are impossible for the patient to take. Let our contributors take note of this and send us articles that are carefully written and brief. Let us have the substance, the meat of the subject, boiled down to digestable proportion. Remember that you are writing for busy men and women who have but little time left for reading after attending to the complexities which modern life forces upon them. Out of this limited time there comes first the demand for the word of God; it must have first place in our reading program. We hope no brother or sister will neglect the daily, methodical reading of the Word. The time that is left is, generally speaking, too short for long-winded articles. If in the nature of it an article must be long, let us divide into such short natural divisions that it can be read section by section intermittently. The Editor is determined from now on to exercise a more rigid censorship over articles with the above requirements in mind. Let us remeber that we are the servants of our readers, therefore let us give much time and thought to the dishes we serve that they not only may be palatable, but digestable and nourishing, a real contribution towards their spiritual growth and development. We ask the co-operation of our writers in this matter.

Report for September

Sermons	2
Money received	$41.90
Baptized	5
Expense	$ .78

THE MONTH of September was nearly all taken up in getting ready for the year's work. This year we had a double preparation: we had decided to co-operate in the general assembly at Waterloo, Ia., so other things were set aside to make way for my attending that meeting.

I believe the great trouble with all organizations has been that when error crept in they were not brave enough to weed it out, but compromised. This leads to more error, and finally to disruption of the organization. This fact is not only taught in the Scriptures but by our physical bodies. A defection in one body, if let go, will ultimately destroy the body. The question is, have we been strong enough and true enough to weed out error, and keep the body pure, or have we showed our weakness by allowing any thing to go unheeded, fearing to apply the rules of Scripture for fear of hurting someone's feelings? One thing that looks hopeful, when a member becomes unruly, that instead of it becoming a matter of gossip, it can be dealt with according to Scripture; this is some progress. Jesus condemned wrong, wherever he found it, and we are all taught to do the same thing. In my preaching I try to show people their error, and prove to them that they will be lost, unless they abandon it, and replace it with truth . I find in my experience that people are working for some way to justify themselves in remaining in error; they will often hang on to the last thread in order to remain with their false systems. Can we be true to God and ourselves, leaving them any hope so long as they remain in error? My answer is no; and when I get through with them, if they have any such hope, they will have to manufacture it. In this way only do I leave people with a clear conscience.

One of the main things is to prove to people that we really believe what we teach, and that it is our love for them that prompts us in urging them to believe it. One thing we should make people see is that it adds nothing to us, so far as our hope of the kingdom is concerned; the benefit is all for them.

In the beginning of the year's work, we wonder where we will go, and who will accept the truth. We leave it all with the Lord, and stand ready to go where he calls, knowing he will not send us where he has no people. Our only fears shall be, are we doing our part? We will have to give an account of our stewardship before very long, and will we all hear, "well done?"

Why Was Timothy Circumcised?

THERE HAS been more or less controversy among Bible writers over this act, and but little satisfactory knowledge has been gained by the ordinary Bible student. We quote the following Scripture: "Him would Paul have to go forth with him, and took and circumcised him, because of the Jews in those quarters: for they knew all, that his father was a Greek" (Acts 16:3).

The inference from the above is that Paul did it to please the Jews in those parts. If so, Paul had no scriptural reason but did it for policy sake.

To the Corinthian church Paul writes: "I am made all things, to all men, that I might by all means save some" (1 Cor. 9:22). I understand this to mean that he would meet the Jew as under the law and the Gentile as an alien and worshipper of idols. At all times he shunned not to preach the gospel. In the case of Timothy he would not be received as a faithful Jew because of the neglect of circumcision. In this condition he could not be considered as a participant of the blessings coming through Chrst, the seed of Abraham (Gal. 3:16). This requires that we examine the covenant made with Abraham regarding his seed as recorded in Gen. 17th chapter. This must be regarded as one of the most important covenants made because of its general application. The covenant is greatly enlarged, making Abraham the father of many nations. Previous to this he was but the father of a family.

There is another feature in this covenant that must be considered, and that is, the rite of circumcision. It necessitated the shedding of human blood, whereas all previous covenants had been confirmed by the shedding of animal blood. The covenant of circumcision is an everlasing covenant, and the requirement that every male child that is not circumcised shall be cut off from his people. This excludes Timothy from being a participant in the above covenant. Previously all covenants had been confirmed by the shedding of blood. This covenant required a sign to be affixed as a seal to confer righteousness on the one circumcised. It must be remembered that this rite antedates the law and is important. Paul writes to the Roman church: "He (Abraham) received the sign of circumcision as a seal of the righteousnss of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised." In the case of Timothy he must be considered unrighteous because of his uncircumcision. Abrahm was counted righteous because of his obedience to Jehovah's commandments. In order to extend and confirm to all generations, the seal must be affixed. The importance of fixing a seal on all legal documents has been recognized by all peo- formed the king's business. We know ples. Joseph was given the king's ring on which was the sign of his royalty. Through this Joseph performed the king's fusiness. We know that all legal documents are legalized by a sign affixed to the seal. All faithful Jews must bear in their bodies the circumcision made with hands, and in their minds the circumcision not made with hands, when Paul states to be baptism. The former is the anti typical of the latter. Baptism is a form, a model of doctrine which must be obeyed as it was delivered and is exemplified through the baptism of Christ.

The above, we think, relieves the apostle from circumcising his convert to please the Jews. As an uncircumcised Jew he was not a fit subject for baptism into the name of Christ. He was an alien to the commonwealth of Israel and a stranger from the covenants of promise. In the conference held at Jerusalem the Gentile was relieved from the yoke of circumcision but was to abstain from pollutions of idols and from fornications, and from things strangled and from blood. We have written at length on this subject that we might clarify it. If others have a clearer reason we will gladly consider it. The above has been written in the sipirit of the Master.

Two Horned Beast Roman

PROTESTANT EXPOSITORS of prophecy have generally agreed that the lamb-like beast of Rev. 13:11-18 represents the papacy. Clarke says: "This beast is the spiritual Latin empire, or in other words, the Romish hierarchy." Scott says, "It was, therefore, the emblem of the Roman hierarchy." The Eclectic Commentary says: "The generality of interpreters confine this second beast to the papal power." Joseph Benson says: "The beast with ten crowned horns is the Roman empire, as divided into ten kingdoms, the beast with two horns like a lamb is the Roman hierarchy, or body of the clergy, regular and secular." The American Tract Society, Bishop Newton, Albert Barnes, and all other representative men of Protentantism are in unanimous agreement on the meaning and application of this prophecy.

The Seventh-day Adventists alone deny the Roman nature of the beast, and U. Smith in "Thoughts on Revelation" devotes over one hundred pages to expound the two horned beast and force it into an application to the United States. Adventists are noted for their mistakes on prophecy. The reader is warned against hastily accepting any doctrine which they may advance. Efforts to make the lamb-like beast fit the United States are labored; the arguments are strained, far-fetched, and uncertain. But the proofs that the beast with two horns is the papacy are brief, clear, and convincing.

From Rev. 11:19 to Rev. 14:5 is a protracted prophecy reaching from the first to the second advent of Christ, the dragon, the leopard beast, and the lamb-like beast occupying the whole interval. The dragon (Rev. 12:17) is the pagan Roman Empire, as all agree, the Adventists themselves concurring. The dragon had "seven heads and ten horns" (vs. 3). This is succeeded by the leopard beast with "seven heads and ten horns" (Rev. 13:1-10). Here we have the same Roman Empire, the same ten kingdoms of divided Europe. The only change is a religious one, from pagan to Catholic. "The beast here described," says Adam Clark, commenting on Rev. 13:1, "is the Latin Empire, which supported the Romish or Latin church." The political power of the the kingdoms after professing Christianity. That the ten horned beast is not the papacy nor the Catholic church is made plain in Rev. 17:1-5. The same beast there is introduced to our attention with a woman riding on it and controlling it. The beast is the civil power, the woman the apostate church. Elder Smith admits this, saying, "We here have the woman, the church, seated upon a scarlet colored beast, the civil power, by which she is upheld and which she controls and guides to her ends as a rider controls a horse." The leopard beast is the civil power. What it is in Rev. 17 is what it is in Rev. 13. The papacy did not have ten horns and seven heads, but political Rome did.

To help the reader see clearly that the lamb-like beast of Rev. 13 is not the United States, but the ecclesiastical or spiritual power of Rome, we point to the following self-evident facts:

1. Rev. 17 where the woman (the church) is distinct from the ten-horned leopard beast and rules over it, shows that the beast is not the papacy.

2. Precisely so, the lamb-like beast of Rev. 13 rules through the power of the leopard beast.

3. Whatever the woman is in Rev. 17, that is what the lamb-like beast is in Rev. 13. Both represent the papal power of Rome.

If any doubts still lurk in the reader's mind as to the identity of the woman and the lamb-like beast, note the similarity of the two: a woman in one place, a lamb in the other, both having the appearance of gentleness, innocence, and purity. The church is represented by a pure woman (2 Cor. 11:2), also by lambs (John 21:15); false teachers of religion are represented by prostitute women (Rev. 2:18-23), also by beasts clothed like sheep (Matt. 7:15). The woman and the beast work together (Rev. 17) · the lamb-like beast and the leopard beast also work together (Rev. 13). The woman is drunk with the blood of the saints (Rev. 17); the lamb-like beast also causes the saints to be killed (Rev. 13:5). The woman is burnt with fire (Rev. 18:8): the lamb-like beast the same (Rev. 19:20). The woman sits upon the beast, guiding and controlling it (Rev. 17:3); so the lamb-like beast "exerciseth all the power of the first beast" (Rev. 13:12). Mark, it does not exercise a similar power, as the beast, but it uses the power of the beast itself, exactly as the woman did. He does not personally kill anyone, but "causes them to be killed" (Rev. 13:15). This exactly fits the papacy. It ruled over the kings of the earth (Rev. 17:18) and "caused" heretics to be put to death by the political power. "He exerciseth (useth) all the power of the first beast.'"

The Seventh-day Adventists claim that the leopard beast in Rev. 13 is the papacy because it does the work of the little horn in Dan. 7, which is agreed by all to be the papacy; but they ignore the fact that the leopard beast does all its work as directed by the woman (the church) in Rev. 17, and the lamb-like beast in Rev. 13.

Finally, note the inseparable connection between the leopard beast and the two horned beast, the Roman civil government and the papacy:

1. The lamb-like beast controls all the power of the first beast (vs. 12).

2. He does this "before" (in the presence of) the beast (vss. 12, 14). Impossible unless both occupy the same territory.

3. He causes men to worship the beast (vs. 12).

4. He causes men to make an image to the beast (vs. 14).

5. He causes men to receive the mark of the beast (vss. 16, 17).

6. The two beasts are working together when Christ comes (vss. 19, 20).

7. Together they go into the fire (vs. 20). These two beast co-operate together in all their work. All know that this is exactly what the Catholic church and the Catholic civil powers of Europe have done for ages. The United States has never so co-operated with the papacy.

INTRODUCTORY

AS WILL be noticed by the heading the Young People's Page is now under the direction of the Young People's Society. It is our desire and aim to make this page all that its name implies a page by young people for young people. With this purpose in view, we ask our young people for their whole-hearted co-operation in all things pertaining to this page. After all, it is the little things that count. A little word cheerfully given is often the means of doing much good; and a little deed kindly done is oft the beginning of big things.

In our relation to God, always can we learn a lesson from the Master. He took upon himself the form of a servant, and that service it was that he rendered. He was a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things he sufferd. No man was ever set truly free as Jesus, and yet no man was so subservient to the will of the Father. He was the unique originality of absolute obedience.

And so should it be with us. We are here to do the Father's will. It is ours to walk in subservience to the mind of God, even as Jesus did. With Christ's example as a beacon-light before us, let us then bend all our efforts to be obedient to God's will, to say and do those things that pertain to his work; for no matter how few the words, and how small the deed, he who marks even the sparow's fall, will not let them go by unheeded.

GLEANINGS

Knowledge advances by steps and not by leaps.

With words as with sunbeams, the more they are condensed, the deeper they burn.

To deny as Peter did, is bad; but not to weep bitterly as he did, when we have denied, is worse.

If any little word of mine
  May make a life the brighter,
If any little song of mine
  May make a heart the lighter;
God help me speak the little word,
  And take my bit of singing,
And drop it in some lonely vale,
  To set the echoes ringing.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

We have arranged a series of questions, beginning with this issue, and we urge all our young people to take part. At the end of the sixth set, the Young People's Society will award a first and second prize to those contestants sending in the most correct answers to the entire sixty questions. Kindly send in your answers after each set, not later than fifteenth of the month. The answers to each set will be published in the following issue.

First Set of Questions

1. In how many of the gospels do we read of the healing of the man with the whithered hand?

2. Was it the right or left hand that was withered?

3. Name a man in Old Testament times whose hand was withered as a punishment?

4. Mention two different women healed by Jesus on the Sabbath?

5. Where in Luke do we read of some disciples fishing all night?

6. In Mark where do we read of a leper coming to Jesus to be cured?

7. Give the name of anyone in Old Testament times who was cured of this disease.

8. Give the name of a king who, for his sin, was smitten with leprosy.

9. Which of the disciples once wished the Samaritans to be destroyed?

10. Name two miracles connected with Cana.

It is, of course, understood that all the work in looking up the answers must be done by the contestants themselves; also that a reference must be given with each answer.

Misguided Sincerity

IT IS often said it is no matter what a man believes if he is only sincere. This is true of all minor truths, and false of all truths whose nature it is to fashion a man's life. It will make no difference in a man's harvest whether he think turnips have more saccharine matter than potatoes—whether corn is better than wheat. But let the man sincerely believe that seed planted without plowing is as good as with, that January is as favorable for seed sowing as April, and that cockle seed will produce as good a harvest as wheat, and will it make no difference? A child might as well think he could reverse that ponderous marine engine which, night and day, in calm and storm, plough its way across the deep, by sincerely taking hold of the paddle-wheel, as a man might think he could reverse the action of the elements of God's moral government through a misguided sincerity. They will roll over such an one and whelm him in endless ruin.

Bible Lessons On First Principles

Lesson II: The Abrahamic and Davidian Covenants

ADAMIC CONDITIONS which obtained before sin, and which were lost by the sin of the first Adam, are to be restored in the righteousness of the second Adam, the Lord Jesus Christ (Gen. 1:26-28; Psa. 8:3-9; Gen. 3:17-19,22-24; Heb. 2:6-9; Psa. 2:8; 72:8; Matt. 18:11; Isa. 51:3; 1 Cor. 3:21-23; Micah 4:3,7,8; Matt. 25:34).

II. The Abrahamic Covenant

The Adamic inheritance was formally pledged by God to the righteous in the Abrahamic covenant in which he swore to Abraham concerning

(a) The Inheritance Promised: the earth with eternal life to enjoy it forever (Gen. 12:7; 15:7,18; 24:7; 48:3,4; Acts 7:4; Gen. 28:13; 17:8; Rom. 4:13; Zech. 9:10; Psa. 2:8; Matt. 5:5);

(b) The Time of Possession: at the resurrection of the dead (John 1:11; Heb. 11:17,19,22; Ezek. 37:1-14; Dan. 12:2,13; Gen. 28:13: Ex. 3:6; Luke 20:37; Acts 26:6-8);

(c) And the Heirs of Promise: Christ and those who are Christ's, called "Abraham's seed" (Heb. 11:9; Rom. 8:17; Matt. 1:1; Gal. 3:16; Gen. 13:15; 17:8; Gal. 3:7,9, 27-29; Acts 7:5; John 1:11).

III. The Davidian Covenant

God has supplemented the Abrahamic covenant by another which he made with David in which he promised him a son, house, nation, throne, and kingdom forever. Temporarily suspended on account of Israel's sins, his kingdom and throne will be restored at Christ's second advent and be possessed by Christ and his immortalized brethren in the land bequeathed to them in the Abrahamic covenant (2 Sam. 7:12-16,19; 23:5; Heb. 1:5; Psa. 89:32,39; Ezek. 21:25-27; Luke 1:32,33; Isa. 55:3).

Synthetic Remarks

I. THE ADAMIC INHERITANCE

BY "LOOKING away to the leader and perfecter of our faith, Jesus" (Heb. 12:2, Emphatic Diaglott), we obtain an infallible guide in the exposition of the Scriptures. Of him it is testified: "Beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself" (Luke 24:27). An author's name is often used for his writings; as, "Have you read Mark Twain?" "Moses and the prophets" means what is "written in the law of Moses and in the prophets" (Luke 24:44). By "Moses," then, we understand "his writings" (John 5:45-47); by "the law," what is "written in the law" (Luke 10:26); and by "the prophets," their written testimony. Therefore, when we give ear to what Moses and the prophets have "written" we are said to "hear them" (Luke 16:29). Now, Moses wrote Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy; the rest of the Old Testament was written by "the prophets." In expounding "the things concerning himself" in these Scriptures, Christ began "at Moses" (Genesis), according to the record, and then subsequently took up "the prophets" in the course of his exposition. In this lesson we shall follow hard after him, and let his right hand lead and uphold us all the way (Psa. 63:8).

"Beginning at Moses" we find some interesting facts about the Adamic inheritance both before and after sin. Man originally was made upright (Eccl. 7:29), in God's image (Gen. 1:26), crowned with kingly honor and glory, and was but "little lower than the angels" (Psa. 8:5). He was God's vicegerent on earth, and enjoyed universal sovereignty. "In that he put all things in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him" (Heb. 2:8). But "by man sin entered into the world, and death by sin" (Rom. 5:12). By sin the first Adam lost the garden of Eden, his crown, the earth, his dominion over the earth, and his life. Primeval conditions passed away; the earth, cursed for man's sake, began to produce thorns and thistles, and man was driven away from the tree of life into a blighted inheritance, death-doomed and lost (Gen. 3:19, 22-24). He was now subjected to vanity, but "in hope" (Rom. 8:20). Hope was the only star that shone in the darkness and disaster and ruin which sin had wrought. The seed of the woman was promised who would crush the head of the serpent and destroy both the devil and "the works of the devil" (Gen. 3:15; Heb. 2:14; 1 John 3:8). He is called the second man and the last Adam (1 Cor. 15:47, 45), because it is his mission to save, by righteousness, that which had been lost by sin (Matt. 18:11). True, we do not now see all things placed under him; no, not "yet;" but we see him "crowned with glory and honor" for that very purpose; and when "the world to come" arrives (Heb. 2:9, 5) he will have "the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession" (Psa. 2:8). "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth (Psa. 72:8; Zech. 9:10). Where thorns and thistles now blight the earth, because it was cursed for man's sake (Gen. 3:19), there will grow fir and myrtle trees "for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off" (Isa. 55:13). Where waste places, wildernesses, and deserts now despoil it of its beauty and utility, there shall the Lord "comfort her waste places; and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody" (Isa. 51:3). The "whole earth" shall be filled with God's glory (Psa. 72:19), and a knowledge of that glory shall fill the earth like the waters cover the sea (Num. 14:21; Hab. 2:14). "The first dominion, the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem" when the Lord reigns there (Micah 4:7, 8). For this glorious work of restitution Jesus is already "crowned," and when the Father "shall send Jesus Christ" back to the earth from the heavens which now retain him, "the times of refreshing" (Greek, inbreathing) and "the times of restitution" will begin (Acts 3: 19-21). He will "come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, and then sit on the throne of his glory" (Matt. 25:31). Then he will say to those whom he approves: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world" (vs. 34). There was no "dominion" before Adam; therefore "the first dominion" restored must be Adamic; there was no "kingdom" anterior to Adam; therefore "the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world," which the saints are to "inherit" when Christ returns, can be none other than the Adamic. The Adamic inheritance, then, including the earth and man's sovereignty on the earth, belongs to Christ; and if we become Christ's we shall share with him this rich patrimony: "All things are yours; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come—all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's" (1 Cor. 3: 21-23).

II. THE ABRAHAMIC COVENANT

The conclusion which we have reached, that Christ will restore the Adamic inheritance and possess it jointly with his people, is confirmed in the Abrahamic covenant. In this covenant God has "given the earth to the children of men" in a most solemn and formal manner (Psa. 115:16). Consider

(a) The Inheritance Promised

The promise in this covenant guarantees "land". Erets, the original word, means "land, earth country." It is used nearly two hundred times in the book of Genesis. The demonstrative pronoun "this," five times used in conjunction with "land," ought to settle the matter and make assurance doubly sure. "To give thee this land;" "This land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates" (Gen. 12:7; 15:17, 18; 24:7; 48:3, 4). Did any one ever hear of land and rivers in the sky? To the wicked Jews Stephen said, "This land wherein ye now dwell" (Acts 7: 4). To Jacob it was described as "the land whereon thou liest": and to Abraham as "the land wherein thou art a stranger" (Gen. 28:13; 17:8). In Heb. 11:8 we are told that Abraham actually went "into the place (eis ton topon) which he should after receive for an inheritance." Heaven was not "the place" into which he entered and sojourned as a stranger. The promise made him "heir of the world" (Rom. 4:13). The covenant says not one word about heaven, hades, "the spirit land," or conscious soul survival; but it does promise "the land," "the world," and "the earth" (Matt. 5:5; Psa. 37).

And observe, the righteous are to "inherit the land forever" (Isa. 60:21; Gen. 13:15). They will "inherit substance" (Prov. 8:21) with life forever. Their inheritance is an "eternal inheritance" (Heb. 9:15), and their possession an "everlasting possession" (Gen. 17:8). If the future life is endless the possession of the land is endless also, for the same words, "forever" and "everlasting," describe them both. Legally a man can only possess an estate while he lives; a dead man cannot hold property. To possess an estate "forever" requires life forever, an "everlasting possession" of the earth cannot be held without everlasting life. Therefore the Abrahamic covenant guarantees "the heirs of promise" (Heb. 6:17) two things: first, an everlasting possession of the earth; and second, eternal life that it may be possessed and enjoyed forever. Life is an indispensable adjunct to the possession of property. Temporal life is requisite to temporal possession; everlasting life to everlasting possession. In the Bible God is uniformly represented as having promised eternal life in Adamic times and subsequently in the Abrahamic covenant. To illustrate: God's kingdom is said to "stand forever" (Dan. 2:44), and to have "no end" (Luke 1:33). Now flesh and blood cannot "inherit" such a kingdom (1 Cor. 15:50), unless changed from mortality to immortality (vs. 54). Inheriting the kingdom of God invariably means to inherit eternal life (Matt. 25:34; 19:29); to "enter into life" and to "enter into the kingdom" is exactly the same thing (Mark 9:45, 47). And since this kingdom was "prepared from the foundation of the world" (Matt. 25:34), eternal life was there and then promised. "The times of restitution" (inbreathing) to be introduced at Christ's second coming have been spoken of by "all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken" (Acts 3:19, 24); yes, and farther back in antiquity still: "The times of restitution which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (vs. 21; Luke 1:70). Hence Paul wrote: "He hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began" (2 Tim 1:9). The "grace" here mentioned was given to man in Gen. 3:15 in the promise that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head, and in Gen. 22:18, "In thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed." In the promise of the earth for an everlasting possession and a kingdom from the foundation of the world, Paul found the promise of eternal life; he saw that the promise pledged deliverance from death and the grave and a "reign in life by one, Jesus Christ" (Rom. 5:17). In giving the date when "the grace," whereby God "made us heirs according to the hope of eternal life" (Titus 3:7) was promised, he says: "In hope of eternal life, which God, who cannot lie, promised before the world began" (Titus 1:2). Macknight renders this, "Before the times of the ages," referring to "the ages" or jubilees of the Mosaic law, the method of computing time among the Hebrews. "Before" (prior to these), God "promised eternal life." His "purpose and grace" both required this; for if the saints inherit "the everlasting kingdom" (2 Peter 1:11), they must themselves be everlasting, and if they dwell on earth "forevermore" (Psa. 37:27), they must live "forevermore" (Rev. 1:18).

Not Chosen

ONLY one the sons of Jesse were presented to the Lord as candidates, not only for enduring kingship over Israel, but for the far greater honor of becoming the ancestor of the promised Messiah of their race and of the world.

But each time the verdict was "Neither hath the Lord chosen this." The beauty of Eliab's face, and the length of his stature, counted as nothing with the All-seeing One, he saw something wrong in the thoughts and intents of Eliabs' heart that made him unfit to rule, unfit to become the father of the kings of the coming ages. And so it was with Abinadab and Shammah and with Jesse's three other sons. There was but one other, the youngest of the eight, rosy and fair of face, but he was away from home caring for his father's sheep. "And Samuel said to Jesse, send and fetch him." And the Lord said, Arise, and anoint him, for this is the one." The shepherd of sheep was alone fit to shepherd a people.

Our plans and purposes are dealt with by the Lord, just as he dealt with the sons of Jesse. They pass before him one by one, and the verdict is, "Neither have I chosen this."

The plans look alright to us; we can see in them no flaw, but he can, and they are set aside. We feel chagrined and ashamed, or would so feel, did we not know that he is wiser than us.

But how our enemies laugh! How they mockingly question, "Where is now your God? Of what avail has been your trust in him, your buoyant faith, your prayers, your confident boasting in him as your 'strength' and your 'fortress?' Has he heard? Has he helped? Has he delievered? Has he saved your paper?"

The test has come that you asserted you could hear: can you? When you can no longer have your paper published as a weekly, not even with the help of your working fund.

Yes! Mr. Scoffer; we can and we will! The God in whom we trust, still lives and he will never no never, no never forsake. We will trust him though he slay us. Laugh on, mock on; the time is near when it will be God's turn to laugh, then the truth and the truth's supporters will be withdrawn from the world. You would be glad to see The Restitution then, but you will not be able to find one, for there will not be a religious paper published anywhere.

And there could be worse things happen than to have The Restitution turned into a monthly magazine. Some things become better when boiled down. Maple sap and fruit juice do. And who knows but that our plan to save The Restitution by raising a Working Fund may not after all be the means in the hands of God of making it an instrument of greater blessing than ever before! Christians in the early history of our country had no papers. The first religious paper in the United States was "The Herald of Gospel Liberty," published by Elias Smith, in 1808 A. D. My father's parents obtained a few copies of it in 1815, and my father thought it was probably the first newspaper he ever saw. They must have taken it after they moved to these then western wilds or had files of it in their possession, for I remember seeing some of its pages up to the time of grandmother's death in 1858.

But if these early Christians did not have papers they had their Bibles, and they read them and lived by them. Men and women do not pray now as they prayed then. They cannot. There is too much to read, too much to distract the mind from God.

A monthly magazine will be more thoroughly read and digested than a weekly, and we shall have more time to devote to the Bible and to God. So though we wanted the dear Restitution to live as a weekly until Jesus comes, let us be thankful that we can have it at all, and do our utmost to keep it alive, putting not the cold chilling notes of hate in our articles, but the warm glowing notes of love.
